Snipers Battle Guardsmen In Newark; Death Toll 16

Governor Takes Over 'City In Rebellion'

COMBINED AP & UPI

NEWARK, N.J. — National guardsmen and police firing rifles and submachine guns battled Negro snipers early today in this riot-torn city of 400,000 which Gov. Richard J. Hughes said is in "open rebellion."

Twelve persons, including a policeman, were shot and killed during the night sending the death toll to 16 as the racial violence went into its fourth straight day and spread to nearby communities.

More than 650 persons have been injured, including at least 60 wounded by gunfire that raged throughout the night in the streets. More than 1,000 persons have been arrested. (See photo on page 18.)

For the first time, National Guard troops used live ammunition in a New Jersey civil disturbance.

SHOWER HELPS

A brisk hour-long shower shortly after dawn and the tough military crackdown brought a relative calm to the city. How long it would last, nobody could say. A few isolated instances of looting were reported later in the morning, but it was not widespread.

Hughes took an unannounced tour of the debris-littered boulevard battlegrounds early today.

Stanley Van Ness, a counsel for Hughes, said that when the governor returned he described the situation as "not worse than yesterday, but still dangerous."

Hughes late yesterday declared a state of emergency that allowed him to assume command. It was not martial law. But it still apparently rankled Mayor Hugh J. Addonizio.

MAYOR IRED

When the mayor arrived at Hughes' command post set up in the Roseville National Guard armory early today, a newsman asked him what he thought of the situation.

"Ask the governor, don't ask me," Addonizio snapped.

Black power leader Stokely Carmichael became angry at newsmen when he arrived in London today because they referred to the Newark disturbances as riots.

"They are not riots," he retorted. "They are rebellions and I think they are likely to go on for quite some time yet."

Although the looting and firebomb destruction during the night was not as widespread as the previous night, it was much more dangerous because of the increasing hit-and-run guerrilla-type attacks by Negro snipers.

Some of the troops and state and local policemen used automatic weapons to spray suspected sniper nests.

In Boston the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People today accepted overwhelmingly an emergency resolution putting much of the blame on Newark city officials

Angry Negro Crowds Eye Police Acts

NEWARK (UPI)—They stood in the rubble across from the riot-scarred 4th Precinct station and cursed Newark police as they watched other Negroes being led inside.

"Look at that," said one of the angry young men. "They've got three little boys. Now, those boys couldn't have done nothing."

"They better not hit one of those boys right now," said another. "I'll kill them from here. Damned cowboy cops ain't whipping any more black men around here. That's all over."

"It don't make any difference," said another. "I got 150 people doing what I say. And we're coming back tonight. And that place ain't going to be here after that."

They stood in groups of threes and fours and they swore new oaths each time a police car or a National Guard truck pulled up with a few more manacled rioters.

On the steps of the station house a group of anxious mothers, some hastily dressed in housecoats, waited to see if their missing youngsters would be brought in.

At a far corner of the building three young girls were waving to reporters to come quickly. "Hey, reporter! Hey, you want a story? You want a story?"

Rails Official Expects Strike At Midnight

Union Leaders Deny Walkout Orders Afoot

WASHINGTON (AP) — The official spokesman for railway management predicted today that a strike against all lines serving the West Coast will start tonight.

J. E. Wolfe said, "I can say with assurance on reliable information that all 22 roads serving the Pacific Coast will be tied up one minute after midnight" by six shopcraft unions.

PLEDGE DEADLINE

Leaders of the unions representing some 137,000 workers refused Thursday to extend their voluntary no-strike pledge after a Senate-House conference recessed Monday without reaching a decision on a bill designed to avert a strike. Union executives later reaffirmed their decision to rescind the pledge as of midnight tonight.

Wolfe told a reporter, "Unless something is done promptly the nation's economy will be brought to a halt quickly."

Wolfe said that although the predicted walkout would hit directly only the western lines, railroads and industry in many parts of the country would inevitably be affected.

NO KNOWLEDGE

An official of one of the unions said he had no knowledge of an impending strike against major lines.

Joseph W. Ramsey, vice president of the AFL-CIO International Association of Machinists, said, "I haven't heard a thing from any of our general managers" and that "everything is silence" at his headquarters here.

Ramsey reaffirmed the opposition of the leadership of the

HAPPY INDIAN

Youth Corps Proves Boon To A Dropout

By BRUCE COLEMAN

A young San Rafael man, who seems as happy as his name, is Benjamin Skippingday, a 19-year-old Chippewa Indian born on White Earth Reservation in Minnesota.

His is the success story of a youth who dropped out of high school, then dropped back in by way of a federal training program.

The six-foot, one-inch Skippingday completed 10th grade in a Minnesota high school, then quit because, as he says, "I didn't like the discipline."

After knocking around either unemployed or working as a dishwasher, he landed a job with the Neighborhood Youth Corps last October as maintenance helper at San Rafael High School District.

He began working 32 hours a week, earning the corps' maximum of $1.30 per hour. The district found him an able learner, conscientious and a hard worker and on July 6 hired him on a permanent basis at $400 monthly, or $2.30 per hour.

This fall he plans to attend San Rafael High School's night adult school to earn his diploma.

Skippingday explained that, when he came to San Rafael last year, he couldn't find any work. He learned of the Youth Corps, which has headquarters at Civic Center, and went to find out what it was all about. Skippingday, unlike some youths who think $1.30 an hour beneath their dignity, was willing to try it as a way to better himself and become a contributing member of society.

"At first I didn't really care for the work, but after awhile things started looking up when there was a possibility I might get full-time employment. When I learned this, it was real en-

Red Rockets Kill 13, Ruin $48 Million In U.S. Planes

DA NANG, Vietnam (UPI)—Communist troops mauled the huge U.S. air base at Da Nang today with rocket barrages fired with deadly accuracy from a nearby mountain.

Officials said the attack killed 13 Americans and wounded 173 others. The rockets turned the base into a holocaust, one of the worst devastations of the war in which a score of aircraft worth an estimated $48 million were destroyed. Three barracks housing 150 men each were demolished.

In an attack almost as audacious, Viet Cong troops crunched into a jail 20 miles south of Da Nang and freed 1,240 prisoners, nearly all of them detained in military sweeps as suspected Communist guerrillas. Most had prisoner-of-war status.

Two American servicemen were killed and six injured when a terrorist mine blew up a tavern about 10 miles from Saigon last night, officials said. Eleven South Vietnamese civilians also were wounded.

North of Da Nang, a Viet Cong battalion lobbed mortar shells into a subsector headquarters near Hue, killing eight government soldiers and wounding 18 other persons, including two U.S. soldiers.

U.S. Navy patrol boats fought a blazing battle with a 120-foot steel-hulled trawler 30 miles south of Da Nang after the drab green ship, which carried no identification marks, failed to respond to orders to halt. The small Navy boats drove the trawler ashore and ripped it apart with machine gun fire. Secondary explosions wracked its hull. U.S. officials said it was evidently running arms to guerrillas in the Da Nang area.

In the air war over North Vietnam, American jets flew 94 missions yesterday against roads, railways, bridges and storage areas. Spokesmen said a Navy A4 Skyhawk was shot down, the 607th U.S. plane lost in combat over the north.

Mideast Shooting Hot Along Suez, Jordan

By U.P. International

Heavy fighting between Israeli and Egyptian planes, tanks and artillery raged today along the Suez Canal cease-fire line for the second consecutive day.

It was the most serious outbreak of fighting since the six-day Arab-Israeli war last month.

Jordanian officials also reported clashes along the cease-fire line with Israel for the first time since the truce on June 10.

Heavy casualties were reported by both Egypt and Israel in the fighting along the canal from near Port Suez at the southern end to Port Said at the northern entrance.

At least 107 persons, including 22 Egyptian civilians, were reported killed or wounded in the two days of air, land and sea attacks. Jordan claimed three more Israeli soldiers were killed in skirmishes Saturday.

As usual, each side blamed the other for violating the cease-fire. And there were conflicting claims on the fighting itself.

Israel said its planes "silenced" Egyptian gun positions and shot down two of four Egyptian MIG-21 jet fighters attacking Israeli positions at two points east of the canal near Port Tewfic. One Israeli Mirage was downed but the pilot rescued, it said.

A UAR communique said three Israeli jets were shot down by Egyptian fighters during the day in two separate

DID CHAIRMAN MAO NOT PAY PHONE BILL?

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. says it has opened a line to Red China but that all it has learned is that there is no Mao Tse-tung in the Shanghai directory.

It is the only direct communication between the United States and China and is open one hour a day.

So far the only conversation has been a West Coast overseas operator saying "Hello" to Shanghai's chief operator.

A spokesman said, "Usually some American newsman asks us to place a call to Chairman Mao Tse-tung and the chief operator in Shanghai replies no Mao Tse-tung is listed."

Surveyor Course Setting Delayed

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI)—A midcourse correction to alter the trajectory of America's Surveyor 4 spacecraft was scheduled today to aim the lunar prospector toward an anticipated rough landing tomorrow on the moon.

The maneuver, first scheduled for last night, was delayed until 7:30 p.m. PDT to achieve the greatest possible accuracy.

Even if Surveyor 4 scored a direct hit on its planned landing site in the 37-mile wide Sinus Medii, or central bay, the spacecraft was in for a rough touch-down. Project manager Benjamin Milwitsky said the site is much rougher than the Ocean of Storms, where Surveyors 1 and 3 landed. He gave Surveyor only a 50-50 chance of landing unscathed.

What's Civil War Shell Doing In Marin Yard?

"With Silver Bells and Artillery Shells and Pretty maids all in a row."

That's not quite right, and young gardener Robert Bronson did not think it quite right, either, when he found a Civil War shell in the yard of a vacant house at Woodside and Oak Spring drives in San Anselmo Tuesday.

Robert, 13, of 62 Surrey Lane, San Rafael, was helping out with a landscape job on the property when he found the shell under about two inches of earth.

He took it home "for a couple of days" and then thought it might be better to report it to police. So he took it back where he found it yesterday and hailed passing San Anselmo Patrolman Morgan Peterson.

Peterson said he heard shaking inside as he drove it to police headquarters. Police took the shell to Hamilton Air Force Base and turned it over to ordnance experts.

The rusty projectile was identified, "almost positively," today by Hamilton ordinance men as a U.S. Hotchkiss percussion type fuse with a black powder filler. This means it was one of the more popular artillery procetiles used during the Civil War. The Hamilton ordinance man said the shell has gone through a gun's bore and been "dud-fired."

Peterson described the shell as 8 inches long and 5 inches around, with a large screw on the nose which might be a detonating device.

The shell may go into an ordinance museum once officers are satisfied it is no longer dangerous.

Wall Street Has Busiest Week Ever

NEW YORK (UPI)—This was the busiest week in the history of the New York Stock Exchange and prices were on the upswing.

Except for features such as the tobacco and steel stocks, however, the advance was far from dramatic. General business news provided a good atmosphere for the rising market, which many analysts now are calling the "traditional summer rally." However, there were enough economic uncertainties to keep many investors on the side of caution.

Perhaps the best news was the jump in auto sales during the first third of July. Considered a major economic barometer, the sales figure cheered those who are looking for improved business before the end of the year.

A prediction of substantial improvement in housing construction for this year and the slowest rate of growth in business inventories in more than two years also elicited the approval of Wall Street bulls.

Clouding this rosy picture however, was the usual stock market nemesis, uncertainty. Washington hints of a possible tax boost was nothing new but still made waves on Wall Street.

There also were strike fears, in the auto industry where the United Auto Workers began negotiations and also in the copper sector where walkouts were threatened for Saturday. Investors also kept an eye on the international scene which, at best, proved shaky.

Activity was dramatic. The trading pace soared to 57,386,715 shares from the 36,811,910 shares traded in the four sessions last week. The figure was almost double the 29,014,770 shares changing hands in the same week a year ago.

Unruh Bides His Time On School Tax Help

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh today counted on a Senate-Assembly conference committee to restore at least part of the $255 million which was stripped from the school finance program by the Senate education committee.

The education committee yesterday cut Unruh's ambitious $375 million program down to the $120 million size Gov. Ronald Reagan says California can afford.

WANTS BILL PASSED

Unruh, D-Inglewood, said he would urge the Senate to pass the amended bill but he served notice he would ask the two house conference committee to draft a bill close to his original proposal.

The measure, passed by the Assembly earlier this week, was sent to the Senate finance committee where it faces another hearing.

In its amended form, the measure is almost identical to a school finance package by Sen. George Miller Jr., D-Martinez, which was passed by the Senate yesterday and sent to the Assembly.

TAX HEARINGS

Meanwhile, the Assembly revenue and taxation committee announced it would begin hearings on Governor Reagan's $1 billion tax increase bill Tuesday night.

Assembly Democrats have demanded cuts of at least $50 million in the tax bill. Reagan contends the measure cannot be cut because it will raise only enough new money to balance the $5.09 billion budget, pay off a $194 million deficit and provide $120 million in increased school aid.

Assembly Republican leader Robert Monagan of Tracy chided Unruh and his fellow Democarts for suggesting the cuts.

Monagan noted that Unruh objected when Reagan used his item veto power to trim the budget by $43.5 million before signing it into law June 30.

"Having tried unsuccessfully to give us a much larger budget, the Democratic leadership is now strangely reluctant to provide a minimum tax bill for a minimum budget," Monagan said.

PLEDGE CITED

Unruh replied that Reagan has promised to cut state spending below the appropriations contained in the budget. He said a $50 million reduction in the tax bill would give the governor "a good mark to shoot at."

As passed by the Assembly, the Unruh school bill would increase state aid to local school districts by $175 million and would have provided $200 million in replacement revenue to permit a cut in property taxes.

But the education committee adopted amendments suggested by its chairman, Sen. Albert S. Rodda, D-Sacramento, to provide $120 million to school districts to be used either for program improvements or property tax relief.

TAX CUTS KILLED

All provisions for mandatory property tax cuts were removed from the bill.

Reagan recently endorsed the Miller proposals and dropped his own school bill which was similar.

DeGaulle Voyaging To Canada

PARIS (UPI) — President Charles de Gaulle was scheduled to begin a 13-day trip to Canada today. Officials said there was little likelihood the French president would see President Johnson.

De Gaulle was scheduled to fly to the northern French province of Brittany this morning to board the cruiser Admiral Colbert for a five-day Atlantic crossing.

Government sources said it was highly doubtful De Gaulle would meet Johnson during his North American stay. And in Washington, a White House spokesman said there were no plans for such a meeting.

De Gaulle hoped to reaffirm France's strong Canadian influence and he will spend most of his time in Canada in the French-speaking provinces.

Only on the last day of his visit will the French president travel to the federal Canadian capital of Ottawa for the one political session of the trip, a meeting with Canadian Prime Minister Lester Pearson.

The Colbert will first call at France's last toehold in North America, the island territories of St. Pierre and Miquelon about 12 miles off the coast of Newfoundland. De Gaulle will spend about nine hours in the French territories July 20.

Treasury Ends Controls On Silver Prices In U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Treasury, claiming success in its crash program of silverless coin production, has decided it will no longer try to keep the price of silver below $1.30 an ounce.

There are enough of the new coins in circulation to facilitate the nation's commerce even if all the old silver-containing coins dropped out of circulation, the department announced yesterday.

Thus, there is no longer any need to keep the price of silver low enough to make it unprofitable to melt down silver coins for their metal content.

Prior to the action, a price of silver above $1.29 an ounce would have made it profitable for people to buy silver dollars, melt them down and sell the silver. A price above $1.38 an ounce would have made the melting of the old silver dimes, quarters and half dollars profitable.

The Treasury announcement yesterday said nearly 8.3 billion silverless dimes and quarters have been produced, compared to an estimated 8.5 billion dimes and quarters in circulation, so it no longer made any difference if the silver coins all disappeared.

The new Kennedy half dollar is not a problem, since it is not so vital for commerce. Furthermore, since the Kennedy half contains only 40 per cent silver, its profitable melting point is $3.39 an ounce, way above that of other silver coins.

STRAW BALLOT PICKS NIXON AS CANDIDATE

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon was voted the strongest Republican presidential candidate for 1968 by 33 of the nation's lieutenant governors.

The straw vote was taken at the national Lieutenant Governors Conference. Thirteen Republicans and 20 Democrats cast ballots.

Members of both parties agreed, without dissent, that President Johnson will get the Democratic nomination.

Republicans picked Michigan Gov. George Romney over Nixon in balloting as the man who would be the GOP standard bearer, while the Democrats predicted Nixon would be nominated.

Budget Adoption Due In Novato

The Novato Unified School District trustees will adopt a publication budget for fiscal 1968 when it meets at 8 p.m. Monday in the district office.

It will also award a contract for the Sinaloa Junior High School. The bids for it were opened Thursday afternoon. All seven bidders were below the state allocation for it, with Martinelli Construction Co. of San Francisco the apparent lowest at $1,157,700.

Other items on the agenda include the bids on the science room remodeling at San Jose Junior High School, a change order on the grading contract for the Sinaloa Junior High School, a report on the drug program and the federally financed language program for educationally handicapped children.

Treasury Ends Controls On Silver Prices In U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Treasury, claiming success in its crash program of silverless coin production, has decided it will no longer try to keep the price of silver below $1.30 an ounce.

There are enough of the new coins in circulation to facilitate the nation's commerce even if all the old silver-containing coins dropped out of circulation, the department announced yesterday.

Thus, there is no longer any need to keep the price of silver low enough to make it unprofitable to melt down silver coins for their metal content.

Prior to the action, a price of silver above $1.29 an ounce would have made it profitable for people to buy silver dollars, melt them down and sell the silver. A price above $1.38 an ounce would have made the melting of the old silver dimes, quarters and half dollars profitable.

The Treasury announcement yesterday said nearly 8.3 billion silverless dimes and quarters have been produced, compared to an estimated 8.5 billion dimes and quarters in circulation, so it no longer made any difference if the silver coins all disappeared.

The new Kennedy half dollar is not a problem, since it is not so vital for commerce. Furthermore, since the Kennedy half contains only 40 per cent silver, its profitable melting point is $3.39 an ounce, way above that of other silver coins.

Union Election At Phone Firm

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A union representation election has been won by the AFL-CIO Communication Workers of America at General Telephone Co.

The National Labor Relations Board announced that CWA tallied 6,822 of the more than 11,000 votes cast in the mail ballot election. The AFL-CIO International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers received 4,168 votes and 321 persons voted for no union. About 350 ballots were challenged.

General Telephone filed a petition with the NLRB asking for the election after its recent merger with the California Water and Telephone Co. The firm's petition asked for a single union to represent about 15,000 workers in the bargaining unit.

No Complaints Yet In Tiburon Marijuana Raid

No complaints have been filed against the six adults and teenage youths arrested in Tiburon for possessing marijuana.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Jerry C. Herman said in Marin Municipal Court yesterday his office would file no complaints against the group "pending further investigation."

Released were Otis Ward, 27; James Cook, 31, Paul William Landin, 24, Donald Carlos Garver, 18, Wesley M. Murrell, 27, all of M-66 Hilarita Housing and Eileen Susan Nelson, 19, of 19 Knoll Road, Apt. D in Mill Valley.

Ward, however, was ordered to appear again Monday after Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr., was told of an outstanding warrant for parole violation in Washington.

Sheriff's deputies were attempting to serve the warrant Thursday night when they arrested the group.

Many Causes For Rioting Cited By Newark Factions

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI)—Anger over alleged police brutality, frustration with housing and school problems, and a general feeling of helplessness on the part of Negroes were advanced Friday as causes for three days of rioting.

Mayor Hugh Addonizio placed the burden of the blame on Negro opposition to a proposed medical school in a slum area. If erected, on a 150-acre site, the hospital would displace 20,000 Negroes from their homes.

The mayor coupled this with what he termed "the situation with the Board of Education," referring to demands by Negroes that a Negro they felt was better qualified be appointed secretary of the Board of Education over a white man supported by the mayor.

Civil rights leaders generally took a different view and charged police brutality, for which they said they would demand a grand jury investigation.

Don Wendell, associate director of the United Community Corp., (UCC), the city's anti-poverty agency, said he will ask the Essex County prosecutor to convene a special grand jury to investigate numerous riot-connected brutality charges.

Wendell said the UCC was calling for the suspension without pay of the two policemen who arrested cab driver John W. Smith, the incident that precipitated the outbreak of violence.

Henry DiSuvero, director of the New Jersey American Civil Liberties Union, charged that Addonizio's opposition to a civilian review board for police and "his failure to take action against police lawlessness" were contributing causes to the events that culminated in the riot.

WAR

placed their 122 millimeter rockets with a surgeon's precision among parked planes and in fuel and ammunition storage areas. The rockets came in five hissing barrages of 10 missiles each from launching sites on a mountain six miles away.

The rockets touched off raging fires in ammunition and fuel stores. Big 500 and 750 pound bombs exploded with thunderous roars. Five of the Americans killed died fighting the fires.

The attack closed the base runways for nine hours.

The Da Nang attack came in the early morning hours when vulnerable barracks were filled with sleeping Americans.

One rocket demolished two barracks and fire gutted another. But most of the 450 GIs in them managed to pile into bunkers before the buildings were hit.

Three big Air Force C130 transports went up in a searing wall of flame along with six or eight Phantom F4C fighter-bombers, and two Marine F8 Crusaders and several helicopters.

"The whole base is just covered with shrapnel," said Air Force Col. Robert Maloh of Coral Gables, Fla., commander of the 366th Tactical Fighter Wing. "Every plane on the field has some kind of hole or another in it."

six unions to wildcat strikes but added, "I can't guarantee what will happen."

Government and industry sources had indicated earlier they thought any strike would be against only a few major lines, rather than all 90 per cent of the nation's railroads involved in the wage dispute.

Speakers Shun Pro-War Side, So, No Session

The Vietnam Summer-Marin, which proposed talks on the Vietnam war to be held before three San Rafael High School government classes on Tuesday, today reported the program was cancelled because a pro-war speaker could not be found.

Michael Oster, Vietnam Summer-Marin member, said that his organization plans to hold the program outside of the high school and also show the U.S. State Department film, "Why Vietnam?"

Summer school principal Wayne D. Boone said the school has no objection to the program but that district policy requires that, if the subject is controversial, that speakers must be adequately represented on each side. The anti-war group, with offices in San Rafael, had proposed to provide two speakers speaking against the war but no rebuttal speaker could be found, Oster said.

Bagley Bill Signed

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — Gov. Ronald Reagan has signed into law AB1340 by Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, which authorizes the Marin County Superior Court to assign the court commissioner the duties of probate commissioner and certain other duties handled by court commissioners in the larger counties.

side of the building in time to see three young Negroes with their hands shackled behind them kicked off the back of a troop carrier by National Guardsmen.

The young men were unable to break their falls with their hands and landed on their sides and backs.

"Take note, soul brothers," said one of the prisoners to the group of Negroes who gathered. "See what they're doing, brothers."

Farther down the street 22-year-old Glen Bobbit bitterly described what he saw early yesterday morning.

"I'll tell you what caused this riot last night," Bobbit said. "There was a lot of people from the project who came down here just out of curiosity. They were trying to stay away from the looting so police wouldn't identify them as such. But they got shot anyway."

"I was standing in a doorway with some friends on Belmonte Street when about a dozen or so cops came by and told us all to get upstairs," Bobbit said.

"My friend said 'Why do we have to go upstairs? This is my house.' Then the cop took a swing at him and my friend ducked and the cop missed. Then the cop pulls his gun and shoots my friend.

"It was so close; I couldn't understand why my friend didn't fall down. Then I realized the cop was shooting blanks.

"Later, after the cops left, we walked down the street and I saw all these people from the project being chased by cops shooting at them. I said, man, why should I run, they're shooting blanks. Then this telephone pole I'm standing next to gets splintered by a bullet. I thought I was losing my mind.

"Then this 16-year-old boy falls down at my feet with a bullet in his shoulder. And a minute later a guy about 19 falls down with a bullet in his ankle. Man, they just came out to see what was going on."

Bobbit said several persons came out to help the injured and then got mad at the police.

"I heard one guy say, 'We ain't going to let them shoot us and not shoot back. Let's go get in our cars and go get whitey."

Hartford Rioting Scene Is Calmer

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI)—Massive patrols of riot-ready police headed off a third consecutive night of violence last night in the racially tense north end neighborhood. A state of emergency had been declared there earlier.

A few minor fires and bottle-tossing incidents were reported but there was nothing that compared with the violence that rocked the ghetto Thursday night as Negro gangs roamed the streets.

Nineteen persons were arrested after a series of minor incidents. Most were booked on breach of peace charges.

Target Area Topics

Marin City Target Area board directors will meet 8 p.m. Monday at the area office, 55 Park Circle, to consider proposed formation of a college scholarship fund for youths in the community. Also on the agenda is a proposal to form a Cub Scout pack.

Joy Riding Plea

A charge of car theft against Gary Allan Myers, 18, of no known address, was dropped in Marin Municipal Court yesterday but he pleaded guilty to the misdemeanor of joy riding. He was held for the California Juvenile Authority.

Condition Is Fair

Stephen Hay, 9, of 2797 Las Gallinas Avenue, Marinwood, remained in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital, where he was admitted Thursday after his bicycle and a school bus collided. He has a broken left wrist and a cut forehead.

RIOTS

for three nights of racial rioting.

William H. Booth, author of the resolution, said the violence was sparked in part by the recent effort by Newark Mayor Addonizio to "appoint an unqualified white man over an exceptionally qualified Negro to a post on the Board of Education in the face of a unified demand from the Negro community."

Booth is chairman of the New York City Commission on Human Rights.

The resolutions said the Newark city administration failed "to take corrective action to meet many of the grave social ills of the Negro community."

The Negro taxicab driver whose arrest touched off three nights of racial rioting in Newark has been released without bail for a hearing on charges of assaulting two police officers.

The driver, John W. Smith, 40, was picked up after, police charged, he tailgated a patrol car and then passed it on the right.

He is also charged with insulting a police officer, and according to authorities, there are seven traffic violations outstanding against him.

When rumors circulated that Smith had been killed, Negroes began hurling rocks at the 4th Precinct station, the first incident in the rioting.

dogfights without suffering any losses. It also reported Egyptian warplanes bombed Israeli positions on the east bank of the canal.

Both sides also claimed destroying or damaging tanks, armored vehicles and artillery during the two days of fighting.

The fighting came as militant Arab leaders huddled for the third day in Cairo to map strategy for the "second round" of the battle against Israel and while the U.N. rushed truce observers to the front.

U.N. truce observers are scheduled to move into positions along the cease-fire line during the day and to begin operations tomorrow.

At the United Nations, the General Assembly passed its second resolution in 10 days last night calling on Israel to drop its annexation of the Jordanian section of Jerusalem.

Assembly delegates worked behind the scenes today to work out some compromise political decision on last month's Middle East war that would let them end their emergency session.

Pakistan and six co-sponsors offered a resolution deploring Israel's refusal to comply with a July 4 anti-annexation draft and repeating the Assembly's order "to rescind all measures already taken to desist forthwith from taking any action which would alter the status of Jerusalem."

The vote was 99-0 with 18 nations abstaining. The vote on the original July 4 resolution condemning Israel's annexation of Jerusalem was 99-0 with 20 abstentions.

The United States abstained both times and Israel refused to participate in the voting.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg said after the vote that although the United States did not accept Israel's annexation, it abstained from voting on the resolution because "the resolution does not fully correspond to our views. . . ."

Drug Furnishing Case To Juvenile Court

The case of Robert H. Grimmer, 19, charged with furnishing a Hamilton Air Force Base minor with dangerous drugs, was referred to juvenile court yesterday by Marin Municipal Court Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr.

Treated For Cuts

Dwight Bishop, 34, of 203 Hillsdale Avenue, Mill Valley, was treated at Marin General Hospital today for facial cuts after the car he was driving reportedly ran into the rear of a car driven by William J. O'Connor, 57, of San Francisco, at 4:05 a.m. on Richardson Bay Bridge.

Missing Girl Home

Ring, Shotgun Among Loot Of Burglars

An $850 man's diamond ring was believed stolen from the top of a clothes washer in the home of Ray Thomson, 32 Dutch Valley Court, San Anselmo, Thomson reported Thursday to sheriff's deputies.

Thomson said the ring disappeared on the July 1-2 weekend.

Eugene E. Arenander reported Tuesday that a double barrel shotgun was stolen from a cabin, Ocean Roar, one mile south of Tomales on Highway 1. The property, under care of Arenander, is owned by a man named Whittorff of Oakland.

While picnicking Wednesday in Samuel P. Taylor State Park, Ernest A. Eberitzsch of San Leandro reported that someone stole his wife's straw purse from their car parked 25 feet from them. Missing were $77 in bills, several credit cards and a check book. The theft was reported at 4:20 p.m.

James M. Malone, 20, of El Cerrito, reported at 8 p.m., Wednesday, that, while he and his friend, David M. McCall, 18, of Berkeley, were surfing at 8 p.m. Wednesday, someone stole a pair of $15 surfboard racks from his car. Also stolen from the car: McCall's wallet containing $1, his glasses, keys, driver's license and credit cards.

Transit Bills' Fate Is Dim In Senate

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — Two bills designed to give a double shot in the arm to financing of local rapid transit operations have been approved by the state Assembly with no votes to spare.

And they face an uncertain future in the Senate transportation committee where the chairman, Sen. Randolph Collier, D-Yreka, doesn't believe in diverting any money from freeway and highway construction.

The bills approved in the Assembly were AB2092 by Assemblyman Frank Lanterman, R-La Canada, and AB1290 by Assemblyman John F. Foran, D-San Francisco

Lanterman's bill would impose the state sales tax on gasoline sales, with the proceeds to go into a transportation fund for cities and counties. Those with transit district would use the money for this purpose; those without districts could use the new money to build streets and highways.

Foran's bill would increase the "in lieu" tax for automobile registrations from the present 2 per cent to 2.5 per cent, with money from this to go into a transportation fund with roughly the same purposes as under the Lanterman bill. The Foran bill would permit transit districts to issue revenue bonds to be repaid from the new tax revenues.

The 1963 act which increased the gasoline tax by 1 cent to provide new funds for city streets and county roads permitted counties to increase their "in lieu" tax on motor vehicle registration, which is paid in lieu of local property taxes. But only one county, San Mateo, elected to do so and this caused such a hassle the plan was dropped after one year. New money under the 1963 act would have gone to help finance rapid transit.

The Lanterman bill met heavy objections from assemblymen who felt it was wrong to charge sales tax on the selling price of gasoline, which already includes state and federal gasoline taxes.

Black Point Fund Event Is Planned

Sale committee members named were Anita Miller, publicity, Barbara Rucker, Edna Nolan, Naomi Hobbs and Mildred Sutton.

The club also decided to join the Marin Federation of Improvement Clubs and will send a member to the August federation meeting.

Woman On Mend

Shirleen Malmquist, 24, of 1330 Fourth Street, San Rafael, was reported improved but still in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital, where she was admitted Monday with skull, jaw and rib fractures reportedly received in a fall from her window. She is no longer in the intensive care unit.

couraging because it made me want to stick with it."

Another reason we put him on, related John A. Thomson, district director of maintenance, operation and transportation, is that he worked so well with the rest of the men.

YOUTH 'BLOSSOMS'

Thomson also said Skippingday "blossomed" during the time he has been working for the district. "He was very shy and withdrawn and could hardly say a word when he came. Now he jokes and laughs and talks to everybody."

Skippingday works in all branches of maintenance including electricity, plumbing and carpentry and yesterday was sawing planks of wood at the district maintenance yard, then helping fasten them to an old flatbed truck being reconditioned.

The Neighborhood Youth Corps operates with federal and county funds under the Department of Labor. It provides jobs for 16 to 22-year-olds, boys and girls, who are placed only with tax-supported agencies or non-profit organizations.

The public agency benefits by the youth's work, the youth gets training and a little pay while he learns and the federal government picks up the $1.30 per hour tab.

In the 40 job sites in Marin, youths work at such things as helping rangers at Muir Woods National Monument, at the Boys Club of Southern Marin in Marin City and at the Tiburon Marine Laboratory.

The program started a year ago June in Marin and currently has 120 youths in its summer program here, 20 in its "out of school" (drop-out) program of which Skippingday was a part until July 6. There is a third category called "in school" which had about 40 enrollees last September. This last does not function during the summer, said James E. McKenna, Youth Corps County coordinator.

ABOUT THAT NAME?

Asked why he is so happy-go-lucky, Skippingday merely laughed. Asked about his name, he explained it was formerly Skip-in-the-Day which his father still uses. "I changed it for convenience at school because it was too many names." Skippingday resides at 819 Mission Street.

"We call everybody by our first names," said fellow worker Richard Brellenthin. "After all, Skippingday is almost as bad as my last name."

Rustlers Hit West Marin

A six-month-old white-faced heifer was shot, its throat slit, then dragged to a roadway and abandoned in what sheriff's deputies describe as "the boldest attempt of rustling in Northwest Marin" in recent years.

Ray J. Valconesi, employee at Cheda Ranch in Tocoloma, reported Wednesday to Sheriff's deputies that the animal was found beside Sir Francis Drake Boulevard near the ranch which is owned by Arnold T. Dolcini Jr. of Petaluma. He said the heifer was killed in the pasture the previous evening and probably abandoned because of traffic along the road. The animal had been dragged through a fence, he said.

Although several rustling cases have been reported in Northwest Marin in the past several months, deputies said, this is by far the boldest attempt being carried out on a relatively heavily trafficked route.

Rear-End Collision Injures Sausalitan

Mrs. Margot Davis, 38, of 16 Buchanan Drive, Sausalito, was treated yesterday at Marin General Hospital after she complained of back pain following a two-car rear-end accident at 4 p.m. at Napa Street and Bridgeway in Sausalito.

Police said the car driven by Mrs. Davis' husband, Duane Davis, was hit from the rear by a car driven by Jerome Fuetsch of 17 Corte Ramon, Greenbrae.

Union Closes Copper Firms In Walkout

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

The nation's copper industry was virtually shut down today after contract negotiations affecting about 37,000 union members broke down.

The Big Four of the copper industry—Kennecott, Phelps-Dodge, Anaconda, and American Smelting and Refining and numerous smaller western copper producers all were affected. Union officials called it "an orderly shutdown."

More than 80 per cent of the workers are with the United Steelworkers of America, which recently merged with the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers. Strikers included production, maintenance, clerical and technical workers.

Walter Maggiolo of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service announced the breakdown Friday in negotiations.

Maggiolo said mediation teams would meet separately with union and management negotiators before talks resume.

Details of various contract proposals have not been revealed.

Many Causes For Rioting Cited By Newark Factions

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI)—Anger over alleged police brutality, frustration with housing and school problems, and a general feeling of helplessness on the part of Negroes were advanced Friday as causes for three days of rioting.

Mayor Hugh Addonizio placed the burden of the blame on Negro opposition to a proposed medical school in a slum area. If erected, on a 150-acre site, the hospital would displace 20,000 Negroes from their homes.

The mayor coupled this with what he termed "the situation with the Board of Education," referring to demands by Negroes that a Negro they felt was better qualified be appointed secretary of the Board of Education over a white man supported by the mayor.

Civil rights leaders generally took a different view and charged police brutality, for which they said they would demand a grand jury investigation.

Don Wendell, associate director of the United Community Corp., (UCC), the city's anti-poverty agency, said he will ask the Essex County prosecutor to convene a special grand jury to investigate numerous riot-connected brutality charges.

Wendell said the UCC was calling for the suspension without pay of the two policemen who arrested cab driver John W. Smith, the incident that precipitated the outbreak of violence.

Henry DiSuvero, director of the New Jersey American Civil Liberties Union, charged that Addonizio's opposition to a civilian review board for police and "his failure to take action against police lawlessness" were contributing causes to the events that culminated in the riot.

placed their 122 millimeter rockets with a surgeon's precision among parked planes and in fuel and ammunition storage areas. The rockets came in five hissing barrages of 10 missiles each from launching sites on a mountain six miles away.

The rockets touched off raging fires in ammunition and fuel stores. Big 500 and 750 pound bombs exploded with thunderous roars. Five of the Americans killed died fighting the fires.

The attack closed the base runways for nine hours.

The Da Nang attack came in the early morning hours when vulnerable barracks were filled with sleeping Americans.

One rocket demolished two barracks and fire gutted another. But most of the 450 GIs in them managed to pile into bunkers before the buildings were hit.

Three big Air Force C130 transports went up in a searing wall of flame along with six or eight Phantom F4C fighter-bombers, and two Marine F8 Crusaders and several helicopters.

"The whole base is just covered with shrapnel," said Air Force Col. Robert Maloh of Coral Gables, Fla., commander of the 366th Tactical Fighter Wing. "Every plane on the field has some kind of hole or another in it."

six unions to wildcat strikes but added, "I can't guarantee what will happen."

Government and industry sources had indicated earlier they thought any strike would be against only a few major lines, rather than all 90 per cent of the nation's railroads involved in the wage dispute.

Speakers Shun Pro-War Side, So, No Session

The Vietnam Summer-Marin, which proposed talks on the Vietnam war to be held before three San Rafael High School government classes on Tuesday, today reported the program was cancelled because a pro-war speaker could not be found.

Michael Oster, Vietnam Summer-Marin member, said that his organization plans to hold the program outside of the high school and also show the U.S. State Department film, "Why Vietnam?"

Summer school principal Wayne D. Boone said the school has no objection to the program but that district policy requires that, if the subject is controversial, that speakers must be adequately represented on each side. The anti-war group, with offices in San Rafael, had proposed to provide two speakers speaking against the war but no rebuttal speaker could be found, Oster said.

Bagley Bill Signed

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — Gov. Ronald Reagan has signed into law AB1340 by Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, which authorizes the Marin County Superior Court to assign the court commissioner the duties of probate commissioner and certain other duties handled by court commissioners in the larger counties.

side of the building in time to see three young Negroes with their hands shackled behind them kicked off the back of a troop carrier by National Guardsmen.

The young men were unable to break their falls with their hands and landed on their sides and backs.

"Take note, soul brothers," said one of the prisoners to the group of Negroes who gathered. "See what they're doing, brothers."

Farther down the street 22-year-old Glen Bobbit bitterly described what he saw early yesterday morning.

"I'll tell you what caused this riot last night," Bobbit said. "There was a lot of people from the project who came down here just out of curiosity. They were trying to stay away from the looting so police wouldn't identify them as such. But they got shot anyway."

"I was standing in a doorway with some friends on Belmonte Street when about a dozen or so cops came by and told us all to get upstairs," Bobbit said.

"My friend said 'Why do we have to go upstairs? This is my house.' Then the cop took a swing at him and my friend ducked and the cop missed. Then the cop pulls his gun and shoots my friend.

"It was so close; I couldn't understand why my friend didn't fall down. Then I realized the cop was shooting blanks.

"Later, after the cops left, we walked down the street and I saw all these people from the project being chased by cops shooting at them. I said, man, why should I run, they're shooting blanks. Then this telephone pole I'm standing next to gets splintered by a bullet. I thought I was losing my mind.

"Then this 16-year-old boy falls down at my feet with a bullet in his shoulder. And a minute later a guy about 19 falls down with a bullet in his ankle. Man, they just came out to see what was going on."

Bobbit said several persons came out to help the injured and then got mad at the police.

"I heard one guy say, 'We ain't going to let them shoot us and not shoot back. Let's go get in our cars and go get whitey."

Hartford Rioting Scene Is Calmer

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI)—Massive patrols of riot-ready police headed off a third consecutive night of violence last night in the racially tense north end neighborhood. A state of emergency had been declared there earlier.

A few minor fires and bottle-tossing incidents were reported but there was nothing that compared with the violence that rocked the ghetto Thursday night as Negro gangs roamed the streets.

Nineteen persons were arrested after a series of minor incidents. Most were booked on breach of peace charges.

Target Area Topics

Marin City Target Area board directors will meet 8 p.m. Monday at the area office, 55 Park Circle, to consider proposed formation of a college scholarship fund for youths in the community. Also on the agenda is a proposal to form a Cub Scout pack.

Joy Riding Plea

A charge of car theft against Gary Allan Myers, 18, of no known address, was dropped in Marin Municipal Court yesterday but he pleaded guilty to the misdemeanor of joy riding. He was held for the California Juvenile Authority.

Condition Is Fair

Stephen Hay, 9, of 2797 Las Gallinas Avenue, Marinwood, remained in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital, where he was admitted Thursday after his bicycle and a school bus collided. He has a broken left wrist and a cut forehead.

for three nights of racial rioting.

William H. Booth, author of the resolution, said the violence was sparked in part by the recent effort by Newark Mayor Addonizio to "appoint an unqualified white man over an exceptionally qualified Negro to a post on the Board of Education in the face of a unified demand from the Negro community."

Booth is chairman of the New York City Commission on Human Rights.

The resolutions said the Newark city administration failed "to take corrective action to meet many of the grave social ills of the Negro community."

The Negro taxicab driver whose arrest touched off three nights of racial rioting in Newark has been released without bail for a hearing on charges of assaulting two police officers.

The driver, John W. Smith, 40, was picked up after, police charged, he tailgated a patrol car and then passed it on the right.

He is also charged with insulting a police officer, and according to authorities, there are seven traffic violations outstanding against him.

When rumors circulated that Smith had been killed, Negroes began hurling rocks at the 4th Precinct station, the first incident in the rioting.

dogfights without suffering any losses. It also reported Egyptian warplanes bombed Israeli positions on the east bank of the canal.

Both sides also claimed destroying or damaging tanks, armored vehicles and artillery during the two days of fighting.

The fighting came as militant Arab leaders huddled for the third day in Cairo to map strategy for the "second round" of the battle against Israel and while the U.N. rushed truce observers to the front.

U.N. truce observers are scheduled to move into positions along the cease-fire line during the day and to begin operations tomorrow.

At the United Nations, the General Assembly passed its second resolution in 10 days last night calling on Israel to drop its annexation of the Jordanian section of Jerusalem.

Assembly delegates worked behind the scenes today to work out some compromise political decision on last month's Middle East war that would let them end their emergency session.

Pakistan and six co-sponsors offered a resolution deploring Israel's refusal to comply with a July 4 anti-annexation draft and repeating the Assembly's order "to rescind all measures already taken to desist forthwith from taking any action which would alter the status of Jerusalem."

The vote was 99-0 with 18 nations abstaining. The vote on the original July 4 resolution condemning Israel's annexation of Jerusalem was 99-0 with 20 abstentions.

The United States abstained both times and Israel refused to participate in the voting.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg said after the vote that although the United States did not accept Israel's annexation, it abstained from voting on the resolution because "the resolution does not fully correspond to our views. . . ."

Drug Furnishing Case To Juvenile Court

The case of Robert H. Grimmer, 19, charged with furnishing a Hamilton Air Force Base minor with dangerous drugs, was referred to juvenile court yesterday by Marin Municipal Court Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr.

Ring, Shotgun Among Loot Of Burglars

An $850 man's diamond ring was believed stolen from the top of a clothes washer in the home of Ray Thomson, 32 Dutch Valley Court, San Anselmo, Thomson reported Thursday to sheriff's deputies.

Thomson said the ring disappeared on the July 1-2 weekend.

Eugene E. Arenander reported Tuesday that a double barrel shotgun was stolen from a cabin, Ocean Roar, one mile south of Tomales on Highway 1. The property, under care of Arenander, is owned by a man named Whittorff of Oakland.

While picnicking Wednesday in Samuel P. Taylor State Park, Ernest A. Eberitzsch of San Leandro reported that someone stole his wife's straw purse from their car parked 25 feet from them. Missing were $77 in bills, several credit cards and a check book. The theft was reported at 4:20 p.m.

James M. Malone, 20, of El Cerrito, reported at 8 p.m., Wednesday, that, while he and his friend, David M. McCall, 18, of Berkeley, were surfing at 8 p.m. Wednesday, someone stole a pair of $15 surfboard racks from his car. Also stolen from the car: McCall's wallet containing $1, his glasses, keys, driver's license and credit cards.

Transit Bills' Fate Is Dim In Senate

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — Two bills designed to give a double shot in the arm to financing of local rapid transit operations have been approved by the state Assembly with no votes to spare.

And they face an uncertain future in the Senate transportation committee where the chairman, Sen. Randolph Collier, D-Yreka, doesn't believe in diverting any money from freeway and highway construction.

The bills approved in the Assembly were AB2092 by Assemblyman Frank Lanterman, R-La Canada, and AB1290 by Assemblyman John F. Foran, D-San Francisco

Lanterman's bill would impose the state sales tax on gasoline sales, with the proceeds to go into a transportation fund for cities and counties. Those with transit district would use the money for this purpose; those without districts could use the new money to build streets and highways.

Foran's bill would increase the "in lieu" tax for automobile registrations from the present 2 per cent to 2.5 per cent, with money from this to go into a transportation fund with roughly the same purposes as under the Lanterman bill. The Foran bill would permit transit districts to issue revenue bonds to be repaid from the new tax revenues.

The 1963 act which increased the gasoline tax by 1 cent to provide new funds for city streets and county roads permitted counties to increase their "in lieu" tax on motor vehicle registration, which is paid in lieu of local property taxes. But only one county, San Mateo, elected to do so and this caused such a hassle the plan was dropped after one year. New money under the 1963 act would have gone to help finance rapid transit.

The Lanterman bill met heavy objections from assemblymen who felt it was wrong to charge sales tax on the selling price of gasoline, which already includes state and federal gasoline taxes.

Black Point Fund Event Is Planned

The Black Point Improvement Club last night decided to hold a rummage sale this fall for the club building fund.

Sale committee members named were Anita Miller, publicity, Barbara Rucker, Edna Nolan, Naomi Hobbs and Mildred Sutton.

The club also decided to join the Marin Federation of Improvement Clubs and will send a member to the August federation meeting.

Earl Leonhard was named chairman of the water committee.

Woman On Mend

Shirleen Malmquist, 24, of 1330 Fourth Street, San Rafael, was reported improved but still in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital, where she was admitted Monday with skull, jaw and rib fractures reportedly received in a fall from her window. She is no longer in the intensive care unit.

couraging because it made me want to stick with it."

Another reason we put him on, related John A. Thomson, district director of maintenance, operation and transportation, is that he worked so well with the rest of the men.

YOUTH 'BLOSSOMS'

Thomson also said Skippingday "blossomed" during the time he has been working for the district. "He was very shy and withdrawn and could hardly say a word when he came. Now he jokes and laughs and talks to everybody."

Skippingday works in all branches of maintenance including electricity, plumbing and carpentry and yesterday was sawing planks of wood at the district maintenance yard, then helping fasten them to an old flatbed truck being reconditioned.

The Neighborhood Youth Corps operates with federal and county funds under the Department of Labor. It provides jobs for 16 to 22-year-olds, boys and girls, who are placed only with tax-supported agencies or non-profit organizations.

The public agency benefits by the youth's work, the youth gets training and a little pay while he learns and the federal government picks up the $1.30 per hour tab.

In the 40 job sites in Marin, youths work at such things as helping rangers at Muir Woods National Monument, at the Boys Club of Southern Marin in Marin City and at the Tiburon Marine Laboratory.

The program started a year ago June in Marin and currently has 120 youths in its summer program here, 20 in its "out of school" (drop-out) program of which Skippingday was a part until July 6. There is a third category called "in school" which had about 40 enrollees last September. This last does not function during the summer, said James E. McKenna, Youth Corps County coordinator.

ABOUT THAT NAME?

Asked why he is so happy-go-lucky, Skippingday merely laughed. Asked about his name, he explained it was formerly Skip-in-the-Day which his father still uses. "I changed it for convenience at school because it was too many names." Skippingday resides at 819 Mission Street.

"We call everybody by our first names," said fellow worker Richard Brellenthin. "After all, Skippingday is almost as bad as my last name."

Rustlers Hit West Marin

A six-month-old white-faced heifer was shot, its throat slit, then dragged to a roadway and abandoned in what sheriff's deputies describe as "the boldest attempt of rustling in Northwest Marin" in recent years.

Ray J. Valconesi, employee at Cheda Ranch in Tocoloma, reported Wednesday to Sheriff's deputies that the animal was found beside Sir Francis Drake Boulevard near the ranch which is owned by Arnold T. Dolcini Jr. of Petaluma. He said the heifer was killed in the pasture the previous evening and probably abandoned because of traffic along the road. The animal had been dragged through a fence, he said.

Although several rustling cases have been reported in Northwest Marin in the past several months, deputies said, this is by far the boldest attempt being carried out on a relatively heavily trafficked route.

Rear-End Collision Injures Sausalitan

Mrs. Margot Davis, 38, of 16 Buchanan Drive, Sausalito, was treated yesterday at Marin General Hospital after she complained of back pain following a two-car rear-end accident at 4 p.m. at Napa Street and Bridgeway in Sausalito.

Police said the car driven by Mrs. Davis' husband, Duane Davis, was hit from the rear by a car driven by Jerome Fuetsch of 17 Corte Ramon, Greenbrae.

Union Closes Copper Firms In Walkout

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

The nation's copper industry was virtually shut down today after contract negotiations affecting about 37,000 union members broke down.

The Big Four of the copper industry—Kennecott, Phelps-Dodge, Anaconda, and American Smelting and Refining and numerous smaller western copper producers all were affected. Union officials called it "an orderly shutdown."

More than 80 per cent of the workers are with the United Steelworkers of America, which recently merged with the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers. Strikers included production, maintenance, clerical and technical workers.

Walter Maggiolo of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service announced the breakdown Friday in negotiations.

Maggiolo said mediation teams would meet separately with union and management negotiators before talks resume.

Details of various contract proposals have not been revealed.

SEW SIMPLE

Start At Hemline Of Skirt To Retain Shape And Curve

By EUNICE FARMER

Is it definitely wrong to sew a skirt from the waist down? Recently, I read a sewing book that said skirts should be sewn from the hem up, why? — MRS. E.M.

DEAR MRS. E.M.:

Because of the curve at the hipline, it is better to sew a skirt from the hem up. This keeps the entire skirt from becoming off-grain, should you stretch it out of shape at the curve.

Today, however, I recommend pinning seams instead of basting. If you place the pins horizontal to the vertical seamline, and pin frequently enough, the fabric cannot possibly slip. Therefore, the directional stitching is not nearly as important.

DEAR EUNICE FARMER:

I have a permanent knife-pleated, Dacron-polyester skirt that needs shortening. How can I do this and still have the pleats as sharp as they were originally? — MRS. M.K.

DEAR MRS. M.K.:

My best advice is to shorten this type of skirt at the waistline, not at the lower edge because it would be impossible to achieve the same sharp pleated hem. Place a strip of transparent tape just below cutting line to hold the pleats in place so it will be simple to replace the waistband.

Mrs. A. R. Williams, Roanoke, Va., is this week's winner of a Tailor Trix pressing board for her following suggestion.

Since laminated materials won't feed through the sewing machine, I have devised a rather easy way to machine stitch seams. Get a roll of adding machine paper; fold it in half lengthwise. With your ruler, mark ¾ inch from the folded edge, slip the outer edges of your garment into this fold. You will find the machine stitching will be on the exact ⅝ inch seamline when completed, and it's so simple to pull the paper off the stitching line.

DEAR EUNICE FARMER:

My 15-year-old daughter has just begun sewing. Since she is such a beginner, I think she should start out with old material and try to make something for herself out of it. If she ruins it, we won't be out a lot of money.

She says if she can't make something new like the other kids are doing, she doesn't want to sew at all. I don't want to discourage her, and yet I don't agree with her. What is your advice? — MRS. S.E.R.

DEAR MRS. S.E.R.:

First, do anything you can to encourage your daughter to enjoy and love this wonderful hobby. You can get some very attractive fabric without spending a fortune. Put yourself in the same position; she is willing to work hard but wants something worthwhile when she is finished. I know I wouldn't have the same interest if I had to rip apart something old first.

I have always encouraged my students to use the best fabric they can afford. It takes the same amount of time and effort. Why not really have something when you are finishsd.

A little tip for all mothers of teen-age girls who sew, and one that worked for me is this. I let my girls choose what they wanted; they're the ones who have to wear it (and let's face it, our taste is bound to be different because of the age difference). They had to pay for the initial purchase from their allowance. When they completed the garment, I paid them back.

In this way, it encouraged them to finish a garment, they were learning to enjoy making their own clothes, and it was less expensive than buying them. Last fall my daughter made a coat to take to college. The fabric cost about $15 per yard, but you should see the coat. It sure made the ready-made ones costing $40 look ordinary and cheap. Try these ideas; I know they'll work!

One of the biggest trends of the season was seen in the Ben Reig fall collection shown in New York. The cape costume here combines red and blue in a plaid pattern with a solid blue hood that's detachable. (UPI photo)

WOMEN IRRITATE

Usefulness Comes First In Purchasing Pots And Pans

By JEANNE LESEM

NEW YORK (UPI)—Fred Bridge pans women on how they purchase kitchen utensils. The men win the pats.

Bridge is owner of a remarkable home kitchen and restaurant supply shop in New York and is an autocratic type who has no patience with women's shopping habits as they relate to kitchenware.

"Men are fabulous customers. Women are impossible," Bridge said in an interview. "Men ask questions and accept your answers. Women give you an argument."

Women who ask for matched sets of pots and pans irritate him.

"THEY WANT IT to cook well and be pretty. I tell them it should cook well — never mind the pretty."

Outfitting a home kitchen down to the last paring knife could easily be expensive, if only because women who enjoy cooking may be tempted into impulse buying from a stock that Bridge estimates in the thousands of items.

But before they buy anything, most customers are asked the use they plan for the utensil. Bridge, a former Army cook and still a cooking buff, has an encyclopedic knowledge of the utensils on hand. Often he urges a customer to take a different article, better suited to the cook's purpose.

FOR WOMEN who don't know where to start in outfitting a kitchen, Bridge keeps a list of 80 to 90 items that he considers basic for a household of two.

The list includes three covered saucepans plus a double boiler, one covered and one uncovered frying pan, an inexpensive plate-like device that makes a saucepan substitute for a double boiler, two wire whisks, meat and oven thermometers, a Dutch oven and one 1½-quart covered baking dish.

Bridge stocks luxury items such as tin-lined copper salmon poacher that weighs 100 pounds and is tagged at $250, along with thousands of less expensive articles such as wooden-handled ice picks and tartelette pans like doll-sized pie tins in decorative shapes (some for only a dime apiece).

Even the ceiling is festooned with pots and pans. Assorted sizes of old-fashioned milk cans dangle in chains like a modern mobile.

WHAT DO PEOPLE do with milk cans these days?

"Paint 'em and make 'em into lamps," said a clerk.

The present boom in home-cooking as a hobby is so great that many of his out-of-town orders are shipped by air, said Bridge, who said the boom largely is due to the low quality and high prices of restaurant meals.

He said he recently shipped 25 omelet pans by air to a Tulsa, Okla., country club. But perhaps his most unusual air shipment went last year to a restaurant in Papeete, Tahiti.

The shipment consisted of 10-dozen French sea shells, the kind used for coquilles St. Jacques, or scallops in wine and cream sauce.

Poor Shopping Practices Raise Family Expenses

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI)—Part of the high cost of feeding the family lies directly with thoughtless shopping habits.

Extension service specialists at the University of Nebraska say that the highest single cost item in the retail merchandising of food is shopliting and pilfering. This national problem can account for as much as two per cent of a store's total product turnover, says Mrs. Clara W. Leopold, of the university. Also adding to food costs are those shoppers guilty of scattering foods onto shelves where they don't belong, handling fresh fruits and vegetables carelessly and adding to the spoilage problem, and sampling products right from the shelves.

Marin Sailors Crewing For Cup Semifinals At Newport

By MOLLY MARIN

Three Marin women are members of the crew which will represent St. Francis Yacht Club at the semifinal series for the Adams Cup at Newport Harbor Yacht Club in Southern California July 29-30. They are Mrs. Peter Siewart, the skipper, of Tiburon, Mrs. E. H. De Frees of Tiburon, and Mrs. Peter Anderson of Mill Valley. Fourth member of the team is Mrs. Frank Jordan of Peidmont. They will go south a week ahead of the races to get used to conditions at Newport where the yachts will race in the ocean. They will compete against two crews from Southern California and an all-girl crew from Richmond Yacht Club, skippered by Mrs. Gordon Nash of El Cerrito. The winning skipper and crew will go on to the Women's North American sailing championships in Rochester, N. Y. Last year the finals were hosted by San Francisco Yacht Club, Belvedere.

MR. AND MRS. ALAN CONNER will be hosts at a small dinner party tonight at their home in Sausalito as a welcome back to Marin for Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Fickert and their children, Fred, Kathie and Marsha. Former residents of Sausalito, the Fickerts have been living on their ranch near Tehachapi and are now residing in Tiburon.

BOOK BRIEFING — San Rafael Patrolman Gilbert Freitas receives a list of overdue books from Vivian Smith, the city's head librarian. He and his fellow police officers often help retrieve books from delinquent borrowers.

BADGES BRING 'EM BACK

Marin Librarians Using Police To Recover Long-Overdue Books

By JIM BREWER

When a police officer, on duty and in full uniform, goes to a residence to retrieve a long overdue library book, chances are pretty good he'll get it.

This observation yesterday from San Rafael's head librarian, Vivian Smith, coupled with the fact that failure to return a book can be classified as petty theft, explains why policemen in San Rafael, and several other cities in the county, have been given secondary tasks as "deputy librarians."

The reason for police participation in book-hunting, according to Mrs. Smith, is that these volumes are public property. But more importantly, she said, many are out of print and their return is essential to the maintenance of the library's collection.

More than $300 worth of books are more than three months overdue at the San Rafael Library now, Mrs. Smith reported. If returns through police assistance keep with trends over the past three years, she said, the library can expect 75 per cent back with the rest officially accounted for as lost.

"The lost report lets us know where we stand so we can order replacements if possible, and bill the borrower for loss," she explained.

Police officers say they don't particularly like chasing down books but as one expressed it: "Somebody's got to do it."

San Rafael Police Lt. Ray Bleasdale said the time necessary for collection amounts to no more than a half-hour. "The officer spends most of that time in his car so it doesn't take him away in case of an emergency," he added.

The officer whose beat covers the area where a missing book is reported in San Rafael is usually instructed to retrieve it and serve notice of a $1 fine, according to Bleasdale.

San Anselmo, Mill Valley and Larkspur police cooperate in helping their city libraries. Sausalito police department reports it has never been asked to aid its library.

The county library has a full-time clerk, deputized by the sheriff, who, as part of his weekly routine, tracks down long-overdue books from the library's branches in incorporated and unincorporated areas.

Some citizens have complained about police involvement in library matters, Mrs. Smith reported, but the practice usually "saves more than $500 worth of books each year."

State Board Pleads With U.S. To Save Computers

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The state Board of Education urged the U.S. commissioner of education to save the nation's leading educational computer center.

The computer center—located in Sacramento—provides immediate information to school officials and policymakers on California education. It is being developed as a pilot project for the entire nation.

Known as the California Total Educational Information System, the center cost the U.S. Office of Education $3 million for its design and the first two years of operation.

NO MORE CASH

The third year of operation is expected to cost $400,000, but federal officials have declared no more funds are available for the project. If the center is continued through the third year, it would then be absorbed by the State Department of Education.

The Board of Education unanimously passed a resolution asking the U.S. Education Commissioner to "find ways and means" of funding the computer center's third year.

APPOINTIVE CHIEF

In other action the board approved—in principle— a report on reorganization of the state education system, including an appointive state school chief.

The board also accepted the recommendation of Arthur D. Little Inc. that Dr. Conrad Briner of the Claremont Graduate School become coordinator of departmental reorganization.

Financing of the reorganization is expected to come from federal funds. Little Co. had estimated about $95,000 would be needed.

The board members made it clear they were adopting the report in principle only and were not necessarily committed to all proposals. Some portions of the report have been disapproved by the Department of Education.

Dr. Briner will work three and a half days a week on coordinating reorganization of those portions of the Little report that can be implemented without changing existing laws or the state constitution.

Powder Puff Derby Won By Solo Pilot

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Judy Wagner, a veteran of six previous all-woman transcontinental air races, was officially named the winner yesterday of the 21st annual Powder Puff Derby.

Mrs. Wagner, of Palos Verdes Estates, soloed her Beechcraft Bonanza K35 from Atlantic City, N.J., to Torrance, Calif., to amass 11.01671 points in the handicap 2,494-mile air race.

She was presented with the first place trophy and a $1,400 check last night at ceremonies at the Los Angeles International Airport Marina. Mrs. Wagner, the wife of Dr. Ellis O. Wagner, has logged 2,700 hours flying time and holds a commercial pilot's license with an instrument rating.

The derby began last Monday at New Jersey's Bader Field and ended Thursday at Torrance Airport. Only 53 of the 71 entrants completed the trip.

Seven of the top ten winners were Californians. Runners-up in order were: Miss Frances Bera, Long Beach; Mrs. Tig Pennock, Irvine; Mrs. Gini Richardson, Yakima, Wash.; Mrs. Margaret Callaway, San Pedro; Miss Margaret Mead, Goleta; Mrs. Jean Rose, Palos Verdes Estates; Mrs. Mary Ann Noah, Shawnee Mission, Kan.; Mrs. Lois Miles, Woodland Hills, and Mrs. Betty Curran, Everett, Wash.

Car Tips Over, Teeners Injured

Two 16-year-old Marin drivers and their passengers received minor injuries yesterday when the cars they were driving went out of control and rolled over.

Gary Campbell, 16, of 267 Oak Manor Drive, Fairfax, was cited by California Highway Patrolman for failure to drive on the right half of the roadway after his car overturned at about 12:35 p.m. on the Olema-Bolinas Road near Upper Road. Campbell and his passenger, Terrence M. Gosliner, 16, of 859 Butterfield Road, San Anselmo, saw their own doctors.

Driver Sharon I. George, 16, and her passenger, Janel Holiday, 3, both of 43 Cottonwood Drive, San Rafael, also went to their own physicians after Miss George's car, which she was driving at about 1:15 p.m. on the Point Reyes-Petaluma Road three miles north of Novato Boulevard, went out of control and rolled over.

Chemicals Ruled Out In Mount Tam Death

Marin County Coroner Donovan O. Cooke has ruled out the possibility of cleaning chemicals as an asphyxiant in the June 11 death of Terrence J. McGrath, 20, of San Francisco on Mount Tamalpais.

Cooke said yesterday, after giving his final report on the death, attributing it to "asphyxiation probably related to LSD ingestion," that he would check out the possibility of cleaning fluid fumes in the bag. He reported later in the day that the bag had not been recently cleaned.

Education Board's Committees Off

The three committees of the Marin County Board of Education will not meet Monday night as planned, according to Asst. County Supt. of Schools Stanley H. Friese.

Since there is no business requiring committee action the administrative services, special education and educational services committees will not meet, Friese said, but all agenda items will go directly to the board at its Aug. 7 meeting.

NEARLY 6,000 PUPILS — Miss Wyla Cunningham, also known as "Cookie," estimates she has taught 6,000 students in her 39 years as San Rafael High School home economics teacher. Now she plans to travel. (Independent-Journal photo)

Retiring Teacher Pays Tribute To Students

"Students now are as good as they ever were," Miss Wyla Cunningham said. "If you take two thousand adults, you'll probably find a hundred of them you aren't so proud of, too."

She should know. She taught nearly 6,000 students in 39 years as home economics teacher at San Rafael High School which ended with her retirement this summer.

"I've had wonderful students all along," she said. Not just those that made good in business, she explained, but "a lot of fine parents in this community that I'm proud of."

Miss Cunningham, universally known as "Cookie" since a teacher titled her that in her second year here, has headed the home economics department at San Rafael High since her arrival in 1928.

Born in Le Grand, Merced County, she went to Fresno State College and then taught at St. Helena for two years before coming to San Rafael. She later earned her master's degree at San Francisco State College.

San Rafael earned some nationwide recognition a decade ago when several of Miss Cunningham's students won national and state contests of homemaking ability.

Miss Cunningham's foods courses were not merely cooking. They also included lessons in shopping, management, budgeting, etiquette, and child care and training.

Two national companies were impressed enough to sign Miss Cunningham for several years as a consultant — first for Betty Crocker Foods and then for Pillsbury.

She has kept busy in San Rafael, too. She founded the RaRavas girls' service club when she came to San Rafael High, and remained in charge of it for 28 years.

She was also advisor to Beta Sigma Phi, girls' business club, and was active in Junior Red Cross work. There was also time for her to hold several offices in the State Home Economics Association, including a term as vice president of the Bay Section.

In 1940 she planned the present home economics department at the school, which includes a model apartment, a long foods laboratory and classroom.

Is 39 years a long time to stay put? Miss Cunningham had planned to teach a few years longer, but "decided to stop now while I can still do things."

She plans to travel to New England this fall — "we haven't been able to do that" — with long-time friend Miss Eloise Mays, who is retiring this year from the Richmond school system.

Miss Mays, who has lived with Miss Cunningham at 12 Elkin Court, San Rafael, since 1944, taught 10 years in Richmond. Prior to that she taught two years at San Francisco State College and worked 14 years as a supervisor of elementary schools in Marin County.

She plans to become a member of Marin County Teachers Retirement Association.

Mansfield Had $800,000, Court Told

LOS ANGELES (UPI) —The estate of the late Jayne Mansfield is worth more than $800,000, according to one of the men involved in a court struggle to administer it.

Charles Goldring, business manager for the actress, claimed she left 3$5,000 in cash, $163,500 in stocks, and personal property worth $250,000.

In the petition filed yesterday in superior court, Goldring also estimated Miss Mansfield's real property was worth $363,000.

The battle over who will be named permanent administrator of the estate, which earlier was estimated at $200,000, involves Los Angeles County public administrator Baldo M. Kristovich and two of her husbands, movie director Matt Cimber and muscleman Mickey Hargitay.

A hearing has been set July 21 in probate court. Miss Mansfield, her attorney, Sam Brody, and a driver were killed in a traffic accident near New Orleans June 29.

Crash Hurts Driver, Auto Is Destroyed

George H. Klein, 40, of 1865 Mountain View Avenue, Tiburon, was in good condition today at Marin General Hospital after his car struck a parked car on Bridgeway in Sausalito at 1:35 a.m. today.

Klein had bruises and scrapes, the hospital said. Sausalito police said his car was a total loss after it struck a car owned by Terrence Maloney of 1713 Bridgeway. Damage to Maloney's car was minor.

BADGES BRING 'EM BACK

Marin Librarians Using Police To Recover Long-Overdue Books

By JIM BREWER

When a police officer, on duty and in full uniform, goes to a residence to retrieve a long overdue library book, chances are pretty good he'll get it.

This observation yesterday from San Rafael's head librarian, Vivian Smith, coupled with the fact that failure to return a book can be classified as petty theft, explains why policemen in San Rafael, and several other cities in the county, have been given secondary tasks as "deputy librarians."

The reason for police participation in book-hunting, according to Mrs. Smith, is that these volumes are public property. But more importantly, she said, many are out of print and their return is essential to the maintenance of the library's collection.

More than $300 worth of books are more than three months overdue at the San Rafael Library now, Mrs. Smith reported. If returns through police assistance keep with trends over the past three years, she said, the library can expect 75 per cent back with the rest officially accounted for as lost.

"The lost report lets us know where we stand so we can order replacements if possible, and bill the borrower for loss," she explained.

Police officers say they don't particularly like chasing down books but as one expressed it: "Somebody's got to do it."

San Rafael Police Lt. Ray Bleasdale said the time necessary for collection amounts to no more than a half-hour. "The officer spends most of that time in his car so it doesn't take him away in case of an emergency," he added.

The officer whose beat covers the area where a missing book is reported in San Rafael is usually instructed to retrieve it and serve notice of a $1 fine, according to Bleasdale.

San Anselmo, Mill Valley and Larkspur police cooperate in helping their city libraries. Sausalito police department reports it has never been asked to aid its library.

The county library has a full-time clerk, deputized by the sheriff, who, as part of his weekly routine, tracks down long-overdue books from the library's branches in incorporated and unincorporated areas.

Some citizens have complained about police involvement in library matters, Mrs. Smith reported, but the practice usually "saves more than $500 worth of books each year."

State Board Pleads With U.S. To Save Computers

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The state Board of Education urged the U.S. commissioner of education to save the nation's leading educational computer center.

The computer center—located in Sacramento—provides immediate information to school officials and policymakers on California education. It is being developed as a pilot project for the entire nation.

Known as the California Total Educational Information System, the center cost the U.S. Office of Education $3 million for its design and the first two years of operation.

NO MORE CASH

The third year of operation is expected to cost $400,000, but federal officials have declared no more funds are available for the project. If the center is continued through the third year, it would then be absorbed by the State Department of Education.

The Board of Education unanimously passed a resolution asking the U.S. Education Commissioner to "find ways and means" of funding the computer center's third year.

APPOINTIVE CHIEF

In other action the board approved—in principle— a report on reorganization of the state education system, including an appointive state school chief.

The board also accepted the recommendation of Arthur D. Little Inc. that Dr. Conrad Briner of the Claremont Graduate School become coordinator of departmental reorganization.

Financing of the reorganization is expected to come from federal funds. Little Co. had estimated about $95,000 would be needed.

The board members made it clear they were adopting the report in principle only and were not necessarily committed to all proposals. Some portions of the report have been disapproved by the Department of Education.

Dr. Briner will work three and a half days a week on coordinating reorganization of those portions of the Little report that can be implemented without changing existing laws or the state constitution.

Powder Puff Derby Won By Solo Pilot

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Judy Wagner, a veteran of six previous all-woman transcontinental air races, was officially named the winner yesterday of the 21st annual Powder Puff Derby.

Mrs. Wagner, of Palos Verdes Estates, soloed her Beechcraft Bonanza K35 from Atlantic City, N.J., to Torrance, Calif., to amass 11.01671 points in the handicap 2,494-mile air race.

She was presented with the first place trophy and a $1,400 check last night at ceremonies at the Los Angeles International Airport Marina. Mrs. Wagner, the wife of Dr. Ellis O. Wagner, has logged 2,700 hours flying time and holds a commercial pilot's license with an instrument rating.

The derby began last Monday at New Jersey's Bader Field and ended Thursday at Torrance Airport. Only 53 of the 71 entrants completed the trip.

Seven of the top ten winners were Californians. Runners-up in order were: Miss Frances Bera, Long Beach; Mrs. Tig Pennock, Irvine; Mrs. Gini Richardson, Yakima, Wash.; Mrs. Margaret Callaway, San Pedro; Miss Margaret Mead, Goleta; Mrs. Jean Rose, Palos Verdes Estates; Mrs. Mary Ann Noah, Shawnee Mission, Kan.; Mrs. Lois Miles, Woodland Hills, and Mrs. Betty Curran, Everett, Wash.

Car Tips Over, Teeners Injured

Two 16-year-old Marin drivers and their passengers received minor injuries yesterday when the cars they were driving went out of control and rolled over.

Gary Campbell, 16, of 267 Oak Manor Drive, Fairfax, was cited by California Highway Patrolman for failure to drive on the right half of the roadway after his car overturned at about 12:35 p.m. on the Olema-Bolinas Road near Upper Road. Campbell and his passenger, Terrence M. Gosliner, 16, of 859 Butterfield Road, San Anselmo, saw their own doctors.

Driver Sharon I. George, 16, and her passenger, Janel Holiday, 3, both of 43 Cottonwood Drive, San Rafael, also went to their own physicians after Miss George's car, which she was driving at about 1:15 p.m. on the Point Reyes-Petaluma Road three miles north of Novato Boulevard, went out of control and rolled over.

Chemicals Ruled Out In Mount Tam Death

Marin County Coroner Donovan O. Cooke has ruled out the possibility of cleaning chemicals as an asphyxiant in the June 11 death of Terrence J. McGrath, 20, of San Francisco on Mount Tamalpais.

Cooke said yesterday, after giving his final report on the death, attributing it to "asphyxiation probably related to LSD ingestion," that he would check out the possibility of cleaning fluid fumes in the bag. He reported later in the day that the bag had not been recently cleaned.

Education Board's Committees Off

The three committees of the Marin County Board of Education will not meet Monday night as planned, according to Asst. County Supt. of Schools Stanley H. Friese.

Since there is no business requiring committee action the administrative services, special education and educational services committees will not meet, Friese said, but all agenda items will go directly to the board at its Aug. 7 meeting.

NEARLY 6,000 PUPILS — Miss Wyla Cunningham, also known as "Cookie," estimates she has taught 6,000 students in her 39 years as San Rafael High School home economics teacher. Now she plans to travel. (Independent-Journal photo)

Retiring Teacher Pays Tribute To Students

"Students now are as good as they ever were," Miss Wyla Cunningham said. "If you take two thousand adults, you'll probably find a hundred of them you aren't so proud of, too."

She should know. She taught nearly 6,000 students in 39 years as home economics teacher at San Rafael High School which ended with her retirement this summer.

"I've had wonderful students all along," she said. Not just those that made good in business, she explained, but "a lot of fine parents in this community that I'm proud of."

Miss Cunningham, universally known as "Cookie" since a teacher titled her that in her second year here, has headed the home economics department at San Rafael High since her arrival in 1928.

Born in Le Grand, Merced County, she went to Fresno State College and then taught at St. Helena for two years before coming to San Rafael. She later earned her master's degree at San Francisco State College.

San Rafael earned some nationwide recognition a decade ago when several of Miss Cunningham's students won national and state contests of homemaking ability.

Miss Cunningham's foods courses were not merely cooking. They also included lessons in shopping, management, budgeting, etiquette, and child care and training.

Two national companies were impressed enough to sign Miss Cunningham for several years as a consultant — first for Betty Crocker Foods and then for Pillsbury.

She has kept busy in San Rafael, too. She founded the RaRavas girls' service club when she came to San Rafael High, and remained in charge of it for 28 years.

She was also advisor to Beta Sigma Phi, girls' business club, and was active in Junior Red Cross work. There was also time for her to hold several offices in the State Home Economics Association, including a term as vice president of the Bay Section.

In 1940 she planned the present home economics department at the school, which includes a model apartment, a long foods laboratory and classroom.

Is 39 years a long time to stay put? Miss Cunningham had planned to teach a few years longer, but "decided to stop now while I can still do things."

She plans to travel to New England this fall — "we haven't been able to do that" — with long-time friend Miss Eloise Mays, who is retiring this year from the Richmond school system.

Miss Mays, who has lived with Miss Cunningham at 12 Elkin Court, San Rafael, since 1944, taught 10 years in Richmond. Prior to that she taught two years at San Francisco State College and worked 14 years as a supervisor of elementary schools in Marin County.

She plans to become a member of Marin County Teachers Retirement Association.

REMEMBER

the old brown shingle houses you use to find in small towns? They usually had a big front veranda, and like as not, they'd have a couple of palms planted out in front. Inside you'd find a big living room with a brick fireplace, a couple of bedrooms, and a big family kitchen. Naturally they all had a big backyard and a cellar to store preserves. Well, we've just found one that fits the whole description, and if you'd like to see it, we'll be glad to show it to you this weekend. $19,250.

REMEMBER

the old brown shingle houses you use to find in small towns? They usually had a big front veranda, and like as not, they'd have a couple of palms planted out in front. Inside you'd find a big living room with a brick fireplace, a couple of bedrooms, and a big family kitchen. Naturally they all had a big backyard and a cellar to store preserves. Well, we've just found one that fits the whole description, and if you'd like to see it, we'll be glad to show it to you this weekend. $19,250.

ANOTHER DEATH IN NEWARK

A Negro whom Newark, N.J., police claim refused to halt after he had been caught looting a burning building, lies dead on Mulberry Street. He was just one of several victims in the third terror-filled night in what New Jersey Gov. Richard Hughes called "a city in open rebellion." (UPI Telephoto)

Federal Group Recommends Pay TV Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A three-member committee of Federal Communications Commissioners recommended today that the FCC authorize pay television.

The report was prepared by Commissioners Kenneth A. Cox, Robert E. Lee and James J. Wardsworth, who acted as chairman of the committee.

HEARINGS SET

The FCC decided to hold hearings on the proposal early next autumn.

In their report, the three commissioners suggest that a subscription television station be authorized only for communities which are served by five or more commercial television stations, although the five stations do not have to be licensed to serve the particular community in which the pay television station will operate.

FREE HOURS

The subscription TV stations also would be required to broadcast a minimum of 28 hours a week of free television programming.

Under the proposal, the FCC would approve charges to be made by the subscription television firms.

The committee recommended also that as a general rule pay television stations would be prohibited from broadcasting feature films more than two years old. But they would be permitted to show a limited number of movies more than 10 years old.

No commercials would be permitted on subscription television.

Researcher's Security Status Safe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Defense Department has decided Robert Arthur Niemann, research assistant at the University of California, Los Angeles, is a protestor, not a Communist, Rep. Richard L. Roundebush, R-Ind., reported Friday.

The department notified the congressman that Niemann will be allowed to retain his secret security clearance despite his membership in the W. E. B. du-Bois Club.

FRONT CHARGED

The attorney general's office has asked the subversive activities control board to require the Du Bois Club to register as a Communist front organization, Roundebush said. FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover describes it as an instrument of the Communist Party to infiltrate and subvert American college campuses, he added.

But after 15 months of investigation, at Roundebush's request the Defense Department notified the congressman that its screening board "has determined that continuation of Mr. Niemann's secret clearance is clearly consistent with the national interest." Niemann is a research assistant and graduate student in the university's engineering department where, Roundebush said, he works on Air Force defense contracts.

JUST A PROTEST

"...The screening board concluded that Mr. Niemann is not a Communist and that he does not have a sympathetic interest in the Communist movement," Joseph J. Liebling, director for security policy in the Defense Department, wrote Roundebush.

"It concluded also that his recent well-publicized joining of the Du Bois Club constituted nothing more than a protest against the attorney general's action directed at having the organization declared a Communist front...an action which he regarded as unwarranted governmental interference with the activities of a political organization."

Reagan Tells U.C. Regents To Go Slow On Fiscal Plan

BERKELEY (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan yesterday pledged his continued support to the University of California, but cautioned the board of regents not to act with undue haste on fiscal matters.

Reagan, who came under fire from some regents for his budget austerity, said the university should not act on a long-range fiscal program until the state government has arrived at an acceptable tax economy.

The future program, reported to the regents by university vice president Charles J. Hitch, predicts the university will have 140,000 students and a $1 billion budget by 1975.

Reagan said he was impressed with the figures showing that the university's proposed growth is not out of line with the continued growth of California.

"I'm not foolish enough to start out as governor by destroying one of the state's greatest assets—the University of California," he said.

Criticism of the governor's fiscal policies was voiced by a small but vigorous minority, led by regent Norton Simon.

Simon told his fellow regents they could forget the state master plan for higher education. He said under Reagan's program, the university could not educate the top 12.5 per cent of the state's high school seniors, as recommended in the plan.

The Fullerton industrialist also criticized the governor's budget cuts for faculty salaries. He suggested use of $3.5 million in regents' funds to make up reductions in salaries, in the university library budget and in waivers of out-of-state tuition.

Simon's motion was defeated on a 15-3 vote after Reagan had left the day-long session.

Earlier, Reagan told the regents he thinks some of the university difficulties in recruiting faculty are due less to budget cuts than to "completely dishonest, unfounded charges" by some of the faculty that there was political interference with the university.

In other action, the regents:

Approved a resolution calling for discipline of students using marijuana and LSD.

Passed a resolution requesting that the administration seek restoration of Reagan's cuts and of "overhead funds" deleted by the legislature.

Introduced a motion calling on the school to work to restore override cuts in the university's budget for line items.

Mill Valley Seeks Flood Repair Cash

Application for $59,000 in state flood funds will be considered by Mill Valley City Council 8 p.m. Monday in City Hall.

The funds, if approved by the legislature, would be for slides caused by last winter's heavy rains.

Asst. City Mgr. Harold E. Soule said estimated costs of repair include $9,000 for a slide at 389 Ethel Avenue, $25,000 for slide across from 81 Fairway Drive, $10,000 for collapse of roadway at 143 Ethel Avenue and $15,000 for slide near 66 Hillside Avenue.

Also on the agenda is an ordinance increasing drainage fees, and extending drainage fees to single-lot developments.

Children Stage Carnival To Buy Hospital Toys

Two San Rafael girls, 8 and 9, raised $14.32 yesterday to buy games, puzzles and magazines for the children in the pediatrics ward at Marin General Hospital.

Karen Marie McMahon, 8, of 1865 Las Gallinas Avenue and Patty Jo Romanelli, 9, of 70 Lucas Park Drive, staged a neighborhood carnival at Karen's home and with the help of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McMahon and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Romanelli, and younger sisters, Linda McMahon, 4, and Paula Romanelli, 6.

Karen, who has suffered pneumonia and vasculitis, has made several hospital stays and knows what is needed to keep children content in pediatrics wards.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

Still Unknown If Pesticides Constitute Big Health Hazard

VAN DELLEN

Do chemical pesticides constitute a hazard to human beings? A recent federal investigation balanced the great benefits against the risks and concluded that any dire health effects remain to be proved. Properly used insecticides are an integral part of modern civilization.

Approximately 190 deaths a year can be attributed to pesticides. According to W. M. Upholt and P. C. Kearney, writing in the New England Journal of Medicine, half of these result from accidental ingestion. They tell the story about the gardener who obtained parathion from a farmer. The substance was put into an old wine bottle and someone mistook it for a beverage with fatal results.

CARELESSNESS is the next most common cause of death from insecticides. The worker does not clean his clothing after spraying or takes his own medicine as an antidote when symptoms develop.

Recent fish kills in Alabama were attributed to runoff from agricultural applications. The chemicals did not induce illness in man even though the water and fish were consumed.

MANY TYPES of pesticides are used in various areas. Only a minute amount is used to kill the pest. The remainder undergoes chemical changes in the air, water, soil, or as a residue on plants. Contaminants in the earth are detoxified by soil bacteria, fungi, and other organisms. This explains why they do not show a progressive build-up. Some remain active on plants for 24 hours. Vegetables on which the 30-day type is applied are not harvested for a month.

To date pesticides have not been found in the 30,000 cubic miles of ground water that supplies three-quarters of our municipal water facilities. This vast reservoir lies under 85 per cent of the land area.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

CARROTS IN DIABETES

L. I. A. writes: Is it safe for a diabetic to eat carrots? I hear they contain sugar.

REPLY

Yes. This question points up two misconceptions: 1. That diabetics cannot eat foods containing sugar; 2. That carbohydrates are not sugars. All diabetics need a certain amount of carbohydrates to balance their diets. After digestion, all carbohydrates end up as sugar whether they come from table sugar, cereals, carrots or milk.

UPRIGHT HEART

B. A. F. writes: Is a person born with a horizontal heart or does it come from hard work?

REPLY

Enlargement of the heart in a horizontal direction may be due to rheumatic fever, elevated blood pressure, a high diaphragm, or a congenital lesion. It is not, however, due to overwork.

OLD AT FORTY

A. R. T. writes: What is premature hardening of the arteries?

REPLY

A condition in which a man of 40 has the arteries of a 60 year old. This usually is an hereditary trait.

DAILY OLIVES

Mrs. A. writes: My 20-year-old son eats a jar of stuffed olives every day. Any harm in this?

REPLY

No, provided he does not become overweight from the caloric content.

VITAMINS AND INERTIA

F. W. writes: Could a thiamin deficiency cause listlessness?

REPLY

Yes, but not everyone who is listless has a vitamin deficiency. Nor will all cases of inertia respond to this vitamin.

Three Tiburon Agencies To Meet Same Evening

Tiburon boards of adjustment and design review will meet Monday in that order, then adjourn and reconvene in a full planning commission review of the zoning ordinance begun Thursday.

In the three-in-one meeting starting at 8 p.m. in City Hall, the board of adjustment will first consider an application for a use permit by James E. Hutson of Belvedere to construct either a ten-unit apartment building or a condominium on Lyford Drive at Vistazo West Street, on a 3,450 square foot lot.

The board of design review will subsequently consider design appearance and landscaping for the same application.

Also on the agenda for continued discussion by this board is a request from the Belvedere-Tiburon Landmarks Society for three directional signs for its museum.

The board of adjustments regularly meets on the third Monday, the board of design review on the third Tuesday. The planning commission regularly meets on first Mondays.

ANOTHER DEATH IN NEWARK

A Negro whom Newark, N.J., police claim refused to halt after he had been caught looting a burning building, lies dead on Mulberry Street. He was just one of several victims in the third terror-filled night in what New Jersey Gov. Richard Hughes called "a city in open rebellion." (UPI Telephoto)

Federal Group Recommends Pay TV Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A three-member committee of Federal Communications Commissioners recommended today that the FCC authorize pay television.

The report was prepared by Commissioners Kenneth A. Cox, Robert E. Lee and James J. Wardsworth, who acted as chairman of the committee.

HEARINGS SET

The FCC decided to hold hearings on the proposal early next autumn.

In their report, the three commissioners suggest that a subscription television station be authorized only for communities which are served by five or more commercial television stations, although the five stations do not have to be licensed to serve the particular community in which the pay television station will operate.

FREE HOURS

The subscription TV stations also would be required to broadcast a minimum of 28 hours a week of free television programming.

Under the proposal, the FCC would approve charges to be made by the subscription television firms.

The committee recommended also that as a general rule pay television stations would be prohibited from broadcasting feature films more than two years old. But they would be permitted to show a limited number of movies more than 10 years old.

No commercials would be permitted on subscription television.

Researcher's Security Status Safe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Defense Department has decided Robert Arthur Niemann, research assistant at the University of California, Los Angeles, is a protestor, not a Communist, Rep. Richard L. Rounde bush, R-Ind., reported Friday.

The department notified the congressman that Niemann will be allowed to retain his secret security clearance despite his membership in the W. E. B. du-Bois Club.

FRONT CHARGED

The attorney general's office has asked the subversive activities control board to require the Du Bois Club to register as a Communist front organization, Roundebush said. FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover describes it as an instrument of the Communist Party to infiltrate and subvert American college campuses, he added.

But after 15 months of investigation, at Roundebush's request the Defense Department notified the congressman that its screening board "has determined that continuation of Mr. Niemann's secret clearance is clearly consistent with the national interest." Niemann is a research assistant and graduate student in the university's engineering department where, Roundebush said, he works on Air Force defense contracts.

JUST A PROTEST

"...The screening board concluded that Mr. Niemann is not a Communist and that he does not have a sympathetic interest in the Communist movement," Joseph J. Liebling, director for security policy in the Defense Department, wrote Roundebush.

"It concluded also that his recent well-publicized joining of the Du Bois Club constituted nothing more than a protest against the attorney general's action directed at having the organization declared a Communist front...an action which he regarded as unwarranted governmental interference with the activities of a political organization."

Reagan Tells U.C. Regents To Go Slow On Fiscal Plan

BERKELEY (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan yesterday pledged his continued support to the University of California, but cautioned the board of regents not to act with undue haste on fiscal matters.

Reagan, who came under fire from some regents for his budget austerity, said the university should not act on a long-range fiscal program until the state government has arrived at an acceptable tax economy.

The future program, reported to the regents by university vice president Charles J. Hitch, predicts the university will have 140,000 students and a $1 billion budget by 1975.

Reagan said he was impressed with the figures showing that the university's proposed growth is not out of line with the continued growth of California.

"I'm not foolish enough to start out as governor by destroying one of the state's greatest assets—the University of California," he said.

Criticism of the governor's fiscal policies was voiced by a small but vigorous minority, led by regent Norton Simon.

Simon told his fellow regents they could forget the state master plan for higher education. He said under Reagan's program, the university could not educate the top 12.5 per cent of the state's high school seniors, as recommended in the plan.

The Fullerton industrialist also criticized the governor's budget cuts for faculty salaries. He suggested use of $3.5 million in regents' funds to make up reductions in salaries, in the university library budget and in waivers of out-of-state tuition.

Simon's motion was defeated on a 15-3 vote after Reagan had left the day-long session.

Earlier, Reagan told the regents he thinks some of the university difficulties in recruiting faculty are due less to budget cuts than to "completely dishonest, unfounded charges" by some of the faculty that there was political interference with the university.

In other action, the regents:

Approved a resolution calling for discipline of students using marijuana and LSD.

Passed a resolution requesting that the administration seek restoration of Reagan's cuts and of "overhead funds" deleted by the legislature.

Introduced a motion calling on the school to work to restore override cuts in the university's budget for line items.

Mill Valley Seeks Flood Repair Cash

Application for $59,000 in state flood funds will be considered by Mill Valley City Council 8 p.m. Monday in City Hall.

The funds, if approved by the legislature, would be for slides caused by last winter's heavy rains.

Asst. City Mgr. Harold E. Soule said estimated costs of repair include $9,000 for a slide at 389 Ethel Avenue, $25,000 for slide across from 81 Fairway Drive, $10,000 for collapse of roadway at 143 Ethel Avenue and $15,000 for slide near 66 Hillside Avenue.

Also on the agenda is an ordinance increasing drainage fees, and extending drainage fees to single-lot developments.

Children Stage Carnival To Buy Hospital Toys

Two San Rafael girls, 8 and 9, raised $14.32 yesterday to buy games, puzzles and magazines for the children in the pediatrics ward at Marin General Hospital.

Karen Marie McMahon, 8, of 1865 Las Gallinas Avenue and Patty Jo Romanelli, 9, of 70 Lucas Park Drive, staged a neighborhood carnival at Karen's home and with the help of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McMahon and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Romanelli, and younger sisters, Linda McMahon, 4, and Paula Romanelli, 6.

Karen, who has suffered pneumonia and vasculitis, has made several hospital stays and knows what is needed to keep children content in pediatrics wards.

Still Unknown If Pesticides Constitute Big Health Hazard

VAN DELLEN

Do chemical pesticides constitute a hazard to human beings? A recent federal investigation balanced the great benefits against the risks and concluded that any dire health effects remain to be proved. Properly used insecticides are an integral part of modern civilization.

Approximately 190 deaths a year can be attributed to pesticides. According to W. M. Upholt and P. C. Kearney, writing in the New England Journal of Medicine, half of these result from accidental ingestion. They tell the story about the gardener who obtained parathion from a farmer. The substance was put into an old wine bottle and someone mistook it for a beverage with fatal results.

CARELESSNESS is the next most common cause of death from insecticides. The worker does not clean his clothing after spraying or takes his own medicine as an antidote when symptoms develop.

Recent fish kills in Alabama were attributed to runoff from agricultural applications. The chemicals did not induce illness in man even though the water and fish were consumed.

MANY TYPES of pesticides are used in various areas. Only a minute amount is used to kill the pest. The remainder undergoes chemical changes in the air, water, soil, or as a residue on plants. Contaminants in the earth are detoxified by soil bacteria, fungi, and other organisms. This explains why they do not show a progressive build-up. Some remain active on plants for 24 hours. Vegetables on which the 30-day type is applied are not harvested for a month.

To date pesticides have not been found in the 30,000 cubic miles of ground water that supplies three-quarters of our municipal water facilities. This vast reservoir lies under 85 per cent of the land area.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

CARROTS IN DIABETES

L. I. A. writes: Is it safe for a diabetic to eat carrots? I hear they contain sugar.

REPLY

Yes. This question points up two misconceptions: 1. That diabetics cannot eat foods containing sugar; 2. That carbohydrates are not sugars. All diabetics need a certain amount of carbohydrates to balance their diets. After digestion, all carbohydrates end up as sugar whether they come from table sugar, cereals, carrots or milk.

UPRIGHT HEART

B. A. F. writes: Is a person born with a horizontal heart or does it come from hard work?

REPLY

Enlargement of the heart in a horizontal direction may be due to rheumatic fever, elevated blood pressure, a high diaphragm, or a congenital lesion. It is not, however, due to overwork.

OLD AT FORTY

A. R. T. writes: What is premature hardening of the arteries?

REPLY

A condition in which a man of 40 has the arteries of a 60 year old. This usually is an hereditary trait.

DAILY OLIVES

Mrs. A. writes: My 20-year-old son eats a jar of stuffed olives every day. Any harm in this?

REPLY

No, provided he does not become overweight from the caloric content.

VITAMINS AND INERTIA

F. W. writes: Could a thiamin deficiency cause listlessness?

REPLY

Yes, but not everyone who is listless has a vitamin deficiency. Nor will all cases of inertia respond to this vitamin.

Three Tiburon Agencies To Meet Same Evening

Tiburon boards of adjustment and design review will meet Monday in that order, then adjourn and reconvene in a full planning commission review of the zoning ordinance begun Thursday.

In the three-in-one meeting starting at 8 p.m. in City Hall, the board of adjustment will first consider an application for a use permit by James E. Hutson of Belvedere to construct either a ten-unit apartment building or a condominium on Lyford Drive at Vistazo West Street, on a 3,450 square foot lot.

The board of design review will subsequently consider design appearance and landscaping for the same application.

Also on the agenda for continued discussion by this board is a request from the Belvedere-Tiburon Landmarks Society for three directional signs for its museum.

The board of adjustments regularly meets on the third Monday, the board of design review on the third Tuesday. The planning commission regularly meets on first Mondays.

Today is Saturday, July 15th, the 196th day of 1967 with 169 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase. The morning star is Saturn. The evening stars are Venus and Mars.

Born on this day in 1608 was the Dutch painter, Rembrandt.

On this day in history:

In 1912, the U.S. won the Olympic Games, led by Jim Thorpe.

In 1942, Americans in Eastern cities were faced with the first serious meat shortage of World War II.

In 1945, Italy declared war on its former Axis partner, Japan.

In 1964, Sen. Barry Goldwater was nominated for the Republican presidential candidacy with William Miller as his running mate.

A thought for the day — Roman playwright Terence once said: "The quarrels of lovers are the renewal of love."

HOW TO PLAY
WINNING BRIDGE
By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

American Teacher Quietly Was Great Help To Partner

One of the unsung heroes of the recent world championship was Bill Root, a celebrated New York bridge teacher as well as a player of world championship caliber.

Root did nothing spectacular, leaving that sort of thing to his partner, Alvin Roth; but Root never seemed to touch the wrong card.

Opening lead — ♠ 5

Root's opening lead in today's hand is an example of his simple but unerring game.

The question was whether to lead a club or a spade, and Root made the winning choice.

David Berah of the Venezuelan team would have bid one club with a weak three-card club suit just as readily as with a longer or stronger club holding.

Roth might have side strength in clubs instead of in diamonds.

The choice was not as automatic as it might seem at first glance.

The decisive factor in Root's mind was that South could not have a good spade holding of four or more cards.

With a decent spade suit South would have bid two spades (a forcing bid), reserving his notrump bid in case his partner could not raise spades.

WORKS WONDERS

The spade opening lead worked wonders.

Dummy's queen won, and declarer led a diamond from dummy.

Roth took the king of diamonds and led a spade to dummy's king.

Dummy led another diamond, and Roth took the ace and led a third spade to South's ace.

ANSWER: Bid one heart.

This is a borderline opening bid since you have only 11 points in high cards and 2 points for the doubletons.

You prefer to bid rather than pass because your high-card structure is good and you have a pretty strong six-card major suit.

Today is Saturday, July 15th, the 196th day of 1967 with 169 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase. The morning star is Saturn. The evening stars are Venus and Mars.

Born on this day in 1606 was the Dutch painter, Rembrandt.

On this day in history:

In 1912, the U.S. won the Olympic Games, led by Jim Thorpe.

In 1942, Americans in Eastern cities were faced with the first serious meat shortage of World War II.

In 1945, Italy declared war on its former Axis partner, Japan.

In 1964, Sen. Barry Goldwater was nominated for the Republican presidential candidacy with William Miller as his running mate.

A thought for the day — Roman playwright Terence once said: "The quarrels of lovers are the renewal of love."

HOW TO PLAY
WINNING BRIDGE
By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

American Teacher Quietly Was Great Help To Partner

One of the unsung heroes of the recent world championship was Bill Root, a celebrated New York bridge teacher as well as a player of world championship caliber.

Root did nothing spectacular, leaving that sort of thing to his partner, Alvin Roth; but Root never seemed to touch the wrong card.

Opening lead — ♠ 5

Root's opening lead in today's hand is an example of his simple but unerring game.

The question was whether to lead a club or a spade, and Root made the winning choice.

David Berah of the Venezuelan team would have bid one club with a weak three-card club suit just as readily as with a longer or stronger club holding.

Roth might have side strength in clubs instead of in diamonds.

The choice was not as automatic as it might seem at first glance.

The decisive factor in Root's mind was that South could not have a good spade holding of four or more cards.

With a decent spade suit South would have bid two spades (a forcing bid), reserving his notrump bid in case his partner could not raise spades.

WORKS WONDERS

The spade opening lead worked wonders.

Dummy's queen won, and declarer led a diamond from dummy.

Roth took the king of diamonds and led a spade to dummy's king.

Dummy led another diamond, and Roth took the ace and led a third spade to South's ace.

South needed a diamond trick to make game so had to go ahead with a third round of diamonds.

Root got in with the queen of diamonds and finally defeated the contract with his two good spades.

Nobody stood up and cheered when Root defeated this contract, but all of the experts at the match nodded their heads approvingly: Bill Root would never let them down.

TODAY'S RELIGION

New Yardstick Used In Gauging A Church's Success Or Failure

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religious Writer

How does a successful church differ from a failure?

Some might answer in terms of membership, staff, growth rate, activity programs, etc.

But Rt. Rev. Paul Moore Jr., saffragan bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Washington, D.C., has another test.

"The most important mission of a church is to present to the world a true image of Jesus Christ," he said in an interview. "If a congregation's life is such that outsiders can see Christ reflected in it, then it is doing its job, no matter whether it's large or small, rich or poor, famous or obscure."

Bishop Moore is a tall, rangy, 47-year-old man who earned a Purple Heart and a Silver Star as a Marine captain on Guadalcanal. He has a disturbing way of talking about Christ in a matter-of-fact tone, as though he meant every word of it.

"Modern man, regardless of his theology, is strongly attracted to the figure of Christ," he said. "So it is more essential than ever for the church to "show forth Christ', as St. Paul put it."

Q. Suppose a congregation told you, "Okay, Bishop, we'll buy that idea. But how can we know whether we're "showing forth' Christ?" What would you say to that?

A. "I'd ask them a question right back. "Do you really love one another with a love that is on a deeper level than the ordinary love which men of good will have for one another?' The kind of love which is a sign of Christ is willing to share suffering, to accept each other's failings. It's a kind of love you can almost feel when you are among people who have it. And it's infectious. People who enter the circle of it want to stay and be part of it, even when they don't understand where it's coming from."

Q. Is that the only hallmark of a congregation that is "showing forth Christ"?

A. "No, but the others are related to it. Members of a parish also should ask themselves, "when people look at us do they see evidence of unusual concern for the poor and hungry and oppressed?' Again, not just the concern of decent citizens or men of good will, but the passionate concern which Christ displayed for all in need. It's not a matter of loving the guy next to you in the pew, but also really loving the guy downtown who is starving or beat up or drunk, or the old lady out at the nursing home who doesn't have any friends, or the family in India which can't get one decent meal a day for its children."

Q. You mean giving to charities, and paying your taxes gladly, and that sort of thing.

A. There's more to it than that. If we really care, as Jesus cared, we'll use all of our ingenuity, all of the political and economic power we can mobilize, to deal with problems such as open housing, job discrimination, increasing food production in underdeveloped countries, and other things like that which require a social rather than an individual approach."

Q. Suppose a congregation isn't much concerned with social action. The members feel that the church should "stick to religion." What do you think of that?

A. "I'm all for it, so long as they remember that Jesus had no use for any kind of religion that did not issue in compassion and generosity toward your brother. I certainly would agree that a congregation should not get so wrapped up in activities—even good and humane activities—that it neglects spiritual things. Genuine Christian love simply doesn't happen unless we are centered down in our faith, studying the Bible, and praying. Unless people are really part of Christ, all this stuff I've been talking about doesn't make any sense at all. It's only through the power that we get from living close to him that we are able to love as we should, to live with joy and openness instead of fearfully and defensively."

East German Regime Holds Church Growth

BERLIN (AP) — The East German Communist regime remains locked in a struggle with religion that lies largely beneath the surface but sometimes shoots off sparks like a smoldering volcano.

Officially, the regime allows religious worship. But it will not allow large numbers of West Germans to come to East Germany for the October celebration of the 450th anniversary of the Protestant Reformation in Wittenberg.

BURIAL SITE

Martin Luther lies buried in the Wittenberg Castle church where he posted the 95 theses that launched the Reformation. His heritage is one of the things that Germans East and West, have in common.

Some 80 per cent of East Germany's population of 17 million are Protestants, mostly Lutheran. About 10 per cent of the population is Roman Catholic.

In East Germany the Protestant Church carries the major burden of opposing the official atheism of the state. Elsewhere in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union, the Roman or Orthodox Churches bear the brunt of Communist repression.

A major problem facing both the Protestant and Catholic faiths is getting government permission to build churches and the money and the materials to build them with. Many churches are still in ruins from the war, although some of general historical or architectural value have been rebuilt. For the Protestants, money is less of a problem since each church member pays an annual tax, one per cent of his income to the church. This is traditional in Germany.

LESS OF FIGHT

Because of its smallness, the Roman Catholic Church faces less open opposition from the government than do the Protestants. An aide to Alfred Cardinal Bengsch said in East Berlin recently: "We make ourselves no illusions. One of the reasons we are left alone as much as we are is because we are so few."

Bengsch himself is one of the few direct ties between East and West Berlin. Residing in East Berlin, he is allowed to go to West Berlin three days a month to minister to the 250,000 Catholics there. At 45 the youngest cardinal in the church, Bengsch became Berlin's bishop only days after the Communists had built the wall dividing the city and his diocese, on Aug. 13, 1961.

Both sides in the church-state battle try to capture the minds of the young. The Communists have instituted the Jugendweihe, a ceremony in which a boy or a girl of 14 swears allegiance to the state on the basis of atheistic and Marxist principles.

OPPOSITION

Protestant opposition to the state ceremony can vary from parish to parish. Said one East Berlin man, for example: "We have a new and young (Protestant) pastor. Although the church is willing to bend a little, he is not. He says, 'If you go to the Jugendweihe, don't come back here.' He has plunged the whole parish into a crisis."

Farm Now Being Used As Church

SIMSBURY, Conn. (UPI)—"We use the hayloft as a sanctuary and meditate in the silo."

What might sound like a hangout for hippies is in fact the new house of worship for the Covenant Presbyterian Church, a congregation of some 150 persons in this community north of Hartford.

The church purchased a 14-acre farm and its buildings in 1962 and last spring began converting the farm structures to serve the needs of the congregation.

"We thought it was right to use the existing buildings," said the Rev. John Hunn, minister, "and the only problem we've encountered is that our congregation has swelled and now we need more room."

In the summer, however, the need is not pressing. Since the barn is not air-conditioned, services are held in a field of green overlooking a brook.

According to the Rev. Mr. Hunn, the major renovations were done by contractors, but members of the congregation pooled their labor and completed the job.

The end result is a rustic cathedral—the original walls and beams were left exposed on the interior — with the chicken coop converted to a library with a pot belly stove for atmosphere. One concrete silo was kept and changed into a meditation chamber that can accommodate about 12 persons.

"It's really unique," the minister said. "We kept as much of the original building as was practical and the end result is as beautiful as it is refreshing."

Spiritual Leader Puts Down LSD, Other Such Type Drugs

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI)—"If God can be found through any drug, God is not worthy of being God."

Those are the words of Meher Baba, a non-sectarian spiritual master living in India, who warns that LSD and other mind-changing drugs are physically, mentally and spiritually harmful.

The warning was sounded by Meher Baba during an interview with Frederick Chapman. Chapman, a native of Denver, Colo., is a graduate of Harvard and a Fullbright scholar who recently returned from a year's study in India where he met Meher Baba.

LSD supporters, such as former Harvard lecturer Timothy Leary, often compare their trips to mystical experiences and quote mystics of the East to support use of drugs.

But Chapman said in an interview that Meher Baba—whose name means "compassionate father"—said LSD is "harmful, physically, mentally and spiritually."

"Meher Baba warned that continued use of LSD leads to madness or death," Chapman said.

"Many take LSD because it seems to give them a glimpse of a higher reality, but the spiritual master said that, in effect, the drugs give only the cheapest shadows of a spritual experience."

He quoted Baba as saying: "If God can be found through any drug, God is not worthy of being God."

"And so-called spiritual experiences generated by taking 'mind-changing' drugs such as LSD, mescaline and psilosybin are superficial and add enormously to one's addiction to the deceptions of illusion," Chapman said.

Chapman said he took LSD a few years ago in search of religious experiences, but is convinced it was only a hindrance to spiritual progress.

"Meher Baba's message to young people is that if the student world continues to indulge in the use of LSD, the best of its intellectual potential will be lost to the nation," he said.

"It is absolutely essential for a spiritual aspirant who genuinely longs for union with God to shun experiments with the effects of these drugs. Experiences born of taking LSD wear off as soon as the aspirant withdraws from or is thrown out of the orbit of the effect produced by the drug."

Chapman said Meher Baba is revered by millions throughout the world as the Avatar incarnation of the age and a God-realized being.

In India as many as 100,000 people come in one day to seek the spiritual master's blessing Meher Baba has traveled to the western world six times; his last visit to America was in 1958 when he and his disciples stayed at the center established for his work at Myrtle Beach, S.C.

Youth Team At Indian Mission For The Month

A youth team from the Methodist Church of Mill Valley is currently at the Round Valley Indian Mission in Covelo.

The group left last week and will be at the mission until July 29, directing a leadership program as well as doing minor building repairs.

Canoles Selects Topic For Sermon

"God's Promise of the Rainbow," is the title of the sermon to be given at 9:30 a.m. tomorrow by Dr. John J. Canoles, assistant pastor, at the Novato Presbyterian Church.

He is filling the pulpit in absence of Rev. C. M. Croughan, who is attending the summer session at San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo.

Lesson-Sermon

"Preserve me, O God: for in thee do I put my trust. . . . Thou wilt shew me the path of life." This verse from Psalms is the text of this week's Christian Science lesson-sermon on "Life."

TODAY'S RELIGION

New Yardstick Used In Gauging A Church's Success Or Failure

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religious Writer

How does a successful church differ from a failure?

Some might answer in terms of membership, staff, growth rate, activity programs, etc.

But Rt. Rev. Paul Moore Jr., saffragan bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Washington, D.C., has another test.

"The most important mission of a church is to present to the world a true image of Jesus Christ," he said in an interview. "If a congregation's life is such that outsiders can see Christ reflected in it, then it is doing its job, no matter whether it's large or small, rich or poor, famous or obscure."

Bishop Moore is a tall, rangy, 47-year-old man who earned a Purple Heart and a Silver Star as a Marine captain on Guadalcanal. He has a disturbing way of talking about Christ in a matter-of-fact tone, as though he meant every word of it.

"Modern man, regardless of his theology, is strongly attracted to the figure of Christ," he said. "So it is more essential than ever for the church to "show forth Christ', as St. Paul put it."

Q. Suppose a congregation told you, "Okay, Bishop, we'll buy that idea. But how can we know whether we're "showing forth' Christ?" What would you say to that?

A. "I'd ask them a question right back. "Do you really love one another with a love that is on a deeper level than the ordinary love which men of good will have for one another?' The kind of love which is a sign of Christ is willing to share suffering, to accept each other's failings. It's a kind of love you can almost feel when you are among people who have it. And it's infectious. People who enter the circle of it want to stay and be part of it, even when they don't understand where it's coming from."

Q. Is that the only hallmark of a congregation that is "showing forth Christ"?

A. "No, but the others are related to it. Members of a parish also should ask themselves, "when people look at us do they see evidence of unusual concern for the poor and hungry and oppressed?' Again, not just the concern of decent citizens or men of good will, but the passionate concern which Christ displayed for all in need. It's not a matter of loving the guy next to you in the pew, but also really loving the guy downtown who is starving or beat up or drunk, or the old lady out at the nursing home who doesn't have any friends, or the family in India which can't get one decent meal a day for its children."

Q. You mean giving to charities, and paying your taxes gladly, and that sort of thing.

A. There's more to it than that. If we really care, as Jesus cared, we'll use all of our ingenuity, all of the political and economic power we can mobilize, to deal with problems such as open housing, job discrimination, increasing food production in underdeveloped countries, and other things like that which require a social rather than an individual approach."

Q. Suppose a congregation isn't much concerned with social action. The members feel that the church should "stick to religion." What do you think of that?

A. "I'm all for it, so long as they remember that Jesus had no use for any kind of religion that did not issue in compassion and generosity toward your brother. I certainly would agree that a congregation should not get so wrapped up in activities—even good and humane activities—that it neglects spiritual things. Genuine Christian love simply doesn't happen unless we are centered down in our faith, studying the Bible, and praying. Unless people are really part of Christ, all this stuff I've been talking about doesn't make any sense at all. It's only through the power that we get from living close to him that we are able to love as we should, to live with joy and openness instead of fearfully and defensively."

NEW DELEGATE — Archbishop Luigi Raimondi, currently apostolic delegate to Mexico, has been named to the same post in the United States. In Washington, the 54-year-old church official will succeed Egidio Cardinal Vagnozzi. (AP Wirephoto)

East German Regime Holds Church Growth

BERLIN (AP) — The East German Communist regime remains locked in a struggle with religion that lies largely beneath the surface but sometimes shoots off sparks like a smoldering volcano.

Officially, the regime allows religious worship. But it will not allow large numbers of West Germans to come to East Germany for the October celebration of the 450th anniversary of the Protestant Reformation in Wittenberg.

BURIAL SITE

Martin Luther lies buried in the Wittenberg Castle church where he posted the 95 theses that launched the Reformation. His heritage is one of the things that Germans East and West, have in common.

Some 80 per cent of East Germany's population of 17 million are Protestants, mostly Lutheran. About 10 per cent of the population is Roman Catholic.

In East Germany the Protestant Church carries the major burden of opposing the official atheism of the state. Elsewhere in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union, the Roman or Orthodox Churches bear the brunt of Communist repression.

A major problem facing both the Protestant and Catholic faiths is getting government permission to build churches and the money and the materials to build them with. Many churches are still in ruins from the war, although some of general historical or architectural value have been rebuilt. For the Protestants, money is less of a problem since each church member pays an annual tax, one per cent of his income to the church. This is traditional in Germany.

LESS OF FIGHT

Because of its smallness, the Roman Catholic Church faces less open opposition from the government than do the Protestants. An aide to Alfred Cardinal Bengsch said in East Berlin recently: "We make ourselves no illusions. One of the reasons we are left alone as much as we are is because we are so few."

Bengsch himself is one of the few direct ties between East and West Berlin. Residing in East Berlin, he is allowed to go to West Berlin three days a month to minister to the 250,000 Catholics there. At 45 the youngest cardinal in the church, Bengsch became Berlin's bishop only days after the Communists had built the wall dividing the city and his diocese, on Aug. 13, 1961.

Both sides in the church-state battle try to capture the minds of the young. The Communists have instituted the Jugendweihe, a ceremony in which a boy or a girl of 14 swears allegiance to the state on the basis of atheistic and Marxist principles.

OPPOSITION

Protestant opposition to the state ceremony can vary from parish to parish. Said one East Berlin man, for example: "We have a new and young (Protestant) pastor. Although the church is willing to bend a little, he is not. He says, 'If you go to the Jugendweihe, don't come back here.' He has plunged the whole parish into a crisis."

Farm Now Being Used As Church

SIMSBURY, Conn. (UPI)—"We use the hayloft as a sanctuary and meditate in the silo."

What might sound like a hangout for hippies is in fact the new house of worship for the Covenant Presbyterian Church, a congregation of some 150 persons in this community north of Hartford.

The church purchased a 14-acre farm and its buildings in 1962 and last spring began converting the farm structures to serve the needs of the congregation.

"We thought it was right to use the existing buildings," said the Rev. John Hunn, minister, "and the only problem we've encountered is that our congregation has swelled and now we need more room."

In the summer, however, the need is not pressing. Since the barn is not air-conditioned, services are held in a field of green overlooking a brook.

According to the Rev. Mr. Hunn, the major renovations were done by contractors, but members of the congregation pooled their labor and completed the job.

The end result is a rustic cathedral—the original walls and beams were left exposed on the interior — with the chicken coop converted to a library with a pot belly stove for atmosphere. One concrete silo was kept and changed into a meditation chamber that can accommodate about 12 persons.

"It's really unique," the minister said. "We kept as much of the original building as was practical and the end result is as beautiful as it is refreshing."

Theologian To Be Guest

Dr. Robert C. Leslie of Pacific School of Religion in Berkeley will be guest minister tomorrow at 9 a.m. at the Aldersgate Methodist Church in Terra Linda.

Rev. Douglas Land, former administrative assistant to former San Francisco Theological Seminary president Theodore Gill, will be the guest preacher at the 10:30 a.m. service tomorrow at Sleepy Hollow Presbyterian Church.

Spiritual Leader Puts Down LSD, Other Such Type Drugs

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI)—"If God can be found through any drug, God is not worthy of being God."

Those are the words of Meher Baba, a non-sectarian spiritual master living in India, who warns that LSD and other mind-changing drugs are physically, mentally and spiritually harmful.

The warning was sounded by Meher Baba during an interview with Frederick Chapman. Chapman, a native of Denver, Colo., is a graduate of Harvard and a Fullbright scholar who recently returned from a year's study in India where he met Meher Baba.

LSD supporters, such as former Harvard lecturer Timothy Leary, often compare their trips to mystical experiences and quote mystics of the East to support use of drugs.

But Chapman said in an interview that Meher Baba—whose name means "compassionate father"—said LSD is "harmful, physically, mentally and spiritually."

"Meher Baba warned that continued use of LSD leads to madness or death," Chapman said.

"Many take LSD because it seems to give them a glimpse of a higher reality, but the spiritual master said that, in effect, the drugs give only the cheapest shadows of a spritual experience."

He quoted Baba as saying: "If God can be found through any drug, God is not worthy of being God."

"And so-called spiritual experiences generated by taking 'mind-changing' drugs such as LSD, mescaline and psilosybin are superficial and add enormously to one's addiction to the deceptions of illusion," Chapman said.

Chapman said he took LSD a few years ago in search of religious experiences, but is convinced it was only a hindrance to spiritual progress.

"Meher Baba's message to young people is that if the student world continues to indulge in the use of LSD, the best of its intellectual potential will be lost to the nation," he said.

"It is absolutely essential for a spiritual aspirant who genuinely longs for union with God to shun experiments with the effects of these drugs. Experiences born of taking LSD wear off as soon as the aspirant withdraws from or is thrown out of the orbit of the effect produced by the drug."

Chapman said Meher Baba is revered by millions throughout the world as the Avatar incarnation of the age and a God-realized being.

In India as many as 100,000 people come in one day to seek the spiritual master's blessing Meher Baba has traveled to the western world six times; his last visit to America was in 1958 when he and his disciples stayed at the center established for his work at Myrtle Beach, S.C.

Youth Team At Indian Mission For The Month

Participating are Gregg and Lynn Lower, Randy McKelvy, Jenny Oaks, Dede Van Moppes, Sue Valliansenior, and Bruce and Kathy Webb. They are being supervised by a group of adults from the Marin church.

Louis Cassels Receives Top Religious Award

NEW YORK (UPI) — Louis W. Cassels, United Press International's religion editor, has been named the top religious news writer in 1966 by the Religious News Writers Association.

Cassels was awarded the 1967 James O. Supple Memorial Award at the association's 19th annual convention last week for his "excellence in reporting the news of religion in the secular press in 1966." He was chosen from more than 50 entries by a panel of journalism and theology educators.

Cassels, a native of Ellenton, S.C., has been a UPI staff member since his graduation from Duke University in 1942. He has received the Christopher Award and the Faith and Freedom Award of Religious Heritage of America for excellence in reporting religious news and is author of three books on religion.

His reports are carried weekly on the Independent-Journal church page.

Canoles Selects Topic For Sermon

"God's Promise of the Rainbow," is the title of the sermon to be given at 9:30 a.m. tomorrow by Dr. John J. Canoles, assistant pastor, at the Novato Presbyterian Church.

He is filling the pulpit in absence of Rev. C. M. Croughan, who is attending the summer session at San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo.

Lesson-Sermon

"Preserve me, O God: for in thee do I put my trust. . . . Thou wilt shew me the path of life." This verse from Psalms is the text of this week's Christian Science lesson-sermon on "Life."

De Vicenzo Wins In Britain, Nicklaus Second

HOYLAKE, England (AP) — Roberto de Vicenzo, 44-year-old golfing gypsy from Argentina, stood off the challenge of defending titleholder Jack Nicklaus today and ended 20 years of frustration by winning the British Open Golf Championship.

The balding Latin American, runner-up in 1950 and third on four other occasions, fired a final round 70 for 278 that beat out Nicklaus by two shots. The powerful American star rammed home a 25-foot putt on the 72nd hole for a final 69 and 280.

Gary Player of South Africa, who started the last day two shots back of De Vicenzo and one ahead of Nicklaus, struggled with a cold putter, shooting a 74 for 284, which gave him a tie for third place with 22-year-old Clive Clark of England, who had a final 72.

De Vicenzo's lead was cut to two strokes by Nicklaus at the nine-hole turn, but the Argentine didn't waver.

He knocked in an eight-foot putt at the 10th hole, almost canned a putt of similar size at the 13th and then at the 515-yard, par five 15th he almost holed a chip for an eagle three.

He canned the putt easily and at this stage moved four strokes ahead of Nicklaus, with Player, De Vicenzo's partner in the pairings another stroke back.

Birdies eluded Nicklaus on the easier incoming nine and he had to go to the 16th for his first bird after birdieing the eighth and ninth. There he knocked in an eight-footer.

The putt cut De Vicenzo's lead to three, but the six-foot, powerfully-built South American never gave Big Jack an opening.

De Vicenzo and Nicklaus, at each other's throats on the 16th hole, never gave in. Nicklaus got a birdie four and then De Vicenzo matched it with a great shot.

Off the tee he was to the right and there was a wide expanse of out of bounds territory between him and the green. Roberto took a wood and the big gamble and it came off. He lofted it over the trouble and on to the heart of the green.

Two putts, and De Vicenzo was down, now ten under par and with two holes to go was three shots up on the defending champion.

The Argentine was playing behind Nicklaus when he heard a roar go up at the 72nd hole, where Jack rolled in his long birdie putt.

De Vicenzo hit a tremendous drive up the middle of the fairway, laced his approach to the green, some 20 feet away, and played safe with his putt, leaving it inches short. He sank easily for the most important victory of his life.

De Vicenzo, a strapping Latin who is rated one of the longest hitters in golf, has been an international star for two decades and a favorite of British galleries.

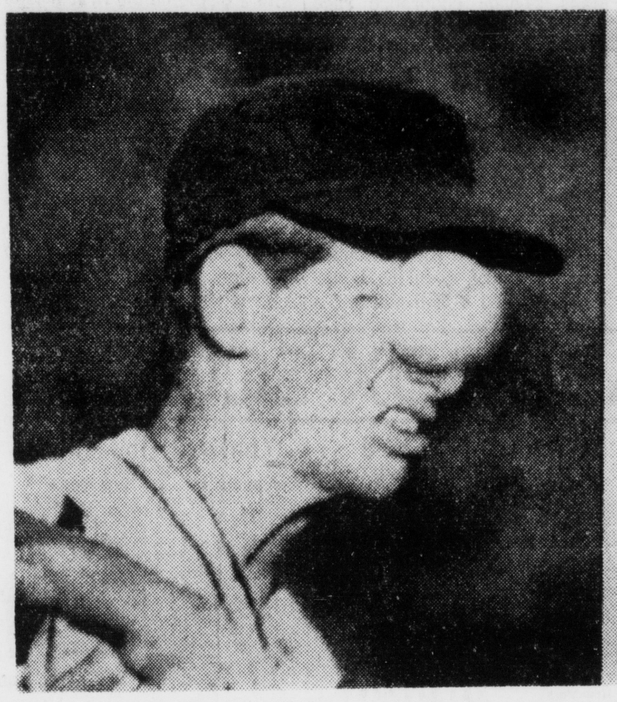
They were behind him all the way on the final round over the 6,995-yard, par 72 Royal Liverpool course.

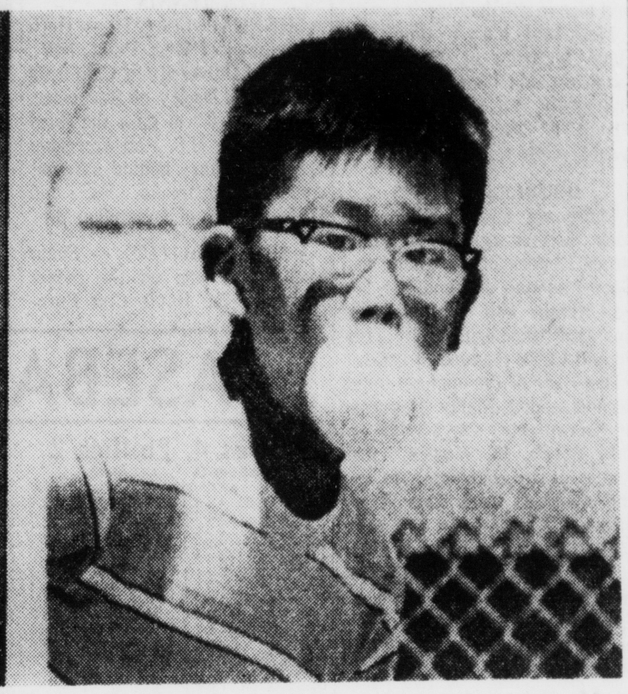
De Vicenzo has won tournaments on the American tour, captured honors in the Canada Cup international series and been a winner on four continents, but this was his first major championship.

Deane Beman of Bethesda, Md., the former U.S. and British amateur champion who recently turned pro, made a remarkable showing, shooting a final 73 for 289. He led all other Americans, except Nicklaus.

Doug Sanders of Ojai had a 73 for 290. Phil Rodgers of San Diego shot 74 and Bert Yancey of Philadelphia 79 to tie at 298.

The Night Everything Went Bad For Mays, Marichal





KEEP YOUR EYE ON THE BALL—ALMOST

Athletics can be painful when you get a faceful of ball, but that is not really what happened to these boys in Santa Rosa tournaments this week. Tennis player Ken Kawase only seemed to be volleying with his mush—actually, he won his division. Babe Ruth League pitcher Kevin McKinnie did not do as well—his team lost a consolation round game—but he was defeated by normal means and not by eating the ball. (UPI Wirephoto)

Houston Capitalized On Giants' Miseries

Willie Mays wasn't hitting the ball or catching it, and Juan Marichal couldn't get batters out. Those were the problems that faced San Francisco manager Herman Franks today.

Mays struck out twice and let a fly ball go over his head as the Houston Astros beat the Giants, 8-6, last night at Candlestick Park.

Marichal, the major league's top winner with 12 victories, gave up seven earned runs and 10 hits in five innings as he took his eighth loss of the season.

Among the hits off Marichal was the 500th homer in the career of Eddie Mathews. Mathews smashed a 390-footer over the right field fence to put Houston ahead to stay in the sixth inning.

The Giants lost to Houston for the first time in San Francisco this season. They had won five in a row.

In the final game of the series this afternoon, Mike McCormick (11-3) pitched for the Giants against Mike Cuellar 9-4 of the Astros.

Mays and Marichal were not around to discuss their problems after the game. Mays did not start last night's game, but Cline was injured in the first inning.

Willie struck out in his two times at bat, both times facing Dave Giusti.

MORE AMAZING

Even more amazing was Willie's problem in the outfield. Giusti hit a towering fly ball to centerfield that eluded Mays and went for a triple. Mays now has only one hit in his last 12 times at bat.

Trainer Leo Hughes of the Giants said Mays had a cold.

Marichal didn't look like the same pitcher who started the All-Star game in Anaheim Tuesday. He gave up two singles and then a home run to rookie Norm Miller in the fourth inning and was driven from the mound by four hits including Mathews' homer, in the sixth inning.

Marichal now has lost eight games. Last season he won 25 while losing six.

Houston continued its assault on Bob Bolin with another run in the seventh inning. The Astros collected 13 hits against five San Francisco pitchers.

If there was any hopeful note for the Giants, it was the continued batting spree of Jim Ray Hart and a spark of life in the bats of Ollie Brown, Jim Davenport, and Tito Fuentes.

Hart hit his 17th homer of the season and also had a single, Davenport drove in three runs with a triple and a homer, Fuentes whacked three straight singles, and Brown had a pair of singles.

I probably should leave this story to Walter Lippmann or Arthur Krock because political reporting is a little out of my line.

Still, everyone should be interested in good government. So I should like to comment on the triumph of the state administration in effecting an important reform in a bill signed into law the other night at Sacramento.

It's not to be compared to the Emancipation Proclamation and I don't think it's quite what Patrick Henry had in mind when he said, "As for me, give me liberty or give me death," but Gov. Reagan, whom you may remember as George Gipp or the guy who-never-got-the-girl in the old Warner Bros. westerns, has, by one stroke of the pen, made it no longer against the law for horses to work at night.

Well, Back To The 20-Mule Team

Any governor who doesn't like horses and dogs, of course, is apt to find himself back emceeing the 20-mule-team-show, or hanging around Central Casting with his tuxedo under his arm, but California politicians have long hewed to the belief that some activities which were all right in the daytime became downright immoral when the sun went down. This gave rise, among other things, to Bob Goldstein's crack that, in California, "no matter how hot it gets in the daytime, there's still nothing to do at night."

This is no longer true. You can now go down to the race track and get back 85 cents on your dollar which is a little better than walking around with a hole in your pocket, but not much.

We may now confidently expect a rash of signature-getters on every street corner in the state, and a bull market in ball-point pens. If there's one thing a Californian likes better than going around without socks on, it's signing a petition. He will sign either side of a controversy and there are firms which, for $75,000, will guarantee to get you the signature of every white, male legal-age voter in the state by 2 o'clock Sunday.

More Pay For The Goose Girl

Reagan's ploy in all this is very simple. By a single swish of the pen, he gets 7 cents of every dollar wagered in this great state at no cost to government. He has also, as it happens, enhanced the dividend prospects of Southern California Edison considerably and, because he has enlarged the racing program by 20 days a meet, he may also have put the Goose Girl in a position of bargaining for higher wages, too.

The cry will go up that the public must be protected from this open invitation to give in to their worst vices—and it will largely go up from those who wouldn't be tempted to go to the race track in the first place. It upsets them to think that such nocturnal artisans as safe-crackers, burglars, muggers and car thieves may be lured away from the practice of their

Fear Hornung May Never Play Again

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Halfback Paul Hornung of the New Orleans Saints may never play football again because of spinal cord damage, the New Orleans Times-Picayune said in a copyrighted story today.

Hornung, 31-year-old golden boy of professional football, was injured last season while with the Green Bay Packers of the National Football League. The injury, described as a pinched nerve in his neck, affected his left arm.

Bob Roesler, sports editor of the Times-Picayune, said Hornung would enter the Scripps Clinic and Research Foundation in LaJolla, Calif., Monday for another checkup.

"There is a good chance, a very strong one, that he'll not be able to play again," Roesler quoted an unidentified Saints' source as saying. "Damage to the spinal cord was first detected at Mayo Clinic. It was indicated there that a blow like one received on the football field could paralyze him for life."

If the tests are true, Hornung was quoted as saying, there would be nothing for him to do but quit.

Trans-Pac Boat Near Honolulu

By AL LOCKABY
of the
Orange Coast Daily Pilot

HONOLULU (AP) — Stormvogel and Kialoa II were two of the Class A leaders in the Trans-Pacific Yacht Race sighted sailing about 75 miles apart shortly after noon yesterday.

The two yachts were sighted by a Coast Guard plane on a sweep search of the area.

Stormvogel's position at 12:45 p.m. HST was 360 miles from the Diamond Head finish line. There was no sighting of Serena, whose noon position should have placed her within 10 miles of Kialoa II.

Cornelius Bruynzeel, skipper of Stormvogel, estimated his time of arrival at Honolulu about 3 a.m. tomorrow. But the fringes of the tropical storm Denise, moving northwest toward the race course, may provide better wind and put the leaders across the line late today.

HUGE SPINNAKERS

Stormvogel was sailing in about 18 knots of wind with her huge red, white and blue spinnaker and mizzen spinnaker drawing perfectly. Kialoa II appeared to have a little less wind on a course south of Stormvogel.

Another yacht has run into trouble. Tom Corkett's 48-foot sloop Salacia from Newport Beach, was dismasted and is continuing toward Honolulu under a jury rig. Corkett was the skipper of the 40-foot sloop Islander that won the 1963 Trans-Pacific.

Most of the Class B and C yachts reported positions 700 to 800 miles from Honolulu, and the Class D fleet was more than 800 miles out.

Destruction Derby Scheduled Tonight

A destruction derby will follow the regular hardtop races tonight at the Petaluma Fairgrounds. The derby, which lasts 15 minutes, is expected to draw about 25 cars. Qualifying for the regularly scheduled races begins at 7 p.m., with the first race at 8:15.

Clark Wins Grand Prix

SILVERSTONE, England (AP) — Jim Clark of Scotland, driving his first race in Britain in almost a year, won the British Grand Prix in a Lotus-Ford today. It was Clark's fifth triumph in Britain's premier auto race.

Dennis Hulme of New Zealand was second in a Brabham. Another New Zealander, Chris Amon, in the lone Italian Ferrari, was third.

Clark covered the 233.6 miles in 1 hour, 59 minutes, 256 seconds, an average speed of 117.64 miles an hour.

Dan Gurney of Costa Mesa, Calif., driving an Eagle, was forced out on the 29th lap by mechanical trouble. He was the only American in the 20-car field. Only 10 finished.

Mel Ott Next Goal For Eddie Mathews

"I wish it would have come against the Braves," Eddie Mathews commented after he hit the 500th homer of his Major League career, against the San Francisco Giants last night.

Mathews hit his historic homer off Juan Marichal in the sixth inning and it put the Houston Astros ahead for the final time in an 8-6 victory.

"Don't ask me how many I hope to hit," Mathews said as he popped the cork of a bottle of champagne in the dressing room.

"It was tough enough to get this one. I was trying to hit it in Philadelphia and then against Chicago, but didn't. When I got to San Francisco I thought I would forget about it and just swing the bat."

Mathews, who starred for many years with the Braves in Boston, Milwaukee and Atlanta, said his luck against Marichal has not been particularly good in the past. But he said he has had some success against him.

HIT FAST BALL

"He has a good screwball to left-handed hitters. But I hit a fast ball."

The homer was caught beyond the right field fence by Wayne Nichols, a 17-year-old high school student. He was introduced to Mathews and given another baseball and $50 to replace the one he gave to the Houston star.

Mathews said he expected the pressure to start building as he closed in on Mel Ott's homer total of 511. Ott stands third on the all-time list of left-handed home run hitters.

"Don't start that stuff already," Mathews said. "I'd like to pass Ott and I think with any luck I can this season."

Mathews' boyhood idol was Ted Williams, although he never saw the Boston star play.

Ironically, Mathews may pass Williams in the home run derby. Williams finished his career with 521 homers.

Mathews recalled his first major league homer which came against Ken Heintzelman of Philadelphia in 1952.

"Our manager at Boston (Tommy Holmes) was getting ready to bench me until I hit the homer," Mathews said.

Eddie was philosophical about the plateau he has reached.

"No matter how many homers you hit, someone else comes along to pass you," he said.

Mathews hit his 499th homer off Ray Culp of the Chicago Cubs July 8. He said he was happy he hit his 500th homer in Candlestick Park where the wind favors a left-handed hitter.

"If I had hit that ball in the Astrodome, I would still be running," he said. "I don't think it would have been a home run there."

Wills To Undergo Surgery On Knee

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Pittsburgh Pirates third baseman Maury Wills said yesterday he will undergo surgery at the end of this season for removal of cartilage from his right knee.

Wills said he first hurt the knee in 1966 during a run-down with New York Mets pitcher Jack Fisher. Earlier this season, Wills said, Ray Sadecki of the San Francisco Giants "hit me in the same spot."

"I can't blame him for my troubles, though," Wills added. "I haven't run as daringly for this club," said the former Los Angeles Dodger, "for fear of failure."

"When I have the cartilage taken out," Wills said, "I'll be the player I think I am."

I probably should leave this story to Walter Lippmann or Arthur Krock because political reporting is a little out of my line.

Still, everyone should be interested in good government. So I should like to comment on the triumph of the state administration in effecting an important reform in a bill signed into law the other night at Sacramento.

It's not to be compared to the Emancipation Proclamation and I don't think it's quite what Patrick Henry had in mind when he said, "As for me, give me liberty or give me death," but Gov. Reagan, whom you may remember as George Gipp or the guy who-never-got-the-girl in the old Warner Bros. westerns, has, by one stroke of the pen, made it no longer against the law for horses to work at night.

Well, Back To The 20-Mule Team

Any governor who doesn't like horses and dogs, of course, is apt to find himself back emceeing the 20-mule-team-show, or hanging around Central Casting with his tuxedo under his arm, but California politicians have long hewed to the belief that some activities which were all right in the daytime became downright immoral when the sun went down. This gave rise, among other things, to Bob Goldstein's crack that, in California, "no matter how hot it gets in the daytime, there's still nothing to do at night."

This is no longer true. You can now go down to the race track and get back 85 cents on your dollar which is a little better than walking around with a hole in your pocket, but not much.

We may now confidently expect a rash of signature-getters on every street corner in the state, and a bull market in ball-point pens. If there's one thing a Californian likes better than going around without socks on, it's signing a petition. He will sign either side of a controversy and there are firms which, for $75,000, will guarantee to get you the signature of every white, male legal-age voter in the state by 2 o'clock Sunday.

More Pay For The Goose Girl

Reagan's ploy in all this is very simple. By a single swish of the pen, he gets 7 cents of every dollar wagered in this great state at no cost to government. He has also, as it happens, enhanced the dividend prospects of Southern California Edison considerably and, because he has enlarged the racing program by 20 days a meet, he may also have put the Goose Girl in a position of bargaining for higher wages, too.

The cry will go up that the public must be protected from this open invitation to give in to their worst vices—and it will largely go up from those who wouldn't be tempted to go to the race track in the first place. It upsets them to think that such nocturnal artisans as safe-crackers, burglars, muggers and car thieves may be lured away from the practice of their

Fear Hornung May Never Play Again

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Halfback Paul Hornung of the New Orleans Saints may never play football again because of spinal cord damage, the New Orleans Times-Picayune said in a copyrighted story today.

Hornung, 31-year-old golden boy of professional football, was injured last season while with the Green Bay Packers of the National Football League. The injury, described as a pinched nerve in his neck, affected his left arm.

Bob Roesler, sports editor of the Times-Picayune, said Hornung would enter the Scripps Clinic and Research Foundation in LaJolla, Calif., Monday for another checkup.

"There is a good chance, a very strong one, that he'll not be able to play again," Roesler quoted an unidentified Saints' source as saying. "Damage to the spinal cord was first detected at Mayo Clinic. It was indicated there that a blow like one received on the football field could paralyze him for life."

If the tests are true, Hornung was quoted as saying, there would be nothing for him to do but quit.

Trans-Pac Boat Near Honolulu

By AL LOCKABY
of the
Orange Coast Daily Pilot

HONOLULU (AP) — Stormvogel and Kialoa II were two of the Class A leaders in the Trans-Pacific Yacht Race sighted sailing about 75 miles apart shortly after noon yesterday.

The two yachts were sighted by a Coast Guard plane on a sweep search of the area.

Stormvogel's position at 12:45 p.m. HST was 360 miles from the Diamond Head finish line. There was no sighting of Serena, whose noon position should have placed her within 10 miles of Kialoa II.

Cornelius Bruynzeel, skipper of Stormvogel, estimated his time of arrival at Honolulu about 3 a.m. tomorrow. But the fringes of the tropical storm Denise, moving northwest toward the race course, may provide better wind and put the leaders across the line late today.

HUGE SPINNAKERS

Stormvogel was sailing in about 18 knots of wind with her huge red, white and blue spinnaker and mizzen spinnaker drawing perfectly. Kialoa II appeared to have a little less wind on a course south of Stormvogel.

Another yacht has run into trouble. Tom Corkett's 48-foot sloop Salacia from Newport Beach, was dismasted and is continuing toward Honolulu under a jury rig. Corkett was the skipper of the 40-foot sloop Islander that won the 1963 Trans-Pacific.

Most of the Class B and C yachts reported positions 700 to 800 miles from Honolulu, and the Class D fleet was more than 800 miles out.

Destruction Derby Scheduled Tonight

A destruction derby will follow the regular hardtop races tonight at the Petaluma Fairgrounds. The derby, which lasts 15 minutes, is expected to draw about 25 cars. Qualifying for the regularly scheduled races begins at 7 p.m., with the first race at 8:15.

Clark Wins Grand Prix

SILVERSTONE, England (AP) — Jim Clark of Scotland, driving his first race in Britain in almost a year, won the British Grand Prix in a Lotus-Ford today. It was Clark's fifth triumph in Britain's premier auto race.

Dennis Hulme of New Zealand was second in a Brabham. Another New Zealander, Chris Amon, in the lone Italian Ferrari, was third.

Clark covered the 233.6 miles in 1 hour, 59 minutes, 256 seconds, an average speed of 117.64 miles an hour.

Dan Gurney of Costa Mesa, Calif., driving an Eagle, was forced out on the 29th lap by mechanical trouble. He was the only American in the 20-car field. Only 10 finished.

Mel Ott Next Goal For Eddie Mathews

"I wish it would have come against the Braves," Eddie Mathews commented after he hit the 500th homer of his Major League career, against the San Francisco Giants last night.

Mathews hit his historic homer off Juan Marichal in the sixth inning and it put the Houston Astros ahead for the final time in an 8-6 victory.

"Don't ask me how many I hope to hit," Mathews said as he popped the cork of a bottle of champagne in the dressing room.

"It was tough enough to get this one. I was trying to hit it in Philadelphia and then against Chicago, but didn't. When I got to San Francisco I thought I would forget about it and just swing the bat."

Mathews, who starred for many years with the Braves in Boston, Milwaukee and Atlanta, said his luck against Marichal has not been particularly good in the past. But he said he has had some success against him.

HIT FAST BALL

"He has a good screwball to left-handed hitters. But I hit a fast ball."

The homer was caught beyond the right field fence by Wayne Nichols, a 17-year-old high school student. He was introduced to Mathews and given another baseball and $50 to replace the one he gave to the Houston star.

Mathews said he expected the pressure to start building as he closed in on Mel Ott's homer total of 511. Ott stands third on the all-time list of left-handed home run hitters.

"Don't start that stuff already," Mathews said. "I'd like to pass Ott and I think with any luck I can this season."

Mathews' boyhood idol was Ted Williams, although he never saw the Boston star play.

Ironically, Mathews may pass Williams in the home run derby. Williams finished his career with 521 homers.

Mathews recalled his first major league homer which came against Ken Heintzelman of Philadelphia in 1952.

"Our manager at Boston (Tommy Holmes) was getting ready to bench me until I hit the homer," Mathews said.

Eddie was philosophical about the plateau he has reached.

"No matter how many homers you hit, someone else comes along to pass you," he said.

Mathews hit his 499th homer off Ray Culp of the Chicago Cubs July 8. He said he was happy he hit his 500th homer in Candlestick Park where the wind favors a left-handed hitter.

"If I had hit that ball in the Astrodome, I would still be running," he said. "I don't think it would have been a home run there."

Wills To Undergo Surgery On Knee

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Pittsburgh Pirates third baseman Maury Wills said yesterday he will undergo surgery at the end of this season for removal of cartilage from his right knee.

Wills said he first hurt the knee in 1966 during a run-down with New York Mets pitcher Jack Fisher. Earlier this season, Wills said, Ray Sadecki of the San Francisco Giants "hit me in the same spot."

"I can't blame him for my troubles, though," Wills added.

"I haven't run as daringly for this club," said the former Los Angeles Dodger, "for fear of failure."

"When I have the cartilage taken out," Wills said, "I'll be the player I think I am."

Bee Kilgore Wins Title At Belvedere

Bee Kilgore of Tiburon, a star pupil at the Belvedere Tennis Club, was the only Marin player to win in the final singles round yesterday of the Belvedere Junior Tennis Tournament.

She downed Sue Mehmedbasich of El Cerrito, 6-3, 6-2, to win the Girls' age 12 championship. The two girls then teamed to win the Girl's 12 doubles title with a 4-6, 6-3, 6-4 win over Marcie O'Keefe and Nancy Marx of Los Altos.

Steve McDonald of Tiburon and the Belvedere club lost in the Boys' 16 singles final but won in the doubles, while Bob Knight, with the same affiliations, lost in the Boys' 14 singles and also in the doubles.

McDonald gave top-seeded Dave McBride of Berkeley a tough set and then lost the second easily, 7-5, 6-1, while Chip Fisher of Palo Alto had no trouble with Knight, 6-1, 6-0.

DOUBLES CHAMPS

McDonald and McBride won their doubles title by downing Bruce Kellock of Richmond and Gary Fairman of Reno, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4. Knight and Ren Kern of Los Altos were crushed by Fisher and Chris Couture, 6-3, 6-1.

Don Beer of Carmichael upset second-seeded Marty Hennessy of Sacramento, 6-4, 6-3, to win the Boys' 18 singles, then teamed with Hennessey to win the doubles. They beat Mike Miller of Sacramento and Allen Margot of Porterville, 8-6, 6-1.

Vicki Kiyomura of San Mateo won the Girls' 18 singles with a 6-1, 6-3, drubbing of Karen Kop of Honolulu.

TREK TO UKIAH

San Rafael Braves Hope To Hike Lead

San Rafael Braves, leading the Coastal Division of the Western Baseball Association by four full games, take to the road for three games this weekend in Ukiah.

Ron Denslage of USF will pitch tonight's game for San Rafael against the last place Ukiah nine. Manager Joe Anselmo will send Ben Burch (5-1) and Keith Walters (2-0) to the mound in tomorrow's noon doubleheader.

Burch and Walters are leading the San Rafael mound corps. Walters with an 0.57 earned run average and 22 strikeouts in 16 innings, and Burch with a 2.73 ERA and 45 whiffs in 33 innings.

San Rafael is hitting .308 as a team, with 10 players over the .300 mark. Doug Wilson, after a big weekend series against Santa Rosa last week, jumped into the team leadership with an average of .410.

SOFTBALL

Two Marin Teams Enter Tournament

Sohner Tree Service softball team of San Anselmo and the Lady Lea Salon club of San Rafael will open play this weekend in the Tri-County District Tournament at Santa Rosa.

The champion of the double elimination tourney will move on to the State tournament later this month.

The Santa Rosa tourney has 10 teams from Marin, Sonoma and Mendocino counties. Lady Lea will begin action today against Sebastopol and the winner will play Sohner at 3 p.m. tomorrow. The tournament will conclude next Saturday.

Sohner won the Tri-County in 1965 to become the first Marin team in 17 years to play in the state tourney. Injuries on the pitching staff may be the biggest handicap for the Treemen this year.

Their ace, Morey Swarm, is just regaining his top form after a ruptured appendix suddenly sidelined him in May. His older brother, Gary, is at the same stage of convalescence after missing three weeks in June with tendonitis in his pitching arm.

Sohner has called on veteran Dave Schallenberger to hurl in the emergency and may again this week.

The veteran Jess Munyon, most valuable player in the 1965 Tri-County tourney, will be behind the plate for the Treemen.

All-Marin Babe Ruth Loop Finals

The Central Marin All-Stars took advantage of the only two errors in the game last night to break up a sizzling pitching duel and stay alive in the Santa Rosa tournament with a 5-3 victory over the Concord National League All-Stars.

Central Marin hurler Roger Smith and Concord's Russ Shoven battled on even terms through nine innings before sloppy infield play betrayed Shoven in the 10th, the third extra frame.

Leadoff batter John Boro was safe on an infield error, the first of the well-played game. Steve Wentworth bunted and was safe at first as Boro proceeded to second; but the Concord first baseman, trying to get Wentworth at first, threw the ball into right field. The rightfielder was playing Wentworth in right-center and by the time he retrieved the ball Boro had scored and Wentworth was at third.

SQUEEZE BUNT

Pete Carroll then dropped a squeeze bunt to bring in Wentworth.

Central Marin's Stars thus proceeded to a rematch today with the Novato All-Stars, who beat them 4-2 Wednesday. A Novato victory in the afternoon game will end the tourney, but if Central Marin wins the two teams will play again at 8 tonight for the title.

Probable pitchers this afternoon were Russ Dillon for Novato and Tom Wickert for Central Marin.

They will have to be tough to beat the performance of Smith and poor Shoven, who struck-out 16. Smith fanned 15 himself and retired the last 14 batters he faced.

Shoven really fired in the fifth after Central Marin scored twice to tie the game. With the bases loaded and no outs, he fanned the side.

camp at San Diego, on July 8. He went to the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., for three days of tests and returned to San Diego on Thursday.

John W. Mecom Jr., president of the Saints, was reluctant to comment on the possibility that Hornung's career with the club might be over even before it began.

Mecom, who was in San Diego, said "I just can't make a formal statement until the results are completely in."

Hornung would be able to lead a "pretty normal life" out of football, the newspaper quoted a source as saying, "but with this report from Mayo, I don't see how Paul would want to risk football any more, regardless of what might be learned at Scripps."

Hornung, All-America quarterback and 1956 Heisman Trophy winner at Notre Dame, switched to halfback in 1958, his second year with the Packers. He was named the Most Valuable Player of the NFL in 1959 and 1960 and made the all-pro team three times.

Although Hornung played in only nine games last season because of his injury, the Saints had received favorable reports of his progress and picked him anyway.

And Then Things Just Got Worse..

HOYLAKE, England (AP) — Jimmy Martin, 37-year-old Irish professional, will remember today's final round of the British Open golf championship for quite a while.

He started the day at 228, 12 over par, and then things got worse.

On the 426-yard second hole, Martin's second shot hit the rough. His third went through the green into jungle. After three fruitless hacks, he declared the lie unplayable. That made him eight up to there. He chipped on in nine and two putted for an eleven.

natural skills and gifts and fritter away their evenings poring over scratch sheets.

I will, as I say, leave the sociological implications to the Krocks and Lippmanns, but the sporting application is able to be told in words of much smaller wattage. The only sporting excuse for racing is that it occupies man in the highly laudable endeavor of putting a better breed of horses in his barn. You may have noticed a significant story in the prints the other morning that the only two really first-rate horses in the state—Forli and Pretense—will shortly ship back East because, once Hollywood Park closes, every other race out here is for oat money.

We Won't Need A Cuckoo Clock

With increased racing and with (hopefully) one major racing plant operating in San Francisco, horsemen whose stables must gross a million a year for a break-even operation will be able to ship out here now and remain here, and we may see an end to selling platers winning $100,000 races, and Caliente sprinters lasting a mile-and-a-half because there's nothing in the race you couldn't time with an eight-day cuckoo clock.

Of course, this is of principal benefit to the horses, and there are those who feel they should come secondary to humans. I'm not sure I'll go along with this, but I suppose I must concede there are those who have been known to shoot the rent money or skip the doctor bills in favor of the $10 window. The late Joe Frisco was one who shattered the Tiny Tim legend one Christmas when he floated a small loan from Eddie Foy to buy a holiday turkey. Sometime later, as Eddie was overcome with hunger pangs, he braced Joe and demanded to know where the turkey was. "The t-turkey," stammered Joe, "b-b-broke d-d-down in the s-s-stretch. B-besides, the b-b-boy g-g-gave him a b-b-bad r-r-ride."

If Joe were alive today he would sign a petition to keep the tracks open round the clock the year round and make it illegal for anybody to make automobiles at night.

Softball Managers To Meet On Monday

Bee Kilgore Wins Title At Belvedere

Bee Kilgore of Tiburon, a star pupil at the Belvedere Tennis Club, was the only Marin player to win in the final singles round yesterday of the Belvedere Junior Tennis Tournament.

She downed Sue Mehmedbasich of El Cerrito, 6-3, 6-2, to win the Girls' age 12 championship. The two girls then teamed to win the Girl's 12 doubles title with a 4-6, 6-3, 6-4 win over Marcie O'Keefe and Nancy Marx of Los Altos.

Steve McDonald of Tiburon and the Belvedere club lost in the Boys' 16 singles final but won in the doubles, while Bob Knight, with the same affiliations, lost in the Boys' 14 singles and also in the doubles.

McDonald gave top-seeded Dave McBride of Berkeley a tough set and then lost the second easily, 7-5, 6-1, while Chip Fisher of Palo Alto had no trouble with Knight, 6-1, 6-0.

DOUBLES CHAMPS

McDonald and McBride won their doubles title by downing Bruce Kellock of Richmond and Gary Fairman of Reno, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4. Knight and Ren Kern of Los Altos were crushed by Fisher and Chris Couture, 6-3, 6-1.

Don Beer of Carmichael upset second-seeded Marty Hennessy of Sacramento, 6-4, 6-3, to win the Boys' 18 singles, then teamed with Hennessey to win the doubles. They beat Mike Miller of Sacramento and Allen Margot of Porterville, 8-6, 6-1.

Vicki Kiyomura of San Mateo won the Girls' 18 singles with a 6-1, 6-3, drubbing of Karen Kop of Honolulu.

Marin Skipper Loses Title; Raider Rookie Show Spirit

HANKOE, Norway (AP) — William S. Widnall of Boston won the International one-design sailing championship today, as defending champion Jake Wosser of Tiburon finished far back in the running.

FOOTBALL

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Lions announced yesterday that veteran tackle Charlie Bradshaw has decided not to retire this year, but another tackle, Daryl Sanders, is sticking to his retirement plans.

SANTA ROSA (UPI) — Oakland Raider coach John Rauch expressed pleasure at the spirited way his players went about their conditioning exercises yesterday.

TENNIS

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Herb Fitzgibbon of West Point, N.Y., defeated University of California ace Chuck Darley of Rochester, Minn., 6-2, 6-3 to gain the third spot on the U.S. Pan-American Games team behind Arthur Ashe of Richmond, Va., and Bailey Brown of Annapolis, Md.

BARCELONA (AP) — Spain took a 2-0 lead on the Soviet Union in the Davis Cup European Zone A as Manuel Santana waxed Tomas Lejus, 6-3, 6-4, 6-1 and Juan Gisbert overhauled Alexander Metrevelli, 3-6, 2-6, 6-3, 7-5, 6-2.

SPORTS SHORTS

TRACK and FIELD

LONDON (AP) — Ed Burke of San Jose, Calif., won the British AAU hammer throw yesterday with a toss of 221 feet, nine inches.

AUTO RACING

DETROIT (AP) — The Ford Motor Company announced it would not enter cars in the Le Mans 24-hour endurance race next year, after winning it the past two years. A ruling by the Federation Internationale d'Automobile limiting engine size to 3.0 liters may have precipitated the withdrawal by Ford, whose engine this year was 7.0 liters.

SILVERSTONE, England (AP) — Graham Hill of London escaped injury when his Lotus-Ford rammed a wall and lost a wheel in practice for today's British Grand Prix.

GOLF

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Shirley Engelhorn and Clifford Ann Creed tied Kathy Whitworth for the second-round lead in the Ladies PGA tourney with scores of 143, three under par.

SEATTLE (AP)—Mike Zimmerman of Kettering, Ohio, held the lead in the National Public Links tourney despite a ragged third round of 74, four over par, for a total of 212, two over for 54 holes. Vern Callison of Sacramento was tied for fourth with 215.

KIAMESHA, N.Y. (AP) — Tommy Bolt beat Art Wall Jr. with a birdie on the first hole of a sudden death playoff in the 36-hole Concord Invitational tournament.

SOCCER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Washington's Ally Shewan inadvertently kicked the winning goal to give the Los Angeles Wolves a 6-5 victory over the Whips in a sudden death overtime for the U.S. Soccer Association championship.

A Test Of Integrity Over Patronage System

Almost every politician on the state level must engage in a certain amount of wheeling, dealing and horsetrading to get things done in Sacramento.

There is nothing sinister or dishonest in the use of these tactics to maneuver a controversial piece of legislation through a committee or on the Assembly or Senate floor.

Arm twisting and the use of the "You vote for my bill and I'll vote for yours" type of tactic is an accepted part of the daily operations in the State Captol.

A favor done by one legislator for another is often used as a lever to get a favor in return when the former needs support on a squeaky bill that he considers important to himself and to his constituents.

It is only when an important moral principle is at stake that the integrity of a politician is put to the real test.

One such principle is being put to the acid test in Sacramento right now, and all eyes are focused on the principal involved to see if he will buckle under pressure. So far he hasn't.

We refer to the campaign promises made by Controller Houston I. Flournoy when he toook on the "impossible" job of trying to oust the highly popular Alan Cranston from the Controller's post last November.

Voters will recall that Flournoy made a key campaign issue of the fact that existing law allows the state controller to hand-pick some 150 inheritance tax appraisers.

These were political patronage jobs, pure and simple.

Long before Cranston's time, it was the accepted practice for state controllers to reward their political backers with one of the inheritance tax appraiser's jobs, which brought annual incomes of up to $50,000 and $60,000.

The only qualification needed to land one of the jobs was loyalty to the State Controller, and contributions for his election and re-election.

To young Flournoy, 37, a professor of government at Pomona College as well as an Assemblyman, this political patronage system was repugnant. True, it did provide an "issue" which every challenger needs to successfully buck against a popular incumbent well-entrenched in government. But the issue was not one created merely for convenience; it was ideally suited to the thinking of Flournoy — the intellectual, the educator.

He was obviously sincere when he promised the voters that if he were elected, he would abolish this "last vestige of the spoils system in California politics."

To the surprise of nearly everyone, including himself, Flournoy suddenly found himself swept into office.

But soon after he moved into Sacramento, political tongues began to wag about how Flournoy would "see things a little different" now that he is in office. He had inherited a ready-made political patronage system, just as each of his predecessors had done.

Many cynics predicted that Flournoy would now make only a token effort to abolish the patronage system, and having failed, would then sit back to enjoy the benefits that come from picking your friends and political backers and firing your enemies.

But from the opening session of the Legislature this year, Flournoy and his former colleague in the Assembly Bill Bagley of San Rafael, began pushing for a bill to reform the inheritance tax appraiser system.

The reform bill met stiff resistance, not only in the committee hearings but also behind the scenes.

Those who felt that the spoils belonged to the election winners began putting pressure on Controller Flournoy to appoint "loyal friends" to the lucrative inheritance tax appraiser posts.

When it became evident that the new controller was going to insist on ability and qualification rather than purely on political loyalty, some of the powers that be in Sacramento became indignant. They decided to put the "youg upstart" in his place.

During discussions on the budget, one of the committees deliberately knocked out of the budget two of the Controller's personal appointees.

The controller's aides were eventually put back on the payroll, but the implied warning was clear: "Either you cooperate with us, or we'll make it tough on you."

Through it all, Flournoy has refused to compromise on his principle. Although legislative efforts have failed, he is apparently intent on reforming the system administratively, by giving qualifying examinations to all inheritance tax appraisers so that political support and loyalty will no longer be the primary criterion.

We need more such integrity in government.

AIDS MENTAL HEALTH

A key factor in healthy, happy childhood is two-way comunication between parents and children.

This finding emerged from a study by doctors at the Michael Reese Medical Center in Chicago.

The investigation was stimulated by the larger number of emotional disturbed children who complained that they did not understand their parents.

The fathers and mothers of relatively normal children showed a keen insight into their self-descriptions. Moreover, their youngsters clearly grasped their parents' expectations.

Among disturbed children, however, such was not the case.

Endless things have been written, discussed and urged on the need for communication in families. What remains is for each of us to reach out and sincerely try to "get through" to others.

The Lord is well aware of our limitations. And He will unfailingly aid us in the sometimes difficult taks of communicating.

Emergency Handled With Top Efficiency

Editor, Independent-Journal:

On July 1, a friend named Conrad Reinhardt fell from the deck of my home in Forest Knolls, opening up a six inch wound in his head and cutting some arteries. After applying a cold compress, my nephew and I put him in a car and headed for the hospital. My son called the Fairfax Police Department and asked for an escort. Officer D. Carver met us at the city limits of Fairfax. We transferred the injured man into the police car. This officer radioed ahead to the other units who cleared the way to the hospital. He also checked with the hospital to make sure that they would be ready for this emergency.

As everyone knows, the Fourth of July weekend is cause for a huge traffic jam in Ross due to the Art and Garden Fair. The police had cleared the way for us. We made it to the hospital and Dr. E. W. Miller said that we didn't have much time to spare.

My heartfelt thanks to Officer Carver for his skillful driving and fast thinking in this crisis and to all the police units, the telephone operator, Dr. Miller and all who helped in saving this man's life. As a result, the Reinhardt family still have their father and I still have my friend.

Fire Hazard Review Liked

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I have just read your June 27 editorial on forest fire hazards and want to express my appreciation for pointing out the fire hazards we all face this year.

California has experienced an unusually wet winter, and we of the Forest Service are concerned that people may not understand the critical fire situation that faces us this summer. Heavy winter rains have brought unusually dense stands of grass. This in turn creates more fuel which compounds the dangers once a fire starts.

Last year the state experienced huge losses to wild fires. Approximately 7,500 fires were recorded throughout California and 300,000 acres were burned. Such losses shouldn't be tolerated.

Your comments point up this problem, and we do want to thank you for reminding your readers of this important fact.

Memories Of A Second Deck

Editor, Independent-Journal:

L. K. SMith's letter in the July 8 I-J regarding the second deck for the Golden Gate Bridge brings back memories. Ah, seems like yesterday people were asking such questions as:

Why not do something about the San Rafael bottleneck first?

Why not make the Greyhound service worth the fare?

Why not move businesses out of cramped, backward San Francisco and into Marin?

Why not improve the approaches to the bridge in San Francisco as well as Marin?

Why not try a system of charging a higher toll for cars that cross with just one person in them?

Why add a deck when one will be virtually barren during commute hours?

Why not make it eight lanes on top and eight on the bottom while we're at it?

The final question is, of course, facetious because the previous one is the absolute truth. Five lanes during the rush hour? We have four now. And the number of people commuting in the opposite direction certainly doesn't warrant more than one lane, much less a whole deck.

The only question really answered concerns moving businesses out of San Francisco. See how the freeway-haters like them apples! Some businesses have been in a position to do this.

Greyhound hasn't tried to improve its service. It gets to pay the cheapest toll imaginable (13 cents a busload) and still can't make it go? If they didn't close up shop at 6 p.m. at the Ferry Building and raise the rates out of proportion ($24 a month from Walnut Creek; $26.50 for 40 rides from Novato, not even a full month!), they might get a few more riders who could stomach broken, unpadded seats and 28 miles of fumes.

Instead of spending thousands of our tax dollars on "studies" that prove what we've known all along, the County Supervisors should spend some getting more than one person into each car during commute hours. Even two would help. And some more tax dollars could go toward a third lane on each side of the divider between San Rafael and the Civic Center. I thought they were planning to widen that stretch when they made so many one-way streets in San Rafael.

Congo Plane Order Given Only After Extensive Consultation

WASHINGTON (AP) — It seemed so simple.

Congo President Joseph D. Mobutu asked this country for some cargo planes to help him put down a revolt led by white mercenaries and rebel Congolese troops about 1,000 miles northeast of Kinsasha, the capital.

THIS DOESN'T sound complicated. This government had publicly proclaimed support of Mobutu's regime.

So, it might seem, all Mobutu had to do was ask for help again. But this was where it got complicated

Mobutu sent his request Thursday, July 6, through a cablegram to his ambassador in Washington. The ambassador took it to the State Department at the same time the department was being told of Mobutu's request in a cablegram from Robert McBride, the U.S. ambassador in the Congo.

The next day McBride followed up his first cablegram with another, saying he approved.

Meanwhile, the request had to go through the process at the State Department. There it went to the Bureau of African Affairs where it got the instant attention of the bureau's Congo task force, headed by Dean Brown.

IT WAS DISCUSSED and huddled over by the members of the bureau and the task force and by Wayne Frederick, acting secretary of state for African affairs.

Meanwhile, there had been trips to the office of Rusk who also conferred with some of the top people around him. Finally the bureau and task force approved, and so notified Frederick, who also approved and so notified Rusk.

Rusk, who had been in touch with Johnson by phone, also approved. So did Johnson. The decision to go ahead was reached Saturday, July 8. But before there could be any public announcement, Johnson told Rusk, key members of Congress had to be informed. They were, and the announcement was made Sunday, July 9.

But the State Department doesn't have transport planes, so meanwhile it has to discuss the problem with the Department of Defense. This was done by contacting the Defense Departments Office for International Security, headed by Assistant Secretary John McNaughton.

THEN THE Mobutu request, along with the State Depatment's thinking, went to the Joint Chiefs of Staff and to Paul H. Nitze, acting secretary of defense at the time since Robert S. McNamara, the secretary of defense, was in Vietnam.

Nitze and the Joint Chiefs concurred with the State Department. Now all that was needed was to send the planes. The Joint Chiefs' order to do this was sent to the S.S. Strike Command at MacDill Air Force base, Tampa, Fla.

The strike command is responsible for keeping military personnel in readiness for instant service anywhere.

Ordrs also went to the Tactical Air Command at Langley Field, Va., and to the Continental Army Command at nearby Ft. Monroe, Va., and, if this isn't complicated enough, the planes — Three four-engine transports—took off late Saturday from Pope Aair Force Base in North Carolina.

They had about 126 troops aboard, some mechanics and some paratroopers to guard the planes when Mobutu sent them where he wanted them to go. Neither the planes nor the men were supposed to get involved anywhere close to the direct action.

SOME OF the top Democrats and Republicans in Congress expressed dismay at this action, fearing it might mean involvement in another war, but George Christian, said the matter had been studied at great length before the decision was made.

Segregation Getting Worse In Suburbs

By WHITNEY M. YOUNG JR.

America's suburbs are becoming increasingly segregated. Chicago's suburbs, for example, have a Negro population of about 3 per cent while the city itself is over one fourth Negro. The majority of Washington, D.C.'s population is Negro, but its suburbs are only about 6 per cent Negro.

THIS IS an intolerable situation. Negroes are forced into overcrowded ghettos because discrimination in housing prevents them from living elsewhere. In addition to the damage done to the quality of American life by such segregation, further damage is done to the economic opportunities open to Negro citizens.

More than half of all new industrial and office construction has been outside the cities, putting jobs out of reach for the urban poor and the unemployed. If this trend continues, Negroes will find themselves in an even greater economic crisis than the present one. It makes no sense for public housing projects to be built in overcrowded city ghettos when space and land and jobs are plentiful outside the city boundaries.

THE WALLS the suburbs have built to isolate themselves from the reality of democratic life will have to crumble from pressures from businesses whose newly relocated plants need workers, and from government, which should no longer tolerate housing segregation.

While there is much debate over the government's role in ending housing discrimination, there was no debate when the government took steps which ensured racial segregation in housing. The Federal Housing Administration at one time encouraged the use of restrictive covenants to keep minority groups out of desirable neighborhoods, and throughout the '30's and 40's, other government agencies sold houses or backed mortgages on a racist basis.

WHEN THESE policies were combined with the massive roadbuilding which, after the war, made the suburbs accessible to most Americans, the result was to freeze racist patterns into suburban life. Although federal policies have been reversed, the damage has been done, and 80 per cent of all new homes built in America are built in suburbs from which Negroes are often excluded.

What has been done can be undone. Negroes must aggressively seek new housing outside the ghetto or become further victimized by overpriced and overcrowded housing. The Urban League's Operation Equality program assists Negroes to move to better housing and gives white citizens the opportunity to desegregate their communities by helping Negroes obtain decent housing on an equal basis.

IT IS HEARTENING that many people are rallying around the flag of equal housing opportunity. Builder Morris Milgrim has been a pioneer in housing integration. William J. Levitt, whose company once sold homes to whites only, told a Congressional committee that "since we began to sell on an open occupancy basis" its sales had grown five-fold, with complete acceptance by white homeowners.

THE REAL DANGER to homeowners resisting integrated housing is the loss of the diversity which enlivens a neighborhood and makes it interesting, and the loss of the democratic values their families need in order to endure in a world of many races and backgrounds.

On July 1, a friend named Conrad Reinhardt fell from the deck of my home in Forest Knolls, opening up a six inch wound in his head and cutting some arteries. After applying a cold compress, my nephew and I put him in a car and headed for the hospital. My son called the Fairfax Police Department and asked for an escort. Officer D. Carver met us at the city limits of Fairfax. We transferred the injured man into the police car. This officer radioed ahead to the other units who cleared the way to the hospital. He also checked with the hospital to make sure that they would be ready for this emergency.

As everyone knows, the Fourth of July weekend is cause for a huge traffic jam in Ross due to the Art and Garden Fair. The police had cleared the way for us. We made it to the hospital and Dr. E. W. Miller said that we didn't have much time to spare.

My heartfelt thanks to Officer Carver for his skillful driving and fast thinking in this crisis and to all the police units, the telephone operator, Dr. Miller and all who helped in saving this man's life. As a result, the Reinhardt family still have their father and I still have my friend.

Fire Hazard Review Liked

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I have just read your June 27 editorial on forest fire hazards and want to express my appreciation for pointing out the fire hazards we all face this year.

California has experienced an unusually wet winter, and we of the Forest Service are concerned that people may not understand the critical fire situation that faces us this summer. Heavy winter rains have brought unusually dense stands of grass. This in turn creates more fuel which compounds the dangers once a fire starts.

Last year the state experienced huge losses to wild fires. Approximately 7,500 fires were recorded throughout California and 300,000 acres were burned. Such losses shouldn't be tolerated.

Your comments point up this problem, and we do want to thank you for reminding your readers of this important fact.

Memories Of A Second Deck

Editor, Independent-Journal:

L. K. SMith's letter in the July 8 I-J regarding the second deck for the Golden Gate Bridge brings back memories. Ah, seems like yesterday people were asking such questions as:

Why not do something about the San Rafael bottleneck first?

Why not make the Greyhound service worth the fare?

Why not move businesses out of cramped, backward San Francisco and into Marin?

Why not improve the approaches to the bridge in San Francisco as well as Marin?

Why not try a system of charging a higher toll for cars that cross with just one person in them?

Why add a deck when one will be virtually barren during commute hours?

Why not make it eight lanes on top and eight on the bottom while we're at it?

The final question is, of course, facetious because the previous one is the absolute truth. Five lanes during the rush hour? We have four now. And the number of people commuting in the opposite direction certainly doesn't warrant more than one lane, much less a whole deck.

The only question really answered concerns moving businesses out of San Francisco. See how the freeway-haters like them apples! Some businesses have been in a position to do this.

Greyhound hasn't tried to improve its service. It gets to pay the cheapest toll imaginable (13 cents a busload) and still can't make it go? If they didn't close up shop at 6 p.m. at the Ferry Building and raise the rates out of proportion ($24 a month from Walnut Creek; $26.50 for 40 rides from Novato, not even a full month!), they might get a few more riders who could stomach broken, unpadded seats and 28 miles of fumes.

Instead of spending thousands of our tax dollars on "studies" that prove what we've known all along, the County Supervisors should spend some getting more than one person into each car during commute hours. Even two would help. And some more tax dollars could go toward a third lane on each side of the divider between San Rafael and the Civic Center. I thought they were planning to widen that stretch when they made so many one-way streets in San Rafael.

Congo Plane Order Given Only After Extensive Consultation

WASHINGTON (AP) — It seemed so simple.

Congo President Joseph D. Mobutu asked this country for some cargo planes to help him put down a revolt led by white-mercenaries and rebel Congolese troops about 1,000 miles northeast of Kinsasha, the capital.

THIS DOESN'T sound complicated. This government had publicly proclaimed support of Mobutu's regime.

So, it might seem, all Mobutu had to do was ask for help again. But this was where it got complicated

Mobutu sent his request Thursday, July 6, through a cablegram to his ambassador in Washington. The ambassador took it to the State Department at the same time the department was being told of Mobutu's request in a cablegram from Robert McBride, the U.S. ambassador in the Congo.

The next day McBride followed up his first cablegram with another, saying he approved.

Meanwhile, the request had to go through the process at the State Department. There it went to the Bureau of African Affairs where it got the instant attention of the bureau's Congo task force, headed by Dean Brown.

IT WAS DISCUSSED and huddled over by the members of the bureau and the task force and by Wayne Frederick, acting secretary of state for African affairs.

Meanwhile, there had been trips to the office of Rusk who also conferred with some of the top people around him. Finally the bureau and task force approved, and so notified Frederick, who also approved and so notified Rusk.

Rusk, who had been in touch with Johnson by phone, also approved. So did Johnson. The decision to go ahead was reached Saturday, July 8. But before there could be any public announcement, Johnson told Rusk, key members of Congress had to be informed. They were, and the announcement was made Sunday, July 9.

But the State Department doesn't have transport planes, so meanwhile it has to discuss the problem with the Department of Defense. This was done by contacting the Defense Departments Office for International Security, headed by Assistant Secretary John McNaughton.

THEN THE Mobutu request, along with the State Depatment's thinking, went to the Joint Chiefs of Staff and to Paul H. Nitze, acting secretary of defense at the time since Robert S. McNamara, the secretary of defense, was in Vietnam.

Nitze and the Joint Chiefs concurred with the State Department. Now all that was needed was to send the planes. The Joint Chiefs' order to do this was sent to the S.S. Strike Command at MacDill Air Force base, Tampa, Fla.

The strike command is responsible for keeping military personnel in readiness for instant service anywhere.

Ordrs also went to the Tactical Air Command at Langley Field, Va., and to the Continental Army Command at nearby Ft. Monroe, Va., and, if this isn't complicated enough, the planes — Three four-engine transports—took off late Saturday from Pope Aair Force Base in North Carolina.

They had about 126 troops aboard, some mechanics and some paratroopers to guard the planes when Mobutu sent them where he wanted them to go. Neither the planes nor the men were supposed to get involved anywhere close to the direct action.

SOME OF the top Democrats and Republicans in Congress expressed dismay at this action, fearing it might mean involvement in another war, but George Christian, said the matter had been studied at great length before the decision was made.

Segregation Getting Worse In Suburbs

By WHITNEY M. YOUNG JR.

America's suburbs are becoming increasingly segregated. Chicago's suburbs, for example, have a Negro population of about 3 per cent while the city itself is over one fourth Negro. The majority of Washington, D.C.'s population is Negro, but its suburbs are only about 6 per cent Negro.

THIS IS an intolerable situation. Negroes are forced into overcrowded ghettos because discrimination in housing prevents them from living elsewhere. In addition to the damage done to the quality of American life by such segregation, further damage is done to the economic opportunities open to Negro citizens.

More than half of all new industrial and office construction has been outside the cities, putting jobs out of reach for the urban poor and the unemployed. If this trend continues, Negroes will find themselves in an even greater economic crisis than the present one. It makes no sense for public housing projects to be built in overcrowded city ghettos when space and land and jobs are plentiful outside the city boundaries.

THE WALLS the suburbs have built to isolate themselves from the reality of democratic life will have to crumble from pressures from businesses whose newly relocated plants need workers, and from government, which should no longer tolerate housing segregation.

While there is much debate over the government's role in ending housing discrimination, there was no debate when the government took steps which ensured racial segregation in housing. The Federal Housing Administration at one time encouraged the use of restrictive covenants to keep minority groups out of desirable neighborhoods, and throughout the '30's and 40's, other government agencies sold houses or backed mortgages on a racist basis.

WHEN THESE policies were combined with the massive roadbuilding which, after the war, made the suburbs accessible to most Americans, the result was to freeze racist patterns into suburban life. Although federal policies have been reversed, the damage has been done, and 80 per cent of all new homes built in America are built in suburbs from which Negroes are often excluded.

What has been done can be undone. Negroes must aggressively seek new housing outside the ghetto or become further victimized by overpriced and overcrowded housing. The Urban League's Operation Equality program assists Negroes to move to better housing and gives white citizens the opportunity to desegregate their communities by helping Negroes obtain decent housing on an equal basis.

IT IS HEARTENING that many people are rallying around the flag of equal housing opportunity. Builder Morris Milgrim has been a pioneer in housing integration. William J. Levitt, whose company once sold homes to whites only, told a Congressional committee that "since we began to sell on an open occupancy basis" its sales had grown five-fold, with complete acceptance by white homeowners.

THE REAL DANGER to homeowners resisting integrated housing is the loss of the diversity which enlivens a neighborhood and makes it interesting, and the loss of the democratic values their families need in order to endure in a world of many races and backgrounds.

Venereal Disease Killing More Than The Old Plague

By BEN CHESTER

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A federal health expert says venereal disease, which has been on the rise in recent years, is even now more serious than the great plagues which once ravished Europe.

William F. Schwartz, an educational consultant with the U.S. Communicable Disease Center, said in an interview that syphilis already has claimed 100 million lives in this century. The plagues "never killed more than 25 million persons, and the greatest threat was in the 16th Century," he said.

He said more than 630,000 persons with syphilis are now walking the streets in the United States and 1.5 million new gonorrhea infections are occuring in the country each year.

Venereal disease problems are not brought on by sexual promiscuity alone, Schwartz said, and public attitudes are preventing eradication of the diseases.

"Everybody associates VD with something dirty, with sexual promiscuity, sin or prostitution," he said. "But I can't believe that the hundreds of pregnant women who give birth to crippled or blind or even dead children have been sexually promiscuous."

While it is possible to contract venereal disease without being promiscuous, officials emphasize that one need have little fear of catching syphilis or gonorrhea except through intimate physical contact, usually related to sexual activity.

"The germs which cause these diseases simply cannot live for more than a few minutes outside of the human body," said Dr. Eugene J. Gillespie, also of CDC. "And so they must be passed from one person to another through direct skin-to-skin contact, or, in the case of syphilis, from mother to unborn child through the blood stream."

Schwartz said public attitudes compound the eradication problem. Voluntary funds to educate the public on VD always have been small, he said, and federal and state funds are cut drastically each time progress is made in lowering the infection rate.

"In the middle of the 1950s," he said, "the federal budget to fight syphilis was cut from $17 million to $3 million. The following year the infection rate went back up, and we have been fighting 10 years to bring it down."

Schwartz said the federal government is currently spending $10.5 million on education and treatment of new syphilis cases and "it is spending $50 million to keep up hospitals for the syphilitic insane."

The health educator said that once persons with advanced cases of syphilis are treated, their life span can be increased by 10 or 15 years, even though their minds are destroyed.

Early treatment of syphilis can cure the disease, he said, but the damage to the body cannot be repaired in advanced stages.

"It's like pulling a nail out of a board," Schwartz said. "The nail's gone, but the hole's still there."

Mental Commitment Wrong?

SACRAMENTO (AP)—An elderly man shows signs of senility. His relatives feel he is becoming a burden and would prefer to have him cared for by competent authorities.

The family decides to send him to a state hospital. After a hearing that lasts less than five minutes, during which the old man has no legal counsel, he is whisked away to a state mental hospital.

And that is the end of him.

This was the grim picture painted Tuesday night by Sen. Nicholas Petris, D - Oakland, seeking Senate Governmental Efficiency Committee approval of the Lanterman-Petris Act, which would completely revise the procedures by which persons are committed involuntarily to state mental hospitals.

The committee took the measure under submission, after hearing parades of psychiatrists differ sharply on whether the state's commitment laws are barbaric.

Petris' accusations were supported by San Francisco Superior Court Judge Joseph Karesh, who said he has been required to commit 250 to 300 persons a month to mental hospitals "after hearings that lasted less than four minutes and on evidence that was less than adequate."

Judge Karesh said "there are very few of us who couldn't go to a state hospital" under what he termed a diabolical system of commitment.

Petris said most mentally ill persons committed to state hospitals "have no business there."

The proposed act, described proponents as the "second most important mental health bill this decade," would emphasize voluntary commitment and treating patients in their own communities rather than in hospitals.

Several psychiatrists supported the proposed act.

Leading a delegation of psychiatrists opposed to the measure, Dr. George Degnan, spokesman for the Conference of Mental Health Directors, said involuntary commitments are "a vanishing segment in mental health."

Degnan said California has "a fine mental health system" and denied accusations that commitment procedures are barbaric. He contended that the proposed act "will not improve the lot" of the mentally ill person.

Other opponents said that the provisions of the Lanterman-Petris bills are "too cumbersome and create too many uncertainties."

THIS WEEK In The World

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The nation's reservists could breath easier—at least for the time being.

President Johnson announced another troop buildup in Vietnam that he said would not require the callup of reserves.

The exact number of additional American troops to be involved in the buildup over the next 12 months was not specified at a news conference held Thursday by Johnson, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara; Gen Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Gen. William C. Westmoreland, U.S. commander in Vietnam.

But Johnson said, "The troops that Gen. Westmoreland needs and requests and that we feel acceptable will be supplied."

Thus, it seemed certain the new buildup would push the number of American troops to more than a half million.

Around The World Around The Clock:

Kinshasa, The Congo: The last of a group of Europeans and Americans who had been held hostage by a band of rebel mercenaries were brought out in Red Cross planes. All the hostages were apparently accounted for.

Newark, N.J.: Negroes rioted in Newark in a multimillion-dollar rampage of burning and looting, touched off by the arrest and alleged beating by police of a Negro taxicab driver.

Hong Kong: Communist goon squade set off rioting in the crown colony that continued through the week at the apparent direction of Peking, which is trying to gain some control in the colony. Scores were injured and several persons killed.

New York: Columbia University announced the development of a filter invented by Robert L. Strickman, who said it would make cigarette smoking up to 80 per cent safer. Strickman turned the filter over to Columbia, retaining the rights to a small percentage of the income realized from it, and the university said the filter would be available immediately to cigarette companies.

THE MOST-NEEDED VICTORY

Viet Pacification's Slow Pace Prods Major Shuffle

By DONALD H. MAY

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Reorganization of the U.S. pacification effort in South Vietnam is now nearly complete, according to administration officials.

What this means is that American advisers in Vietnam's "other war" have reorganized themselves.

Now it remains for the South Vietnamese to improve and expand the operation itself—the long, slow, village-by-village job upon which the final outcome of the war ultimately depends.

Pacification — now officially called revolutionary development or "RD"—is the process of protecting the South Vietnamese towns and peasantry against guerrillas, restoring government authority through registration, elections and government sources, fostering allegiance to the Saigon government and raising the standard of living.

Its brightest spots have been a group of about four provinces stretching along the coast from Binh Dinh to Ninh Thuan. But in general, the program has been painfully slow. These were the words of Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara this week as he returned from Saigon.

In I Corps, which includes the five northern provinces, it has suffered from the diversion of military forces to fight off large North Vietnamese units coming across the Demilitarized Zone.

Elsewhere it has been hampered by terrorism, mortar attacks, uncoordinated civilian and military programs and—some believe — organizational troubles and lack of commitment.

On May 11, U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker announced plans for a major overhaul of the U.S. part of the program, which had been divided into two separate civilian and military lines of command. Bunker put it all under Gen. William C. Westmoreland, U.S. military commander in Vietnam.

Administration officials said that Bunker, as ambassador and the President's representative, is still the senior U.S. official in Vietnam, so pacification has not become solely a military matter.

Robert W. Komer, former White House aide, is Westmoreland's deputy for civil operations and revolutionary development support, which has given the world a new acronym, CORDS.

CORDS combines the former Office of Civil Operations, composed of civilians, with the former revolutionary development support section of the U.S. Military Command in Saigon.

Since Bunker's May 11 announcement, the organization on the Saigon level has been completed and lower-level unified CORDS have been created in each of Vietnam's four regions.

The unified command soon will be extended down to Vietnam's 44 provinces. Those in which military problems are foremost will have military officers heading pacification with civilian deputies. Other provinces will have civilians with military deputies.

There has been some civilian grumbling about being merged with the military. But top officials in Washington think the organization is good. At least 90 per cent of the U.S. pacification personnel in Vietnam are still doing the same jobs for the same superiors.

Washington officials say this is the first time a large civilian organization has been meshed with the military establishment in a theater of hostilities—an unprecedented solution for an unprecedented military-civilian war.

The military was placed on top because it has the logistics and because it must help provide the essential screen of security for the rest of the program.

South Vietnam late last year designated half its army battalions for pacification duties—clearing and holding territory. Some 30,000 South Vietnamese have been trained in 59-man revolutionary development teams, and the number is supposed to reach 50,000 by the end of the year.

Just what the new American advisory organization will now proceed to advise has not been spelled out. It will probably include some revamping of the Vietnamese army's pacification effort, increased emphasis on incentives, more efforts to open roads and canals, and possibly more advisers in special fields, such as police training.

It may also involve more U.S. military forces. Marines in I Corps say they need more men to fight major Communist units while at the same time providing a security screen for the people.

Convict 'Lawyers' Get New Help

By LEONARD MILLIMAN

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—How much help must the state give a convict trying to get out of prison by doing his own legal work?

This question, revolving around access to law books, has developed into a bizarre federal court case, with no end in sight.

California's 18,000 convicts clutter the courts with an estimated 10,000 legal petitions a year, self-prepared in a lottery-like quest for freedom.

Appalled by the volume, the state last Sept. 19 decreed that only 13 specified basic law books should be stocked by the state's 13 penal institutions.

Some 110 convicts responded with a flood of petitions demanding a restraining order and $390,000 in damages.

The U.S. District Court has consolidated their cases and appointed John Eshleman Wahl, 33, as their attorney. Fresh out of law school and handling his first case, Wahl won an order restraining the state from restricting law books.

Now he is fighting to get a three-judge special federal court panel named to spell out prisoners' constitutional rights of access to the tools of the legal profession.

In issuing its 13-books-only order, the State Department of Corrections found that nearly all self-made prison lawyers are in San Quentin and Folsom prisons. Their law libraries were antique and tattered, but they were the best in the prison system.

Inmates doing comparatively easy time in minimum security prisons were asking for transfers to the maximum security of Folsom and San Quentin just to get at the law books.

In addition to the basic library, the state ruled that convicts can request others from the State Law Library but may not own such books and cannot help each other in legal matters.

The federal court restraining order specifically bars confiscation of prisoner-owned law books.

"There never has been a legal book confiscated from an inmate during the 3½ years I've been at Folsom because they don't have them," said Grant Salzman, administrative assistant to the warden.

"An inmate could have Tom Sawyer or an atlas in his cell, but not a law book."

The old dog-eared legal volumes remained in prison libraries. The Department of Corrections said all institutions now have the new set.

But they aren't on the shelves at Folsom. Space in its tiny legal section is "all full of the old junk," Salzman said.

Attorney Wahl insists the old volumes must remain "as long as anyone is using them who doesn't have an attorney." He says the state cannot limit prisoners to 13 books "and proscribe all others." Insofar as the state library is concerned, Wahl says prison regulations prevent men from getting desired books when needed.

Wahl and the men he represents insist prisoner-owned books have been seized, that legal mail has been delayed and that prisoners have been punished for opposing the order. The state denies all.

The state does concede that Thomas Francis Boyle Jr., in Folsom for selling narcotics in San Mateo County, was placed in isolation three days for using state paper and work assignment time for preparing a legal document, and given a suspended five days in isolation for giving some of his legal documents to another inmate.

The biggest split between the inmates' legal champion and the prison administration appears to be over prisoners helping each other in legal matters.

Wahl says the regulation is trying "to make things easier for bureaucrats" and is part of the "conditions of legal ignorance which the State of California desires to impose upon indigent prisoners."

Salzman said what the prisons fear is a man with "a degree of legal skill doing another man's legal work for favors."

"We have had knifings over legal work," he said.

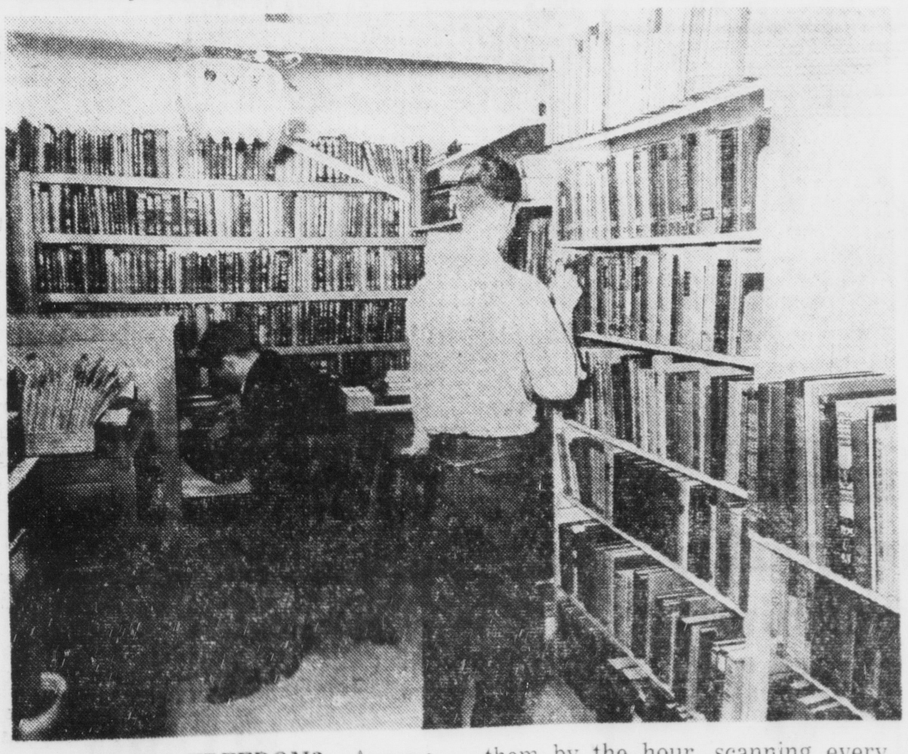
Folsom, with 2,530 inmates, is producing 400 prisoner-written court petitions each month, by estimate of Sgt. Charles N. Fleming Jr., in charge of the mail room.

Associate Warden James W. L. Park of San Quentin estimated that its 3,500 inmates turn out close to 5,000 a year.

"We have 200 to 300 pretty avid students of law writing writs pretty regularly," Park said. "Probably another 300 to 500 sort of dabble in it. Some turn out a writ a day."

Park and Salzman said the writ writer tends to be a long-term prisoner who sees the court as the only possible way out.

Both said recent United States Supreme Court decisions have led to an increase in inmate petitions.



A DOOR TO FREEDOM?—Among the most-used volumes in the small library at San Quentin prison are the few law books. Convicts comb them by the hour, scanning every syllable for possible clues to legal action the self-made lawyers may take to win freedom. (Independent-Journal photo)

Reagan Wants Revisions In Law On Lieutenant Governor Powers

By EDWIN S. CAPPS

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — Governor Ronald Reagan has told a national conference of lieutenant governors in San Francisco he feels a governor should be able to delegate powers to the No. 2 man when he leaves the state but should remain as the governor.

Reagan also suggested constitutional changes which would permit the governor and lieutenant governor candidates to run as a slate in the general election. And he said the governor should be limited to two four-year terms.

"The change I would like to see is one that would leave the governor still governor, but able to delegate powers to the lieutenant governor while he, the governor, is out of state," Reagan said. "Now I realize that from state to state, the rules vary, but in California, the minute I step across the state line, Bob Finch (Lt. Gov. Robert H. Finch) is governor.

"That is all right," he said. "But just suppose Bob had not won. Suppose it was just me and a lieutenant governor with a prior obligation to the opposing party.

"I do not believe that when a governor crosses a state line, he immediately is no longer fit to govern," Reagan said. "Just as I do not believe that when the President leaves the country, he should turn the country over to Hubert Humphrey. (In some circles, I could win my point with that line alone.)"

Reagan said he believed, upon leaving the state, the governor should delegate such things as the responsibility for signing bills and the right to call out the national guard in case of an emergency to the lieutenant governor.

Governor Reagan's $1 billion tax increase measure is on the move — it's passed the Senate by a 27-12 vote and now faces at least four extensive hearings in the Assembly.

The Senate vote on the measure, which found nine Democrats joining 18 Republicans to vote "aye" on SB556-Deukmejian, didn't mean that all of those voting for the bill liked it. Most senators felt there would be another chance to vote on a tax bill, no doubt after a conference committee of the two houses works out some sort of a compromise.

Assembly Speaker Jesse Unruh, D-Inglewood, said it probably would be late July before the lower house would be ready for a vote on the bill.

The battle of withholding may be over for the present session, if there ever was a battle, in view of Governor Reagan's flat statement he would veto any bill containing a provision for withholding of state personal income tax. Before approving SB556, the Senate rejected amendments to add withholding to the bill by a vote of 22-15. And Unruh said he will make no further attempt to add withholding, even though he thinks it is an integral part of any tax bill.

The Legislature is wavering from its plan to recess the current session on July 28 and return for its special five-day session on governor's vetoes on Aug. 28-Sept. 1. The Senate adopted amendments to an adjournment resolution setting the date back one week. This would call for a recess on Aug. 4 and a return for the governor's veto session from Sept. 5-9. Senators argued that too many bills still are awaiting action and the pace already is so swift that an attempt to wind up on July 28 would overwork the members and result in some bills not receiving proper attention. The Assembly has not indicated it is observing the one-week delay.

Special elections were much in discussions in the capitol. First, there is the election in San Francisco to fill the vacancy created by the death of Sen. J. Eugene McAteer, D-San Francisco. The primary will be held July 18, with a runoff on Aug. 15 if no candidate gets a majority. Leading candidates are Assemblyman John L. Burton, D-San Francisco, and Judge Milton Marks, former Republican assemblyman. Should Marks win, it would put the senate on a basis of 20 Republicans and 20 Democrats. With the aid of Lieutenant Governor Robert H. Finch's tie-breaking vote, the Republicans could control the upper house.

Venereal Disease Killing More Than The Old Plague

By BEN CHESTER

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A federal health expert says venereal disease, which has been on the rise in recent years, is even now more serious than the great plagues which once ravished Europe.

William F. Schwartz, an educational consultant with the U.S. Communicable Disease Center, said in an interview that syphilis already has claimed 100 million lives in this century. The plagues "never killed more than 25 million persons, and the greatest threat was in the 16th Century," he said.

He said more than 630,000 persons with syphilis are now walking the streets in the United States and 1.5 million new gonorrhea infections are occuring in the country each year.

Venereal disease problems are not brought on by sexual promiscuity alone, Schwartz said, and public attitudes are preventing eradication of the diseases.

"Everybody associates VD with something dirty, with sexual promiscuity, sin or prostitution," he said. "But I can't believe that the hundreds of pregnant women who give birth to crippled or blind or even dead children have been sexually promiscuous."

While it is possible to contract venereal disease without being promiscuous, officials emphasize that one need have little fear of catching syphilis or gonorrhea except through intimate physical contact, usually related to sexual activity.

"The germs which cause these diseases simply cannot live for more than a few minutes outside of the human body," said Dr. Eugene J. Gillespie, also of CDC. "And so they must be passed from one person to another through direct skin-to-skin contact, or, in the case of syphilis, from mother to unborn child through the blood stream."

Schwartz said public attitudes compound the eradication problem. Voluntary funds to educate the public on VD always have been small, he said, and federal and state funds are cut drastically each time progress is made in lowering the infection rate.

"In the middle of the 1950s," he said, "the federal budget to fight syphilis was cut from $17 million to $3 million. The following year the infection rate went back up, and we have been fighting 10 years to bring it down."

Schwartz said the federal government is currently spending $10.5 million on education and treatment of new syphilis cases and "it is spending $50 million to keep up hospitals for the syphilitic insane."

The health educator said that once persons with advanced cases of syphilis are treated, their life span can be increased by 10 or 15 years, even though their minds are destroyed.

Early treatment of syphilis can cure the disease, he said, but the damage to the body cannot be repaired in advanced stages.

"It's like pulling a nail out of a board," Schwartz said. "The nail's gone, but the hole's still there."

Mental Commitment Wrong?

SACRAMENTO (AP)—An elderly man shows signs of senility. His relatives feel he is becoming a burden and would prefer to have him cared for by competent authorities.

The family decides to send him to a state hospital. After a hearing that lasts less than five minutes, during which the old man has no legal counsel, he is whisked away to a state mental hospital.

And that is the end of him.

This was the grim picture painted Tuesday night by Sen. Nicholas Petris, D - Oakland, seeking Senate Governmental Efficiency Committee approval of the Lanterman-Petris Act, which would completely revise the procedures by which persons are committed involuntarily to state mental hospitals.

The committee took the measure under submission, after hearing parades of psychiatrists differ sharply on whether the state's commitment laws are barbaric.

Petris' accusations were supported by San Francisco Superior Court Judge Joseph Karesh, who said he has been required to commit 250 to 300 persons a month to mental hospitals "after hearings that lasted less than four minutes and on evidence that was less than adequate."

Judge Karesh said "there are very few of us who couldn't go to a state hospital" under what he termed a diabolical system of commitment.

Petris said most mentally ill persons committed to state hospitals "have no business there."

The proposed act, described proponents as the "second most important mental health bill this decade," would emphasize voluntary commitment and treating patients in their own communities rather than in hospitals.

Several psychiatrists supported the proposed act.

Leading a delegation of psychiatrists opposed to the measure, Dr. George Degnan, spokesman for the Conference of Mental Health Directors, said involuntary commitments are "a vanishing segment in mental health."

Degnan said California has "a fine mental health system" and denied accusations that commitment procedures are barbaric. He contended that the proposed act "will not improve the lot" of the mentally ill person.

Other opponents said that the provisions of the Lanterman-Petris bills are "too cumbersome and create too many uncertainties."

THIS WEEK In The World

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The nation's reservists could breath easier—at least for the time being.

President Johnson announced another troop buildup in Vietnam that he said would not require the callup of reserves.

The exact number of additional American troops to be involved in the buildup over the next 12 months was not specified at a news conference held Thursday by Johnson, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara; Gen Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Gen. William C. Westmoreland, U.S. commander in Vietnam.

But Johnson said, "The troops that Gen. Westmoreland needs and requests and that we feel acceptable will be supplied."

Thus, it seemed certain the new buildup would push the number of American troops to more than a half million.

Around The World Around The Clock:

Kinshasa, The Congo: The last of a group of Europeans and Americans who had been held hostage by a band of rebel mercenaries were brought out in Red Cross planes. All the hostages were apparently accounted for.

Newark, N.J.: Negroes rioted in Newark in a multimillion-dollar rampage of burning and looting, touched off by the arrest and alleged beating by police of a Negro taxicab driver.

Hong Kong: Communist goon squade set off rioting in the crown colony that continued through the week at the apparent direction of Peking, which is trying to gain some control in the colony. Scores were injured and several persons killed.

New York: Columbia University announced the development of a filter invented by Robert L. Strickman, who said it would make cigarette smoking up to 80 per cent safer. Strickman turned the filter over to Columbia, retaining the rights to a small percentage of the income realized from it, and the university said the filter would be available immediately to cigarette companies.

THE MOST-NEEDED VICTORY

Viet Pacification's Slow Pace Prods Major Shuffle

By DONALD H. MAY

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Reorganization of the U.S. pacification effort in South Vietnam is now nearly complete, according to administration officials.

What this means is that American advisers in Vietnam's "other war" have reorganized themselves.

Now it remains for the South Vietnamese to improve and expand the operation itself—the long, slow, village-by-village job upon which the final outcome of the war ultimately depends.

Pacification — now officially called revolutionary development or "RD"—is the process of protecting the South Vietnamese towns and peasantry against guerrillas, restoring government authority through registration, elections and government sources, fostering allegiance to the Saigon government and raising the standard of living.

Its brightest spots have been a group of about four provinces stretching along the coast from Binh Dinh to Ninh Thuan. But in general, the program has been painfully slow. These were the words of Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara this week as he returned from Saigon.

In I Corps, which includes the five northern provinces, it has suffered from the diversion of military forces to fight off large North Vietnamese units coming across the Demilitarized Zone.

Elsewhere it has been hampered by terrorism, mortar attacks, uncoordinated civilian and military programs and—some believe — organizational troubles and lack of commitment.

On May 11, U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker announced plans for a major overhaul of the U.S. part of the program, which had been divided into two separate civilian and military lines of command. Bunker put it all under Gen. William C. Westmoreland, U.S. military commander in Vietnam.

Administration officials said that Bunker, as ambassador and the President's representative, is still the senior U.S. official in Vietnam, so pacification has not become solely a military matter.

Robert W. Komer, former White House aide, is Westmoreland's deputy for civil operations and revolutionary development support, which has given the world a new acronym, CORDS.

CORDS combines the former Office of Civil Operations, composed of civilians, with the former revolutionary development support section of the U.S. Military Command in Saigon.

Since Bunker's May 11 announcement, the organization on the Saigon level has been completed and lower-level unified CORDS have been created in each of Vietnam's four regions.

The unified command soon will be extended down to Vietnam's 44 provinces. Those in which military problems are foremost will have military officers heading pacification with civilian deputies. Other provinces will have civilians with military deputies.

There has been some civilian grumbling about being merged with the military. But top officials in Washington think the organization is good. At least 90 per cent of the U.S. pacification personnel in Vietnam are still doing the same jobs for the same superiors.

Washington officials say this is the first time a large civilian organization has been meshed with the military establishment in a theater of hostilities—an unprecedented solution for an unprecedented military-civilian war.

The military was placed on top because it has the logistics and because it must help provide the essential screen of security for the rest of the program.

South Vietnam late last year designated half its army battalions for pacification duties—clearing and holding territory. Some 30,000 South Vietnamese have been trained in 59-man revolutionary development teams, and the number is supposed to reach 50,000 by the end of the year.

Just what the new American advisory organization will now proceed to advise has not been spelled out. It will probably include some revamping of the Vietnamese army's pacification effort, increased emphasis on incentives, more efforts to open roads and canals, and possibly more advisers in special fields, such as police training.

It may also involve more U.S. military forces. Marines in I Corps say they need more men to fight major Communist units while at the same time providing a security screen for the people.

Convict 'Lawyers' Get New Help

By LEONARD MILLIMAN

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—How much help must the state give a convict trying to get out of prison by doing his own legal work?

This question, revolving around access to law books, has developed into a bizarre federal court case, with no end in sight.

California's 18,000 convicts clutter the courts with an estimated 10,000 legal petitions a year, self-prepared in a lottery-like quest for freedom.

Appalled by the volume, the state last Sept. 19 decreed that only 13 specified basic law books should be stocked by the state's 13 penal institutions.

Some 110 convicts responded with a flood of petitions demanding a restraining order and $390,000 in damages.

The U.S. District Court has consolidated their cases and appointed John Eshleman Wahl, 33, as their attorney. Fresh out of law school and handling his first case, Wahl won an order restraining the state from restricting law books.

Now he is fighting to get a three-judge special federal court panel named to spell out prisoners' constitutional rights of access to the tools of the legal profession.

In issuing its 13-books-only order, the State Department of Corrections found that nearly all self-made prison lawyers are in San Quentin and Folsom prisons. Their law libraries were antique and tattered, but they were the best in the prison system.

Inmates doing comparatively easy time in minimum security prisons were asking for transfers to the maximum security of Folsom and San Quentin just to get at the law books.

In addition to the basic library, the state ruled that convicts can request others from the State Law Library but may not own such books and cannot help each other in legal matters.

The federal court restraining order specifically bars confiscation of prisoner-owned law books.

"There never has been a legal book confiscated from an inmate during the 3½ years I've been at Folsom because they don't have them," said Grant Salzman, administrative assistant to the warden.

"An inmate could have Tom Sawyer or an atlas in his cell, but not a law book."

The old dog-eared legal volumes remained in prison libraries. The Department of Corrections said all institutions now have the new set.

But they aren't on the shelves at Folsom. Space in its tiny legal section is "all full of the old junk," Salzman said.

Attorney Wahl insists the old volumes must remain "as long as anyone is using them who doesn't have an attorney." He says the state cannot limit prisoners to 13 books "and proscribe all others." Insofar as the state library is concerned, Wahl says prison regulations prevent men from getting desired books when needed.

Wahl and the men he represents insist prisoner-owned books have been seized, that legal mail has been delayed and that prisoners have been punished for opposing the order. The state denies all.

The state does concede that Thomas Francis Boyle Jr., in Folsom for selling narcotics in San Mateo County, was placed in isolation three days for using state paper and work assignment time for preparing a legal document, and given a suspended five days in isolation for giving some of his legal documents to another inmate.

The biggest split between the inmates' legal champion and the prison administration appears to be over prisoners helping each other in legal matters.

Wahl says the regulation is trying "to make things easier for bureaucrats" and is part of the "conditions of legal ignorance which the State of California desires to impose upon indigent prisoners."

Salzman said what the prisons fear is a man with "a degree of legal skill doing another man's legal work for favors."

"We have had knifings over legal work," he said.

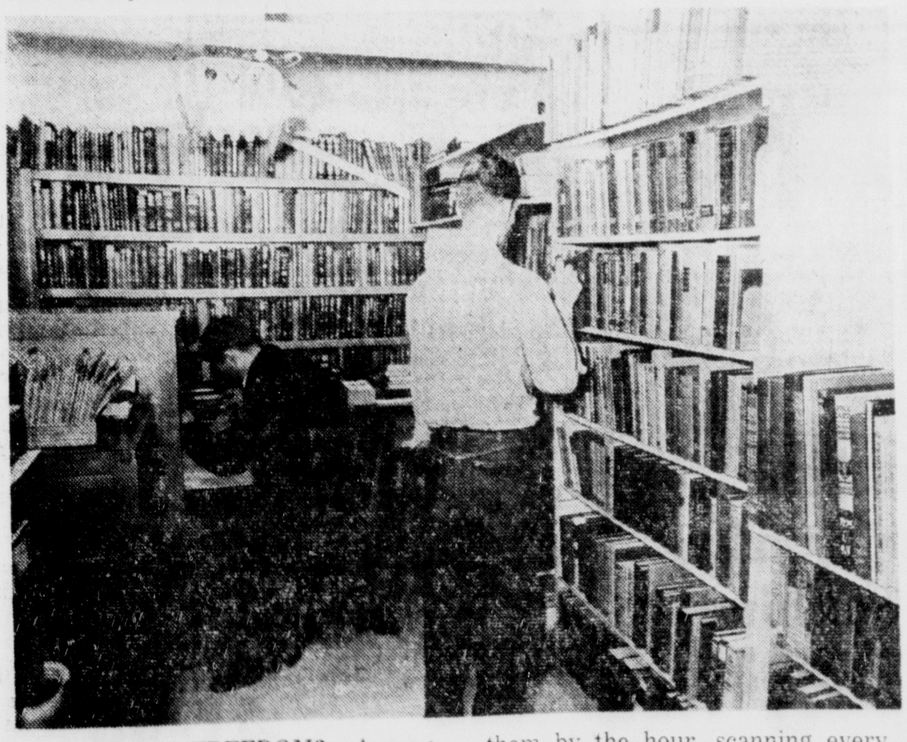
Folsom, with 2,530 inmates, is producing 400 prisoner-written court petitions each month, by estimate of Sgt. Charles N. Fleming Jr., in charge of the mail room.

Associate Warden James W. L. Park of San Quentin estimated that its 3,500 inmates turn out close to 5,000 a year.

"We have 200 to 300 pretty avid students of law writing writs pretty regularly," Park said. "Probably another 300 to 500 sort of dabble in it. Some turn out a writ a day."

Park and Salzman said the writ writer tends to be a long-term prisoner who sees the court as the only possible way out.

Both said recent United States Supreme Court decisions have led to an increase in inmate petitions.



A DOOR TO FREEDOM?—Among the most-used volumes in the small library at San Quentin prison are the few law books. Convicts comb them by the hour, scanning every syllable for possible clues to legal action the self-made lawyers may take to win freedom.

Reagan Wants Revisions In Law On Lieutenant Governor Powers

By EDWIN S. CAPPS

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — Governor Ronald Reagan has told a national conference of lieutenant governors in San Francisco he feels a governor should be able to delegate powers to the No. 2 man when he leaves the state but should remain as the governor.

Reagan also suggested constitutional changes which would permit the governor and lieutenant governor candidates to run as a slate in the general election. And he said the governor should be limited to two four-year terms.

"The change I would like to see is one that would leave the governor still governor, but able to delegate powers to the lieutenant governor while he, the governor, is out of state," Reagan said. "Now I realize that from state to state, the rules vary, but in California, the minute I step across the state line, Bob Finch (Lt. Gov. Robert H. Finch) is governor.

"That is all right," he said. "But just suppose Bob had not won. Suppose it was just me and a lieutenant governor with a prior obligation to the opposing party.

"I do not believe that when a governor crosses a state line, he immediately is no longer fit to govern," Reagan said. "Just as I do not believe that when the President leaves the country, he should turn the country over to Hubert Humphrey. (In some circles, I could win my point with that line alone.)"

Reagan said he believed, upon leaving the state, the governor should delegate such things as the responsibility for signing bills and the right to call out the national guard in case of an emergency to the lieutenant governor.

Governor Reagan's $1 billion tax increase measure is on the move — it's passed the Senate by a 27-12 vote and now faces at least four extensive hearings in the Assembly.

The Senate vote on the measure, which found nine Democrats joining 18 Republicans to vote "aye" on SB556-Deukmejian, didn't mean that all of those voting for the bill liked it. Most senators felt there would be another chance to vote on a tax bill, no doubt after a conference committee of the two houses works out some sort of a compromise.

Assembly Speaker Jesse Unruh, D-Inglewood, said it probably would be late July before the lower house would be ready for a vote on the bill.

The battle of withholding may be over for the present session, if there ever was a battle, in view of Governor Reagan's flat statement he would veto any bill containing a provision for withholding of state personal income tax. Before approving SB556, the Senate rejected amendments to add withholding to the bill by a vote of 22-15. And Unruh said he will make no further attempt to add withholding, even though he thinks it is an integral part of any tax bill.

The Legislature is wavering from its plan to recess the current session on July 28 and return for its special five-day session on governor's vetoes on Aug. 28-Sept. 1. The Senate adopted amendments to an adjournment resolution setting the date back one week. This would call for a recess on Aug. 4 and a return for the governor's veto session from Sept. 5-9. Credential Fee Boost Disappears

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The State Board of Education boosted the application fee for educational credentials by $2 two years ago to raise $209,000 for underwriting automation of the process.

But yesterday the board reported all the money from 50,000 applicants a year had vanished into the state's general fund.

The State Department of Finance has told the board, it reported, that the fee should be raised by another $2 or $5 to produce the computer money.

Board President Dorman L. Commons declared it was a "breach of faith" and said the finance department broke a clear verbal agreement with the board.

"Relying on oral assurance is futile," declared Superintendent of Public Instruction Max Rafferty. "The only way you're going to get (the money) is through a hard and fast written statement from the Department of Finance."

MUSICAL CHAIRS

San Rafael Council May Trim Two Jobs

Economy in San Rafael city government has prompted a game of musical chairs among four city departments that will leave two clerks standing when the music stops.

The changes will be recommended to the city council Monday by Asst. Mgr. Virginia Congdon, in charge of personnel. If adopted by the council, two positions would be deleted, two employees transferred and two laid off. One of those to be laid off has already found another job.

Mrs. Congdon explained that there is not enough work in the public works and building departments, so that Mrs. Regina Buchanan, a stenographer clerk one, in pulbic works, with four years with the city, will be transferred to the parks and recreation department, replacing Rosalie Wise, a stenographer clerk one with one year, four months experience.

Mrs. Wise, notified of the recommendation, got a job with the county and worked her last day with the city yesterday, Mrs. Congdon said.

The other change calls for Mrs. Juanita Maguire, a typist-clerk two in the building department for seven years, to go to the finance department, replacing Mrs. Virginia Byers, a typist two who has worked four months for the city. She will leave city employ Aug. 1.

Mrs. Congdon said that the transfers are recommended without change in pay and that they are being made under the seniority rule. She said an employee of six months in the city manager's office is a stenographer-clerk two, with qualification higher than stenographer clerk one and thus is not affected.

She said there was no doubt of the transferred employees' ability to do their work in the new positions.

Nicasio School Budget Adopted

The Nicasio School District Board Thursday night approved a publication budget of $40,200, up $130 from last year, according to Beverly Alberigi, board secretary.

The secretary was unable to say whether this would affect the tax rate which last year was $1.575 per $100 assessed valuation.

The board set Aug. 7 at 8 p.m. at the Nicasio School for its budget hearing.

Tomales High Budget Up, But Lower Tax Rate Seen

The Tomales High School District board Thursday night adopted a $350,491 publication budget for fiscal 1968 at its regular meeting in the high school.

This is $57,814 more than the $292,677 budget for the past school year, but the tax rate is expected to drop from the $1.48 per $100 assessed valuation last year to about $1.33 this year because of increased assessed valuation, according to Supt. Anthony Matulich.

Despite the rate drop, however, the total property tax bill is expected to rise from the previous year's $221,511 to about $263,000 this school year, according to the county auditor's office.

Joseph Tremari was elected president and Mrs. Jean A. Adams vice president of the board for the coming year. Mrs. Louise Passalacqua was named clerk. Roy A. Parks was named trustee representative.

The board will continue to meet at 8 p.m. the second and fourth Thursdays of each month at the high school. The July 27 meeting was canceled.

Because the cafeteria lost $468 during the past school year, the price of lunches was raised from 26 to 30 cents for students and from 31 to 35 cents for adults, by board action.

Mrs. Passalacqua was appointed to write the argument in favor of the Sept. 19 bond issue of $1,100,000 to go on the ballots.

The board set 8 p.m., Aug. 3 for the public hearing on the budget.

Northgate Branch Post Office Sought

The San Rafael office is accepting bids for a contract station in the Northgate-Terra Linda area, replacing the one at Noma's Gift Shop, Northgate Center, whose contract ends July 31.

Bid form for this non-delivery station may be obtained at the post office, 40 Bellam Boulevard, and filed no later than July 24.

Kennedy Booster Meeting Slated

Marin chapter of Citizens for Kennedy/Fulbright will meet in Mill Valley Wednesday (July 10) at 8 p.m.

William M. Taylor, chapter chairman, announced that the meeting will be held in room 200, at 33 Reed Boulevard.

"We will formulate our summer and fall goals, and discuss recent developments at national, western and local levels," said Taylor.

Citizens for Kennedy/Fulbright are working to run Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-New York, for President.

Heavy Hatches Keep Mosquito Unit Busy

Tree-hole mosquitoes, rampant this year because of heavy winter rains, are being sprayed in wooded areas of Marin, G. Paul Jones, manager of Marin County Mosquito Abatement District, reported to the board yesterday.

Jones also reported that results have been "good" in spraying heavy hatches of marshland mosquitoes. Yellowjackets increased in June over May but the service requests are down compared to last year, Jones reported. The district began mosquito control in Petaluma and surrounding area July 1.

BABY BRIDGET BEATS THE HEAT

Three-year-old Bridget Barbeau wasn't going to let a little thing like 90 degree heat bother her. In a make-shift wading pool she improvised from the tilted sidewalk in front of her home at 610 Fourth Street, San Rafael, she spent Thursday afternoon cool and contented. Credential Fee Boost Disappears

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The State Board of Education boosted the application fee for educational credentials by $2 two years ago to raise $209,000 for underwriting automation of the process.

But yesterday the board reported all the money from 50,000 applicants a year had vanished into the state's general fund.

The State Department of Finance has told the board, it reported, that the fee should be raised by another $2 or $5 to produce the computer money.

Board President Dorman L. Commons declared it was a "breach of faith" and said the finance department broke a clear verbal agreement with the board.

"Relying on oral assurance is futile," declared Superintendent of Public Instruction Max Rafferty. "The only way you're going to get (the money) is through a hard and fast written statement from the Department of Finance."

MUSICAL CHAIRS

San Rafael Council May Trim Two Jobs

Economy in San Rafael city government has prompted a game of musical chairs among four city departments that will leave two clerks standing when the music stops.

The changes will be recommended to the city council Monday by Asst. Mgr. Virginia Congdon, in charge of personnel. If adopted by the council, two positions would be deleted, two employees transferred and two laid off. One of those to be laid off has already found another job.

Mrs. Congdon explained that there is not enough work in the public works and building departments, so that Mrs. Regina Buchanan, a stenographer clerk one, in pulbic works, with four years with the city, will be transferred to the parks and recreation department, replacing Rosalie Wise, a stenographer clerk one with one year, four months experience.

Mrs. Wise, notified of the recommendation, got a job with the county and worked her last day with the city yesterday, Mrs. Congdon said.

The other change calls for Mrs. Juanita Maguire, a typist-clerk two in the building department for seven years, to go to the finance department, replacing Mrs. Virginia Byers, a typist two who has worked four months for the city. She will leave city employ Aug. 1.

Mrs. Congdon said that the transfers are recommended without change in pay and that they are being made under the seniority rule. She said an employee of six months in the city manager's office is a stenographer-clerk two, with qualification higher than stenographer clerk one and thus is not affected.

She said there was no doubt of the transferred employees' ability to do their work in the new positions.

Nicasio School Budget Adopted

The Nicasio School District Board Thursday night approved a publication budget of $40,200, up $130 from last year, according to Beverly Alberigi, board secretary.

The secretary was unable to say whether this would affect the tax rate which last year was $1.575 per $100 assessed valuation.

The board set Aug. 7 at 8 p.m. at the Nicasio School for its budget hearing.

Probation On Check

George N. Zozzaro, 24, of Brooklyn, N.Y., was placed on a year's probation by Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr., in Marin Municipal Court for passing a worthless $140.40 check January 23 with intent to defraud Stan's for Sports, Inc., San Rafael.

Tomales High Budget Up, But Lower Tax Rate Seen

The Tomales High School District board Thursday night adopted a $350,491 publication budget for fiscal 1968 at its regular meeting in the high school.

This is $57,814 more than the $292,677 budget for the past school year, but the tax rate is expected to drop from the $1.48 per $100 assessed valuation last year to about $1.33 this year because of increased assessed valuation, according to Supt. Anthony Matulich.

Despite the rate drop, however, the total property tax bill is expected to rise from the previous year's $221,511 to about $263,000 this school year, according to the county auditor's office.

Joseph Tremari was elected president and Mrs. Jean A. Adams vice president of the board for the coming year. Mrs. Louise Passalacqua was named clerk. Roy A. Parks was named trustee representative.

The board will continue to meet at 8 p.m. the second and fourth Thursdays of each month at the high school. The July 27 meeting was canceled.

Because the cafeteria lost $468 during the past school year, the price of lunches was raised from 26 to 30 cents for students and from 31 to 35 cents for adults, by board action.

Mrs. Passalacqua was appointed to write the argument in favor of the Sept. 19 bond issue of $1,100,000 to go on the ballots.

The board set 8 p.m., Aug. 3 for the public hearing on the budget.

Northgate Branch Post Office Sought

The San Rafael office is accepting bids for a contract station in the Northgate-Terra Linda area, replacing the one at Noma's Gift Shop, Northgate Center, whose contract ends July 31.

Bid form for this non-delivery station may be obtained at the post office, 40 Bellam Boulevard, and filed no later than July 24.

Window Cuts Arm

Jerry M. Lewis, 26, of 595 Bridgeway, Apt. 8, Sausalito, was treated at Marin General Hospital last night for a cut right forearm suffered when he reportedly went through a plate glass window at 589 Bridgeway at 9:14 p.m. Details of the accident were not available from police reports.

Kennedy Booster Meeting Slated

Marin chapter of Citizens for Kennedy/Fulbright will meet in Mill Valley Wednesday (July 10) at 8 p.m.

William M. Taylor, chapter chairman, announced that the meeting will be held in room 200, at 33 Reed Boulevard.

"We will formulate our summer and fall goals, and discuss recent developments at national, western and local levels," said Taylor.

Citizens for Kennedy/Fulbright are working to run Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-New York, for President.

Heavy Hatches Keep Mosquito Unit Busy

Tree-hole mosquitoes, rampant this year because of heavy winter rains, are being sprayed in wooded areas of Marin, G. Paul Jones, manager of Marin County Mosquito Abatement District, reported to the board yesterday.

Jones also reported that results have been "good" in spraying heavy hatches of marshland mosquitoes. Yellowjackets increased in June over May but the service requests are down compared to last year, Jones reported. The district began mosquito control in Petaluma and surrounding area July 1.

She Knits And Stitches Her Collages

By DON KEOWN

Barbara Fredrick's yarn collages are the outgrowth of the ingenious solution she devised for a Christmas present problem.

She wanted some unusual gifts for the children of her husband's secretary.

On hand she found a quantity of "odds and ends" in yarns, left over from her knitting.

THERE WAS a plentitude, too, of such natural materials as tree branches and twigs, flowers the shells.

Harkening back to her earlier years on ranches in Washington and Oregon, and the strong affection for nature she had developed there, she selected her subject — an owl.

From the yarn and the other materials she fashioned "Old Hooter," as she christened him. And she has been turning out such pieces ever since.

THE OWL, still one of her favorites, has been joined by other subjects, usually wildlife creatures, but sometimes children and flowers.

Mrs. Fredrick's unusual collages, which she says involve "knitting, stitchery, applique, ribbons and braids" along with the natural materials, are currently on display at The Glass Owl gallery, 113 Washington Street, Petaluma, operated by former Marinites Bob and Majorie Irving.

The show will continue through July 22. Viewing hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily except Wednesdays and Sundays.

THE DISPLAY of her artwork, however, represents but one facet of the many talents and interests of the versatile Mrs. Fredrick.

Right now she is also a busy participant in a family project. With husband Arnold, a San Francisco insurance executive, and three sons, Arnold Jr., Tony and Brett, she is engaged in an ambitious remodeling program for their 75-year-old Victorian

Barbara Fredrick Doesn't Have Time To Be Bored

Ross Woman Keeps Active With A Wide Diversity Of Interests

home in Ross — "no gingerbread, but five fireplaces," she says of the house.

The work involves a three-room addition that will replace the old servants' quarters with a playroom, bath and a laundry room, a complete re-doing of the kitchen, glassing-in of a side porch to provide a music room and extensive redecorating and "correcting" throughout the home.

IT REQUIRES, Mrs. Fredrick admits, a great deal of physical toil for all.

But it is work that the entire family can do together, sharing the satisfaction of accomplishment. And it permits the Fredricks to put into practice their theory that youngsters should learn the pleasures and rewards of physical labor, and master the skills that will serve them well in later life in the maintenance of their own homes.

Barbara Fredrick is also an ardent gardening enthusiast. "I like to dig into the soil," she says simply.

HORSEBACK riding has been a hobby since childhood. Indeed, it once was far more than that.

"I took my first ride on horseback in the arms of my mother when I was three weeks old," she says.

By 2, she had learned to ride for herself. And while still a young girl, she was a "top hand" riding the range of the family ranches, and also appearing in rodeos.

HER FATHER, Jidge Tippet, was the son of Pacific Northwest pioneers, his father having come from Texas during a cattle drive to Montana, his mother having crossed the plains by covered wagon.

Jidge Tippet began his ranching in 1903 at age 16 without a ranch when he bought eight heifers at $18 a head, leaving him with $26 for a saddle for the wild horse he had roped and broken.

Tippet then acquired a small homestead and continued to add more land to his holdings until at his death in 1962, he had one of the largest working ranches in the Northwest.

HIS WIDOW, Jessie, who was a New York woman who came West to teach school, and all their children are still actively engaged in ranching. The Fredricks' favorite summer vacation spot in their own ranch in Oregon's beautiful Wallawa Valley.

It serves to remind Barbara Fredrick of those days when she performed ranch work that ranged from cooking to branding and taking part in the cattle drives. And when she reigned as queen of Pendleton's famed rodeo.

The Ross artist's background includes experience in radio, television and public relations, and a career as a model that she recently put to good use in conducting a finishing course for the girls at Katharine Branson School. She gains a special enjoyment, she says, from working with young people.

SHE IS A lover of good music and at one time played first trombone with the Portland Junior Symphony. The large Fredrick home now houses three organs, one an antique. She plays mainly for fun, and says: "My husband is our real musician. He studied organ for years, played clarinet and saxophone, and once had his own dance band."

Her first "taste" of art training was a meager one, at the one-room schoolhouse to which she and the four other Tippet children used to walk or ride daily for their education. Her surroundings then are reflected in her choice of subjects for her art today—the animals and flowers which, she says, "were just about the only friends I had until I was 12, so isolated was our ranch."

Later, she earned six years of college credit, had additional art training in Ohio, and then studied privately in Tokyo where she also picked up a limited vocabulary of Japanese.

WORKING FROM a sketch, Barbara Fredrick traces the pattern for one of her winsome collages on the rough fabric that will serve as a sturdy background for the artistic creation.

HER COLLAGES are not her only artistic endeavor.

Several of her oils also hang in the Fredrick home. Drapes, lamp shades, pillow cases, covered boxes, restored trunks, refinished furniture and preserved flower arrangements all reflect her creative nature.

With all her interests, Barbara Fredrick stresses, her family still comes first.

BUT, SHE FEELS, as a wife and mother, the very diversity of her activities serves her in good stead.

"When you are making the most of yourself, using every day in a way that gives you satisfaction," she says, "you are never bored. And the bored woman simply can't be a good wife or mother. You have to keep active."

Her first "taste" of art training was a meager one, at the one-room schoolhouse to which she and the four other Tippet children used to walk or ride daily for their education. Her surroundings then are reflected in her choice of subjects for her art today—the animals and flowers which, she says, "were just about the only friends I had until I was 12, so isolated was our ranch."

Later, she earned six years of college credit, had additional art training in Ohio, and then studied privately in Tokyo where she also picked up a limited vocabulary of Japanese.

WORKING FROM a sketch, Barbara Fredrick traces the pattern for one of her winsome collages on the rough fabric that will serve as a sturdy background for the artistic creation.

HER COLLAGES are not her only artistic endeavor.

Several of her oils also hang in the Fredrick home. Drapes, lamp shades, pillow cases, covered boxes, restored trunks, refinished furniture and preserved flower arrangements all reflect her creative nature.

With all her interests, Barbara Fredrick stresses, her family still comes first.

BUT, SHE FEELS, as a wife and mother, the very diversity of her activities serves her in good stead.

"When you are making the most of yourself, using every day in a way that gives you satisfaction," she says, "you are never bored. And the bored woman simply can't be a good wife or mother. You have to keep active."

1. Buy it yourself when you reach Europe. You arrange for your own registration. Obtain licenses. Get car insurance in Europe and marine insurance for the trip back. Find a ship to ship it home in. Clear it through customs. Arrange duty payments. Not much fun on a trip.

2. Order it from us before you leave. As your authorized dealer, we handle all this red tape for you. And we make sure you get exactly what you want—model, color, accessories—the works.

The Training Of A Pilot

First Lt. Joseph S. Bleymaier Jr., 24, graduated from the Air Force Academy more than two years ago. But he has been going to school ever since.

Joe is a fighter pilot assigned to Hamilton Air Force Base's 84th Fighter Interceptor Squadron.

For him, and for others like him, the day he entered pilot training was the first of many days he would spend preparing for his role in the Air Force — flying the supersonic F-101 McDonnell Voodoo.

IN JULY OF 1965, Lieutenant Bleymaier, a native of San Pedro, arrived at Webb Air Force Base, near Big Spring, Tex., for his introduction to flying. There he spent more than a year learning to pilot the Cessna T-37 and the Northrop T-38, a supersonic training aircraft.

After completing undergraduate pilot training, he left Big Spring and, with his wife, Marcia, traveled to Sherman, Tex., and Perrin Air Force Base.

It was at Perrin that Joe took his first flight in an interceptor aircraft, the Convair F-102 Delta Dagger.

IN SIX MONTHS of training at the base, located north of Dallas, he became thoroughly familiar with the mission of the Air Defense Command and had the chance to practice intercepting other planes.

But this was only one phase of the training Bleymaier would undergo before he could become a combat-ready F-101 pilot.

From Perrin, Joe went to Tyndall Air Force Base, located near Panama City, on Florida's northwest coastline.

AT THIS AIR Defense Command base, he was checked out in the F-101 and learned some of the flight characteristics of this fighter that can fly faster than 1,000 miles an hour.

From February through April of this year the lieutenant was again a student — student of the tactics of meeting an enemy aircraft high in the sky and bringing his plane into the best possible position to shoot down OPERATIONS OFFICER Maj. Gene F. Rogge of the 84th Fighter Squadron Interceptor Squadron at Hamilton Air Force Base plans for 1st Lt. Joe Bleymaier, left, one of the many training flights which each pilot must fly every month to maintain his proficiency in the techniques of high speed interception of enemy aircraft.

IT'S OFF ON another training mission for Lt. Joe Bleymaier, right, a new F-101 pilot assigned to Hamilton Base's 84th Fighter Interceptor Squadron, and Capt. Charles J. Korus, instructor and a radar intercept officer. Each crew member in the Hamilton squadron spends two days per week practicing the tactics they would use in locating and destroying approaching enemy planes.

THE AIR FORCE interceptor pilot is continually in school. Here pilots Lt. Joe Bleymaier, left, and Capt. Tom Shupp, center, are on alert status. But Maj. Forrest E. Storz puts their time to good use by explaining the proper procedure for the handling of an in-flight emergency. The two pilots take notes for later review. SO FINALLY, after more than 400 hours of flying training, Joe and his family came to Hamilton and the 84th Fighter Interceptor Squadron.

Was his training finished? The patch on the arm of his flight suit declared him a "qualified" fighter pilot of the Air Defense Command.

He was "qualified," but not finished with his "schooling."

AS A MEMBER of the 84th, he was introduced to the squadron's weapons training instructors. They already "knew" Bleymaier from his grades in pilot training at Tyndall.

The Air Defense Command report card told them the areas upon which they would have to concentrate to get him ready to assume his vital responsibilities as a combat-ready pilot capable of defending the Northern California skies against any enemy air attack.

Under the direction of Maj. William H. Latham and Capt. Charles J. Korus, the 84th's training section has the job of conducting ground and airborne training for all the squadron's pilots and radar intercept officers.

exciting concepts from Orinda pools

One reason more people are buying ORINDA pools this year is because ORINDA pools cost less to buy. Your ORINDA custom pool representative, in fact, can show you on paper that, not only is the base price lower in most cases, but when you add the options you want, the price advantage of an ORINDA pool becomes even greater.

And because it is an ORINDA pool, you get all the advantages of an ORINDA pool. The uncommon luxury of design and engineering by Orinda, and styling leadership that has made ORINDA Pools the best selling in northern California.

All of which is still just the beginning. *A giant Laars boiler is included with the 1967 Orinda Custom Royal Series providing low cost heating year long. You also have the traditionally conservative value of an ORINDA pool to enjoy. On top of all the other advantages.

THE FLIGHT SIMULATOR makes it possible for a pilot to be checked on emergency procedures while remaining safely on the ground. Lt. Joe Bleymaier, right, undergoes such a test from Maj. William H. Latham, center, chief of the training section of the 84th Fighter Interceptor Squadron at Hamilton Air Force Base. Along for the "ride" is Capt. Charles J. Korus, left, weapons training instructor for the squadron.

School Is Never Out For Fighter Pilots

Hamilton's Interceptor Squadron Maintains Rigorous Training Schedule

IN JOE BLEYMAIER'S case, they put him through 20 hours of ground training. In these sessions he learned the special problems of flying in the crowded airspace of this area.

Procedures for working with local radar sites and Federal Aviation Agency authorities were covered. Water survival was an important topic, since most missions flown by the pilots of the 84th take them far out to sea.

In addition, before Lieutenant Bleymaier even set foot in an F-101 at Hamilton, he was evaluated as to his flying techniques in the squadron's flight simulator.

THIS BIT OF complex machinery makes it possible for all types of airborne emergencies to be rehearsed on the ground, where mistakes are less costly and can be corrected by an experienced instructor.

Then, what Lieutenant Bleymaier termed "continuation training" began. With a highly skilled radar intercept officer in the back seat of his F-101, he flew eight training missions with the squadron.

The training flights covered the many tactics Air Defense Command fighter pilots use to successfully engage an enemy aircraft. Night mission, high and low level intercepts, acrobatic formation flying all tested Joe's capability as an F-101 pilot.

LATE IN MAY, Lieutenant Bleymaier took his final "exam." It was a little different than those for which he used to "cram" as an Air Force Academy cadet.

This time his classroom was the cockpit of his plane. His instructor was an expert F-101 pilot. But the test was just as hard as any he had taken during the last six years of his schooling.

Joe Bleymaier passed his "exam" and now stands with the other combat-ready pilots who wear the snarling black panther patch, the insignia of the 84th Fighter Interceptor Squadron.

HE NOW WORKS a "week" that is eight days long. Two days are spent here on alert, standing by to be ready to take to the air on a moment's notice should an unidentified aircraft approach our shores.

Another two days he flies with the squadron on routine training missions. Then Joe leaves Hamilton for two days of duty at Siskiyou County Airport in Northern California.

The other two days are called "off-duty days," but most of the men of the 84th find they have many duties to catch up on when these days come around. So they can usually be found with the squadron, working.

IS HIS TRAINING over?

Not if Major Latham and Captain Korus have anything to say about it. They will make sure Joe continues to be ready to carry out the air defense mission of the 84th.

Constant testing, training in new techniques and trips back to Tyndall to actually fire one of the missiles the supersonic F-101 carries lie ahead.

As Joe put it, "You know, it has been two years and 440 hours of flying since I left the academy. But I've been in school ever since."

THE SCHOOLS do not stop, so Lt. Joseph S. Bleymaier Jr. might as well get used to going back to the books. He will find to keep the Air Force ready to meet any threat, our airmen must train constantly.

Constant training by experts, and men like Joe Bleymaier who are more than willing to continue their hard work, help insure a safety shield for this West Coast even in an era when supersonic attack is always a possibility that must be reckoned.

"How Can I Store My Wedding Gown?"

If you plan to package and store your wedding gown, here are a few words of advice for you. If a new or old gown is packed in a plastic package that is not vacuum sealed, the changes in temperature outside the package can cause it to sweat inside and moisten the garment. Mildew is the unhappy result.

Gowns packaged in such a manner should be taken out and aired periodically. This removes the moisture and relieves the strain on the folds.

Many professional dry cleaners offer special wedding gown storage. This is a much safer way to preserve your wedding gown. Talk to your drycleaner and let him explain this service to you.

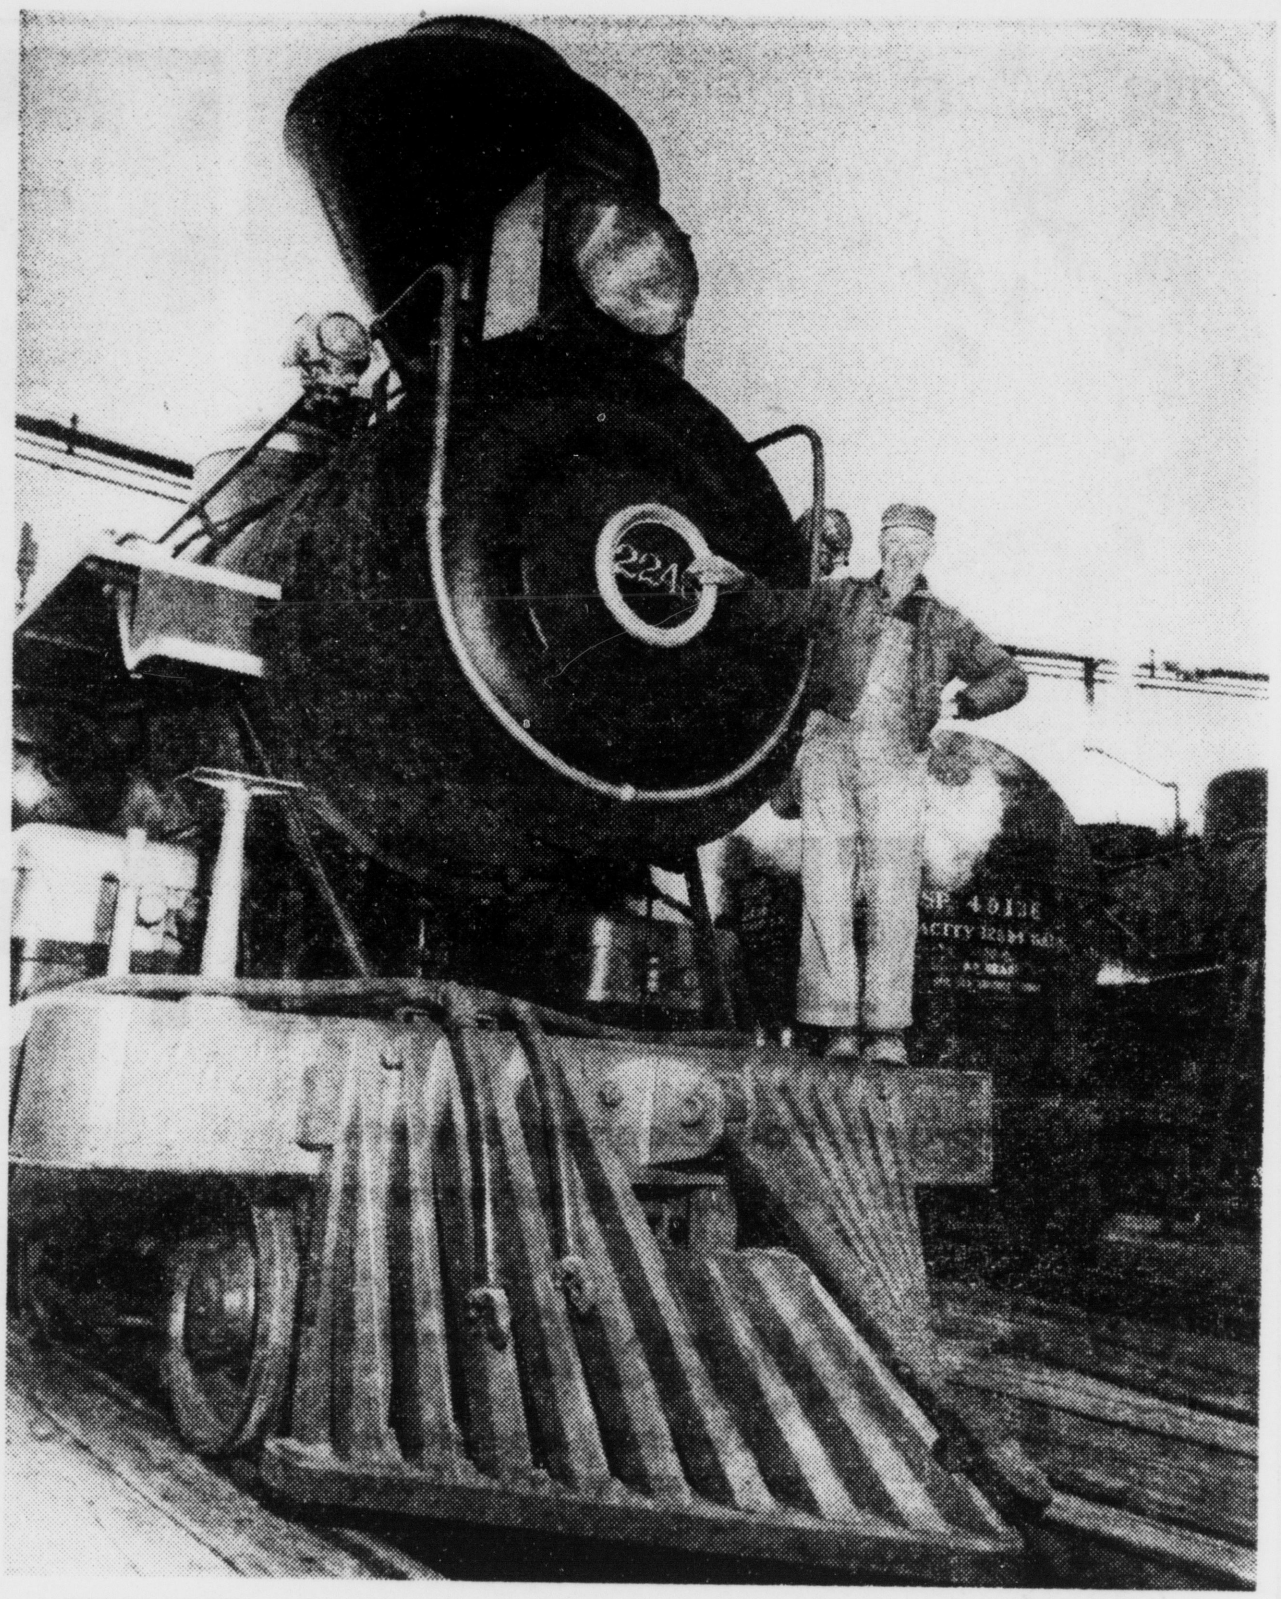
An Argument For Trains



ENGINEER Willis A. Silverthorn of Sausalito, who died last month, posed with Northwestern Pacific Railroad's steam locomotive No. 2248 back in 1955 before that "iron horse" pulled a Willis A. Silverthorn Special carrying rail buffs over NWP tracks. Silverthorn was being honored upon his retirement after 45 years of railroad service. He devoted much of his remaining years to railroad history and lore. (Independent-Journal photo)

(Editor's Note: The death last month of Willis A. Silverthorn, retired locomotive engineer for the Northwestern Pacific Railroad and authority on rail subjects, prompted a fellow enthusiast, Arthur J. Giddings of Larkspur, to write and submit the following article to the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine. Giddings was electrician-lineman at the Tiburon Shops of the Northwestern Pacific during some of that railroad's busiest years in the 1920s and early 1930s.)

By ARTHUR J. GIDDINGS

Willis A. Silverthorn, locomotive engineer, Northwestern Pacific Railroad, retired, has departed upon his most important run.

We, who knew him well, are confident that Bill received the "clear board" from the Chief Dispatcher, and that he brought his train in at the other end of the run on time and in A-1 condition.

Others have written about the passing of Bill Silverthorn, and about the outstanding jobs he did, first in the service of the NWP, then, after retirement, in the writing of railroad history.

INSTEAD, AS my personal tribute to my old friend, I will touch upon a subject that I know Bill would have liked to have seen in print. We discussed it many times. It will, I hope, fan new fires in the minds and hearts of many who are still living and who also played their parts in life upon and along the NWP tracks.

The Northwestern Pacific, in its heyday, was no "Toonerville Trolley." Far from it. We had steam and electric motive power as fine and as well maintained as the best that could be found on the larger roads.

We had the first block signal system using alternating current in the track circuit in the United States.

IN THE LAST days of passenger service, the new, all-steel interurban coaches, acquired to replace the old wooden ones, were perhaps better built, more rugged in construction, and very likely more comfortable and efficient than some of those to be found in service at the present time.

The point is this:

Now, when we seem to be at a complete loss for a solution to our passenger carrying problem, the system that once served us so well, practical and economical, is lying idle in our midst all this time.

IT WOULD BE all the more simple to activate, too, because it has been done before.

Much of the NWP trackage is still there, although we did permit some of it to slip through our fingers. And the Tiburon Branch will soon disappear if we permit that to happen.

Tiburon was once one of the two main terminals, and also the site of the road's principal repair shops.

One of the two original tracks into Sausalito, the other main terminal, is still intact, at least as far as Johnson Street. It no longer reaches the water's edge, where all the tracks once ended at the ferry slips.

BOTH BRANCHES could be double tracked, the tunnels, trestles and bridges widened, and the existing system thereby restored and improved to provide practical, efficient passenger service.

An adequate number of new, modern ferryboats plus a proportionate number of trains could bring the transportation crisis back to normal, and place the automobile in its proper status, as a supplementary conveyance, rather than as a prime solution to the above problem, which it has never been.

The ferryboats and the trains, which men of the caliber of Bill Silverthorn ran for so many years, made it possible for countless commuters to reach their destinations in less time, and in a far more relaxed frame of mind, than do many of those who today fight their way in automobiles through congested traffic.

COUNT ME in. I've been driving a car since I was a teenager, 45 years ago.

But how happy I would be, just to lounge back in a comfortable seat and watch through a coach window the scenery fly by, knowing that the "hogger" up at the "head end" had all the responsibility.

How glad I'd be, too, to get out and pace the deck of a ferryboat once more, breathing the salt air off the bay while gulls soared overhead, calling to one another, and porpoises dived and played across the bow or in the churning wake aft.

BILL SILVERTHORN, and others like him, ran their trains over lines that were the logical routes to service the traveling public of this part of the country. They ran through our cities and towns on carefully chosen thoroughfares and where depots and way station were equipped to provide conveniences and comforts now available, in most cases, only at the end terminal.

Away from towns and cities, they passed through wooded and open country and over trackage that was isolated from other thoroughfares, providing an unspoiled view for the travelers.

We've permitted a great deal of that pleasant picture to be lost to us. The present generation, never having experienced its delights, do not know what they are missing.

BUT IT WAS the passenger transportation then, and it could be again.

An Argument For Trains

(Editor's Note: The death last month of Willis A. Silverthorn, retired locomotive engineer for the Northwestern Pacific Railroad and authority on rail subjects, prompted a fellow enthusiast, Arthur J. Giddings of Larkspur, to write and submit the following article to the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine. Giddings was electrician-lineman at the Tiburon Shops of the Northwestern Pacific during some of that railroad's busiest years in the 1920s and early 1930s.)

By ARTHUR J. GIDDINGS

Willis A. Silverthorn, locomotive engineer, Northwestern Pacific Railroad, retired, has departed upon his most important run.

We, who knew him well, are confident that Bill received the "clear board" from the Chief Dispatcher, and that he brought his train in at the other end of the run on time and in A-1 condition.

Others have written about the passing of Bill Silverthorn, and about the outstanding jobs he did, first in the service of the NWP, then, after retirement, in the writing of railroad history.

INSTEAD, AS my personal tribute to my old friend, I will touch upon a subject that I know Bill would have liked to have seen in print. We discussed it many times. It will, I hope, fan new fires in the minds and hearts of many who are still living and who also played their parts in life upon and along the NWP tracks.

The Northwestern Pacific, in its heyday, was no "Toonerville Trolley." Far from it. We had steam and electric motive power as fine and as well maintained as the best that could be found on the larger roads.

We had the first block signal system using alternating current in the track circuit in the United States.

IN THE LAST days of passenger service, the new, all-steel interurban coaches, acquired to replace the old wooden ones, were perhaps better built, more rugged in construction, and very likely more comfortable and efficient than some of those to be found in service at the present time.

The point is this:

Now, when we seem to be at a complete loss for a solution to our passenger carrying problem, the system that once served us so well, practical and economical, is lying idle in our midst all this time.

IT WOULD BE all the more simple to activate, too, because it has been done before.

Much of the NWP trackage is still there, although we did permit some of it to slip through our fingers. And the Tiburon Branch will soon disappear if we permit that to happen.

Tiburon was once one of the two main terminals, and also the site of the road's principal repair shops.

One of the two original tracks into Sausalito, the other main terminal, is still intact, at least as far as Johnson Street. It no longer reaches the water's edge, where all the tracks once ended at the ferry slips.

BOTH BRANCHES could be double tracked, the tunnels, trestles and bridges widened, and the existing system thereby restored and improved to provide practical, efficient passenger service.

An adequate number of new, modern ferryboats plus a proportionate number of trains could bring the transportation crisis back to normal, and place the automobile in its proper status, as a supplementary conveyance, rather than as a prime solution to the above problem, which it has never been.

The ferryboats and the trains, which men of the caliber of Bill Silverthorn ran for so many years, made it possible for countless commuters to reach their destinations in less time, and in a far more relaxed frame of mind, than do many of those who today fight their way in automobiles through congested traffic.

transportation.

2. On electrically - operated trains, when the hand of an engineer, who may have suffered a heart attack or fainting spell, slips off the controller handle, power is automatically shut off, the brake applied and the train brought to a stop. That was true, even way back in the "old days." On steam locomotives, two men in the cab provide reasonable safety assurance.

3. Railroad trackage usually follows the shortest, straightest route, over as level a terrain as possible, and, whenever possible, away from congestion. These are important factors for a short, speedy haul.

4. Traffic congestion, stoppages, slow movement at peak hours are seldom encountered on a railroad. With rare exceptions, the trains, which have their own right-of-way, move steadily.

5. In major emergencies, such as warfare, earthquakes, floods, etc., the trains usually keep moving, even though private transportation may be brought to a standstill by martial law or acts of God.

6. The train, as a common carrier, has long proven itself to be the most practical, effective and efficient means of hauling a great number of passengers, freight, or both, over long distances, from one destination to another.

OUR GREAT bridges are wonderful in their construction and in the advantages they provide.

Here, however, are some offsetting advantages of the ferryboats:

1. Bridges are vulnerable to enemy action in time of war, being fixed in their positions, and, if destroyed, would require years for replacement. Ferryboats cost far less to build, and are seldom, if ever, clustered. In time of war, they could be even more widely dispersed.

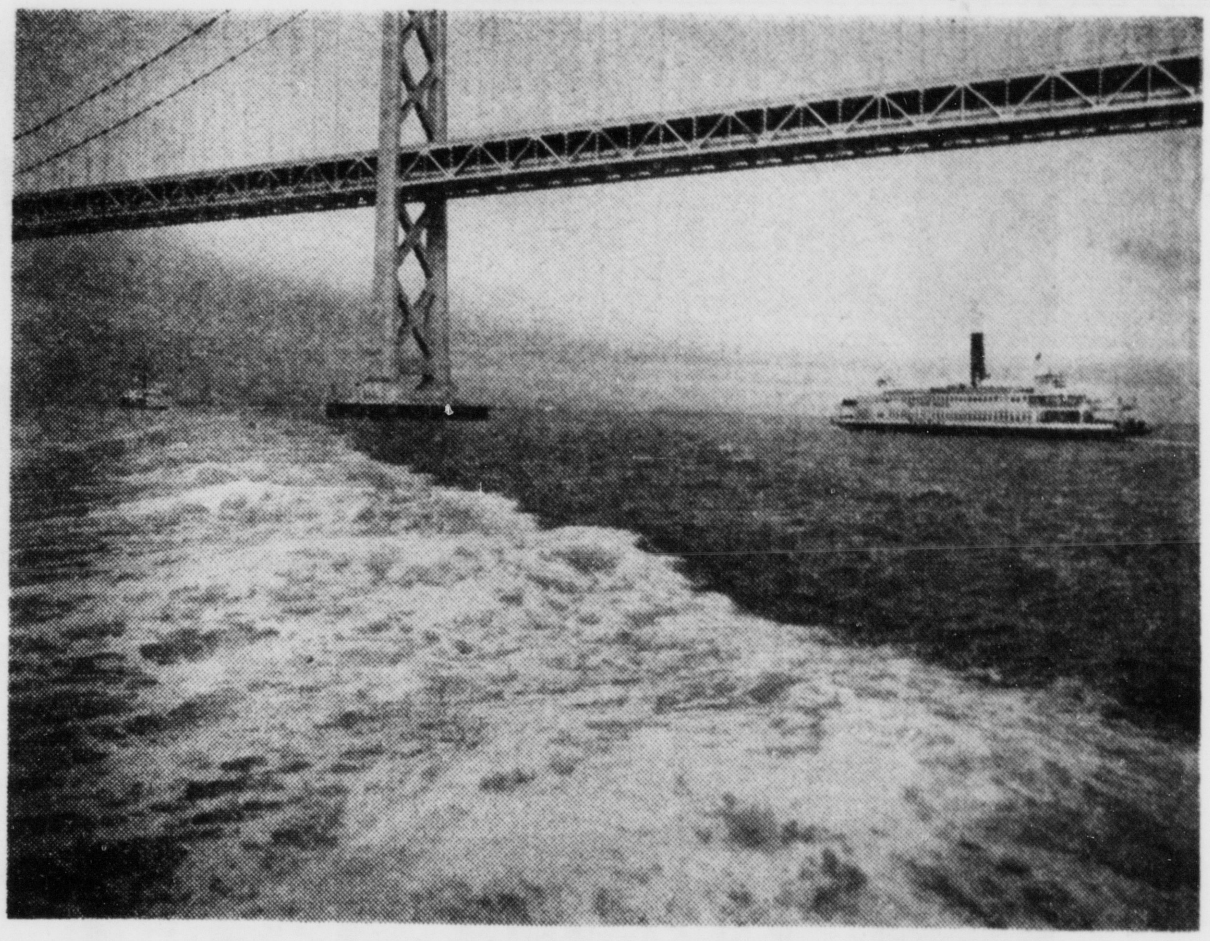
2. Slips and emergency landings can be built to accommodate them at practically any location where depth of water is sufficient to permit their contact with the shore.

3. When necessary, ferryboats can be directed over routes other than those which they normally travel.

REMEMBER: The ferryboats survived the great earthquake of 1906.

Neither the Northwestern Pacific Railroad nor the Southern Pacific Railroad is interested in resuming passenger service.

They can hardly be blamed for that. The public deserted them years ago when it transferred its affections to the automobile. Any overtures to bring about a resumption of the fine system we once had would have to come from the same public, with concrete assurances of future patronage.



FERRYBOATS such as these were the "other half" of the San Francisco Bay Area transportation team that served commuters so well, working in tandem with the trains. But their doom had been spelled by the great new bridges under which they passed with decreasing loads.

IT IS A sad thought, but it might be that the terrible slaughter on our highways, proportionately worse than our combat casualties, may be the thing that will force our hand, one way or another, in the not too distant future.

But there is much more that can be said in favor of a renaissance of railroad passenger traffic in Marin than just the safety factor.

It was a civilized and efficient approach to a problem. Very likely the best approach.

Bill Silverthorn knew that. And I think he would have liked to have seen it stated in print, without qualifications or apologies.

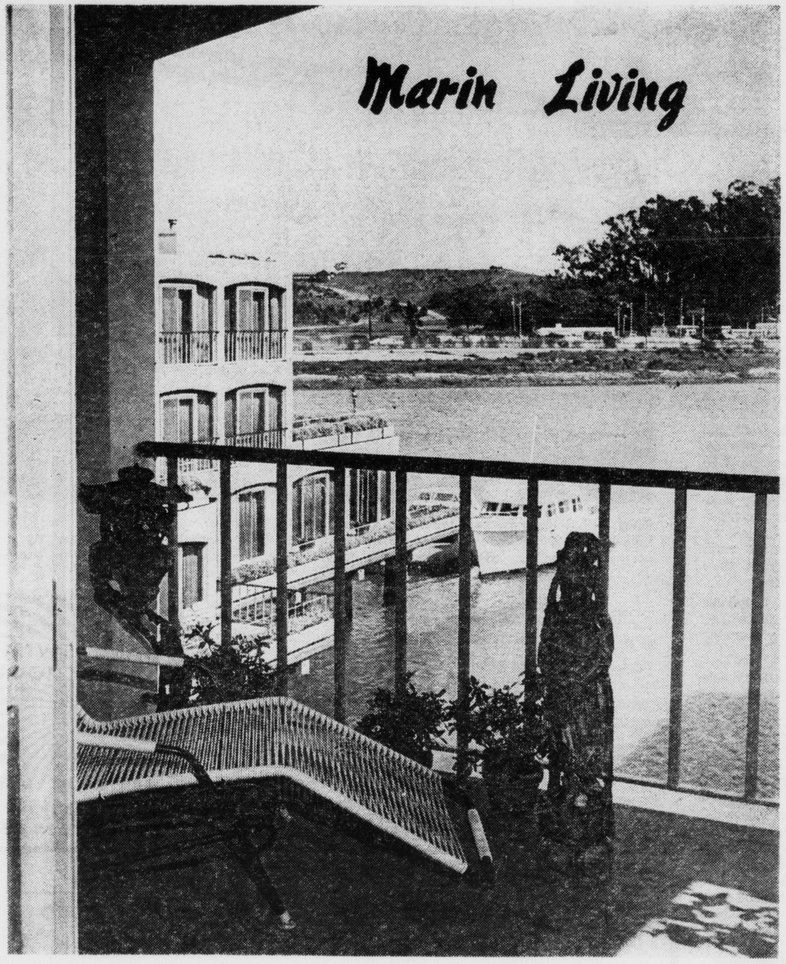
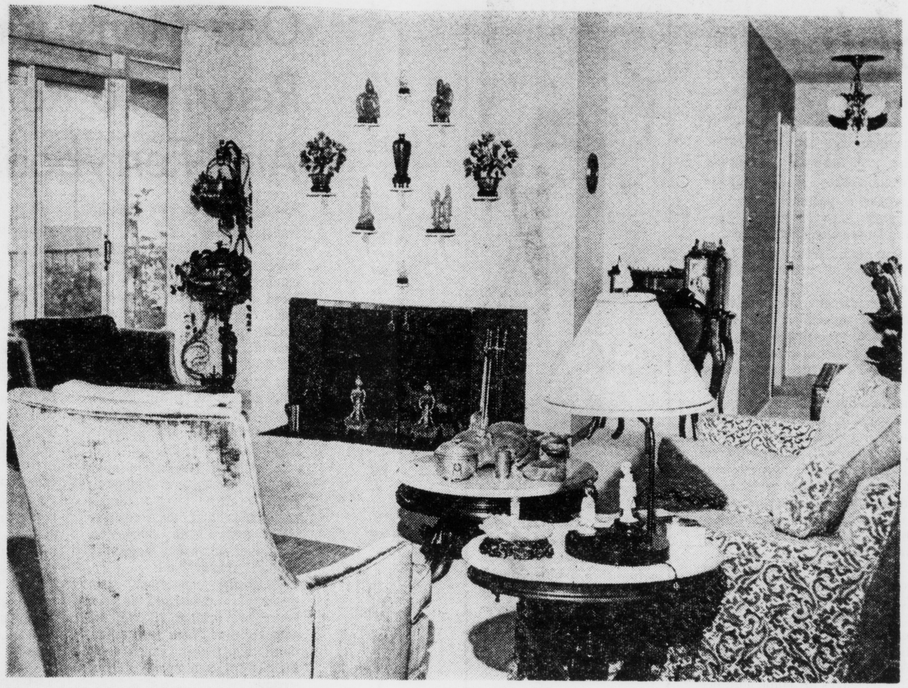
Marin Living



THE SHELTER BAY apartment home of the Burt Capels looks directly down on Richardson Bay with its boating activity. Although the apartment is located on the building's third floor, there are no less than three patios for the outdoor living enjoyment of the occupants.

THE DEN IN the Capel home converts into sleeping quarters for two guests. The room is enhanced by a collection of Spy prints on both of the walls.



THE LIVING ROOM of the Burt Capel apartment home is a charming place with its elite decor and fireplace. Displayed on the fireplace are some of the prized pieces from Mrs. Capel's fine collection of rose quartz and jade trees. (Photos by Bob Hax)

Luxurious Living At Shelter Bay

When the Burt Capels moved from their large home in the Del Mesa section of Ross this spring to a handsome four-bedroom three-bath apartment in Shelter Bay on the water's edge at Richardson Bay, they wondered if all their furniture and magnificent accessories could be accommodated.

Now that they are comfortably settled, Mrs. Capel says: "Really, everything fits in marvelously. I left behind several chairs and a couch, but my friends can't believe how spacious this apartment is."

MRS. CAPEL, who started traveling to the Orient in 1932, made good use of her travels in acquiring priceless furnishings which enhance her new home. The foyer is hospitable and elegant with its five-foot cloisonne candlestick, a showcase of valuable Japanese dolls in native garb, and a wall-hung European barometer.

The living room is furnished sumptuously with pieces that would delight any collector.

An antique light walnut chest of massive proportions is placed at one end of the room flanked by two petitpoint chairs. Another wall displays to advantage an heirloom chest in walnut burl which has been converted to house a complete stereo system. Focal point of the room's decor are the multiple brackets over the fireplace which vividly display Mrs. Capel's collection of rose quartz and jade trees.

ADDING LIFE to the living room is an old Spanish baptismal font which is now used as a plant container with trailing greenery.

Three comfortable armchairs are upholstered in moss green antique linen velvet. A cut-velvet couch harmonizes beautifully. In front of it is an antique marble-topped table.

Of special interest are two custom-made lamps designed by Mrs. Capel which incorporate part of her collection of jade in one, and of ancient ivories in the other.

A PETITE grandmother's clock strikes every quarter hour and an exquisite lady's French desk and chair accent a niche near the fireplace.

It is impossible to describe all of the accessories which add so much warmth and charm to the Capel home. However, one notable piece is an older pewter sweet meat dish which is irreplaceable, as are most of the lovely possessions.

Adjoining is the loggia which is abloom with camellias, azaleas . . . in fact, there are three outdoor areas for entertainment or privacy, even though the apartment is located on the third floor.

SHELTER BAY Apartments, which house 107 units, are in five separate buildings each with spacious ground planting.

The dining area of their Shelter Bay apartment is furnished with an antique mahogany pedestal table. Two of the four dining chairs have full upholstery of old rose velvet. The other two are done in celadon green velvet.

Perhaps the most distinctive room in the whole home is the master bedroom where a huge Victorian walnut high headboarded bed is matched with an important dresser and bedside chest of the same period.

THE BEDSPREAD is in red and white quilted damask and the drapes are swagged in Victorian styling of red satin with white tassels. White voile pull curtains complete the sliding window wall treatment.

Another interesting piece in the bedroom, which also opens to an outside garden, is an old mahogany French chest with inlaid marquetry of fruitwood. Dresden figurines, original enameled plaques, framed bisque figurines and authentic original miniatures add to the detail and complete the period decor.

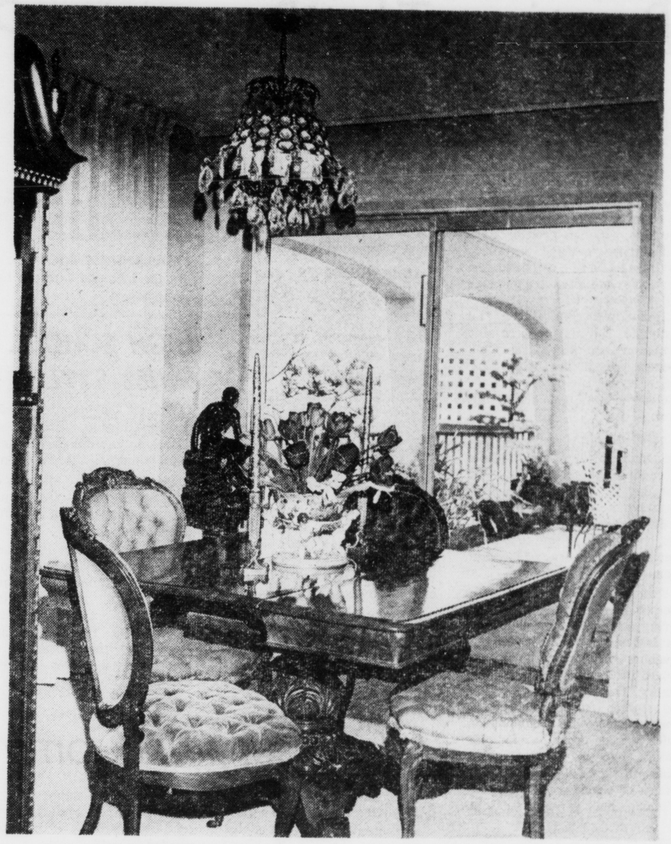
The two other bedrooms in the home are utilized by Mr. and Mrs. Capel as private sitting room and home office.

MRS. CAPEL'S private sitting room has a collection of Toby mugs from floor to ceiling on one wall. Matching antique plaques in the Toby influence carry out the theme.

Capel's den is essentially masculine, with a comfortable lounge chair and a substantial feeling.

One large bedroom, detached from the others, since it opens from the main foyer to an extensive view deck, has been converted to a family room. The Capels have removed the closet and installed a formica-topped bar, a refrigerator, shelves for bottled liquors and a priceless family collection of antique steins. Walls are lined with matching framed prints by Spy.

ALL IN ALL, the Capels have created a real home out of an apartment, sacrificing none of their beautiful possessions by transition from a house.



THE DINING AREA of the Shelter Bay apartment features an antique pedestal table and sumptuous velvet chairs. The area opens directly to the loggia with its greenery and view of the water.

THE VICTORIAN BED of the Burt Capels' master bedroom is of beautifully burled walnut. Adding to the charm of the room is the red and white quilted damask spread and the Victorian drapes in red and white satin. White tassels add a further distinctive touch to the drapes.

Beating The Baggage Problem

When You Go By Boat, There's No Trouble

Many veteran travelers to Europe advise their friends to "pack two suitcases and then leave one at home" when taking a vacation.

Some, though, cannot do without those "little extras" that so quickly fill an entire trunk.

If you're traveling to Europe by ship, you can probably take all of those "extras." Steamship companies offer passengers virtually unlimited baggage allowance.

Holland-America Line, for example, will accept three suitcases or one large trunk per person, in addition to any luggage carried aboard to the stateroom for use during the trip.

THE "EXTRA" baggage may be stored in the baggage room, accessible at certain hours of the day for the convenience of passengers.

Steamship companies also offer passengers sailing to Europe several extra free "baggage bonuses."

Passenger's clothing and personal articles needed for the many and diversified shipboard activities, particularly formal evening wear, may be left on board after a passenger disembarks. This baggage may then be stored (free of charge by many steamship companies) and picked up later for the return trip. If the passenger plans to fly back to the United States or Canada, the unneeded clothing and personal articles used during the crossing may also be shipped directly back to the point of embarkation as "unaccompanied baggage."

ARRANGEMENTS may be made on board with the baggage master.

If a vacationer is flying to Europe, but returning to the United States or Canada by ship, steamship companies offer still another free "bonus." Advance reservations may be made for baggage to be shipped to Europe and forwarded to the vessel on which the passenger has return reservations. This allows passengers to pack clothing and personal articles they might need for sailing back to the United States or Canada, without having to take this excess baggage around Europe.

In addition to the generous free baggage allowance, extremely low excess baggage rates can be an important money-saving factor for passengers returning to the United States by ship with substantial quantities of purchases made abroad.

HOLLAND-AMERICA Line offers the following hints on baggage when traveling by ship:

Get an adequate supply of baggage tags and labels when you pick up your steamship tickets. These should indicate whether a particular piece of luggage is to be put into the stateroom or baggage room.

Passengers traveling by train to the port of embarkation may have heavy baggage checked through directly to the steamship company's pier, eliminating the need to claim baggage at the railroad station and arranging for its transportation to the ship. Check local express companies as well as the steamship company as to how far in advance baggage should be sent.

Upon arrival in the United States, passengers may arrange to have heavy baggage forwarded from the pier and delivered to a desired destination. Check the purser's office aboard ship for details well in advance.

Finally, all transportation companies' liability for lost or damaged baggage is limited and it is suggested that a passenger purchase baggage insurance at the line's office or travel agency to cover his effects from the time he leaves his home until his return at the end of the trip.

HIGH SCHOOL SWISS STYLE

Of all of nature's challenges, mountain climbing continues to capture the enthusiasm of more people each year.

Once the mighty Matterhorn of Switzerland was unconquerable; today it is climbed routinely.

To accommodate the many people who want to participate in this exhilarating sport, there are mountaineering schools throughout Switzerland. The courses are short, but the sensations of triumph that follow are enduring.

PRETTY Nettie Stewart will reign as the Indian princess over festivities in the cattle country town of Merritt, B.C., when that British Columbia community stages its annual four-day Huckleberry Fair and Rodeo, starting Aug. 31. The event is always a big tourist attraction.

A Glossary Of Common Nautical Terms

Youngster's aboard an ocean liner for the first time generally show more curiosity than adults.

Most have heard about the "crow's nest" and/or the "poop deck." Invariably, they ask to see them. And then the questions about other nautical terms never seem to end.

As a guide for the sea traveler, Holland-America Line offers the following listing of some of the more common nautical terms that passengers are likely to hear:

Aft — Near, toward or in the stern (rear) of a vessel.

Amidships (or midships) — In or toward the middle of a vessel, between bow and stern.

Beam — The breadth of a vessel at its widest part.

Bow — The forward (front) part of a vessel.

Bulkhead — Any of the partition walls used to separate various interior areas of a ship such as rooms, holds, etc.

Crow's Nest — A partly enclosed platform high on a mast for a lookout.

Disembark — To land; to put or to go ashore from a ship.

Embark — To go aboard a ship; to begin a journey.

Fantail — The stern overhang in vessels that have round or elliptical after endings to uppermost decks, and which extend well abaft the after perpendicular or rudder post.

Guides For Two Sets Of Travelers

Two new travel books are aimed at specialized readerships.

Rochelle Girson, a Saturday Review editor, has written "Maiden Voyages" for the woman traveler. Her message is that a woman need not hesitate to travel abroad alone, providing adequate plans and preparations have been made.

Drawing upon her own travel experience, which is extensive, she offers a multitude of suggestions, applicable to various means of travel and to many destinations.

The $5.75 book, published by Harcourt, Brace & World Inc., is written in a witty manner and at a lively pace that makes it interesting reading, even for those who do not fall into the category for which Miss Girson is writing. In other words, it's entertaining, as well as informative.

"Let's Go to Europe" is published annually be the Harvard Student Agencies Inc. as a guidebook for youths headed across the Atlantic. It is totally a student-project, its material gathered and evaluated by a corps of Harvard and Radcliffe students who journey to Europe for that purpose.

There is an emphasis upon cities, facilities and sights of prime student interest, but the book, selling for $1.95 softcover, is also a valuable reference for older tourists who might share with students the necessity for economizing, or who might be still young enough at heart to enjoy at least a taste of the pastimes and the way-of-life of the college and high school sets.

Beating The Baggage Problem

When You Go By Boat, There's No Trouble

Many veteran travelers to Europe advise their friends to "pack two suitcases and then leave one at home" when taking a vacation.

Some, though, cannot do without those "little extras" that so quickly fill an entire trunk.

If you're traveling to Europe by ship, you can probably take all of those "extras." Steamship companies offer passengers virtually unlimited baggage allowance.

Holland-America Line, for example, will accept three suitcases or one large trunk per person, in addition to any luggage carried aboard to the stateroom for use during the trip.

THE "EXTRA" baggage may be stored in the baggage room, accessible at certain hours of the day for the convenience of passengers.

Steamship companies also offer passengers sailing to Europe several extra free "baggage bonuses."

Passenger's clothing and personal articles needed for the many and diversified shipboard activities, particularly formal evening wear, may be left on board after a passenger disembarks. This baggage may then be stored (free of charge by many steamship companies) and picked up later for the return trip. If the passenger plans to fly back to the United States or Canada, the unneeded clothing and personal articles used during the crossing may also be shipped directly back to the point of embarkation as "unaccompanied baggage."

ARRANGEMENTS may be made on board with the baggage master.

If a vacationer is flying to Europe, but returning to the United States or Canada by ship, steamship companies offer still another free "bonus." Advance reservations may be made for baggage to be shipped to Europe and forwarded to the vessel on which the passenger has return reservations. This allows passengers to pack clothing and personal articles they might need for sailing back to the United States or Canada, without having to take this excess baggage around Europe.

In addition to the generous free baggage allowance, extremely low excess baggage rates can be an important money-saving factor for passengers returning to the United States by ship with substantial quantities of purchases made abroad.

HOLLAND-AMERICA Line offers the following hints on baggage when traveling by ship:

Get an adequate supply of baggage tags and labels when you pick up your steamship tickets. These should indicate whether a particular piece of luggage is to be put into the stateroom or baggage room.

Passengers traveling by train to the port of embarkation may have heavy baggage checked through directly to the steamship company's pier, eliminating the need to claim baggage at the railroad station and arranging for its transportation to the ship. Check local express companies as well as the steamship company as to how far in advance baggage should be sent.

Upon arrival in the United States, passengers may arrange to have heavy baggage forwarded from the pier and delivered to a desired destination. Check the purser's office aboard ship for details well in advance.

Finally, all transportation companies' liability for lost or damaged baggage is limited and it is suggested that a passenger purchase baggage insurance at the line's office or travel agency to cover his effects from the time he leaves his home until his return at the end of the trip.

HIGH SCHOOL SWISS STYLE

Of all of nature's challenges, mountain climbing continues to capture the enthusiasm of more people each year.

Once the mighty Matterhorn of Switzerland was unconquerable; today it is climbed routinely.

To accommodate the many people who want to participate in this exhilarating sport, there are mountaineering schools throughout Switzerland. The courses are short, but the sensations of triumph that follow are enduring.

PRETTY Nettie Stewart will reign as the Indian princess over festivities in the cattle country town of Merritt, B.C., when that British Columbia community stages its annual four-day Huckleberry Fair and Rodeo, starting Aug. 31. The event is always a big tourist attraction.

A Glossary Of Common Nautical Terms

Youngster's aboard an ocean liner for the first time generally show more curiosity than adults.

Most have heard about the "crow's nest" and/or the "poop deck." Invariably, they ask to see them. And then the questions about other nautical terms never seem to end.

As a guide for the sea traveler, Holland-America Line offers the following listing of some of the more common nautical terms that passengers are likely to hear:

Aft — Near, toward or in the stern (rear) of a vessel.

Amidships (or midships) — In or toward the middle of a vessel, between bow and stern.

Beam — The breadth of a vessel at its widest part.

Bow — The forward (front) part of a vessel.

Bulkhead — Any of the partition walls used to separate various interior areas of a ship such as rooms, holds, etc.

Crow's Nest — A partly enclosed platform high on a mast for a lookout.

Disembark — To land; to put or to go ashore from a ship.

Draft (or draught) — The depth of water a ship draws.

A HOUSE OF walrus skins of the type seen only on the lonely, storm-lashed King Island off Alaska's western coast is included among the Native Village exhibits at Fairbanks' Alaska Purchase Centennial celebration.

Alaska Native Village Highlights Festivities

Eskimo And Indian Art, Skills Are Demonstrated In Fairbanks

Eskimo and Indian art, skills and games that have languished for years, are being brought back to life this summer in Alaska.

Sparking the revival is a birthday party in the big wilderness state, the 1967 Alaska Purchase Centennial celebration. The official headquarters for the celebration is the Alaska 67 Exposition at Fairbanks.

To show the rich cultural heritage of Alaska's native peoples, Alaska's 67 directors and the Fairbanks Native Association have built a model Indian and Eskimo village at the exposition.

Throughout remote Alaska wilderness regions, villagers were asked to contribute what they could to help build the model village, and a major revival of culture got underway in Alaska as centennial art scouts — native artists themselves — hit the trails looking for old and unique examples of Indian and Eskimo culture.

Native carving — in ivory, wood, whale bone, soapstone and just about anything available — are being displayed in the village, and some of the carvings are rare examples of an art handed down through generations of skilled artisans living in remote, snow-swept Alaska villages.

Small birch-bark canoes, model fishwheels, Indian and Eskimo masks used in intricate dance rituals, complicated beadwork patterns on skin mukluks and parkas — all can be seen in the Native Village exhibit.

Model Indian and Eskimo houses show what life is like even today in remote villages — Eskimo houses of sod, Athabascan and Tlingit Indian log cabins, a unique house entirely of walrus skins stretched over logs lashed with sealskin rawhide depicting housing on tiny, storm-lashed King Island off Alaska's western coast.

Blanket-toss demonstrations are being staged twice a day as well as a demonstration of the delicate art of kayak-paddling on the Chena River next to the village. Rides for visitors in a 30-foot Eskimo umiak are offered as well as samples of fresh smoked salmon from an Indian smokehouse in the village.

Rides with dog teams and reindeer pulling sleds on wheels (sorry, there is no snow at Alaska 67 this summer), colorful dance rituals by Indian and Eskimo dancers direct from remote villages where the dances have remained unchanged for generations—there is plenty to see and do at Native Village, Fairbanks, Alaska.

Food For Doves And Hawks

FIRE AND MOVEMENT by Jac Weller, Thomas Y. Crowell Co., 268 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by James E. Williams.

U. S. forces in Vietnam have already experienced bigger victories than Operation Starlite, but no other so important.

Aug. 21, 1965, was the day that U. S. Marines routed the Viet Cong, concluding a three-day battle south of Chu Lai. It was the first serious defeat of the Viet Cong.

Until Operation Starlite, South Vietnamese troops, with the aid of U. S. troops, had scored some victories, but they weren't decisive. The big one just hadn't come.

Director of this important push was Maj. Gen. Lewis W. Walt Jr. At the end of the battle, Viet Cong casualties were listed at 1,600, including 641 VC bodies counted by Marines.

As author Jac Weller points out, operations like this one and the one that followed, Piranha, are high points of a successful counterinsurgency with "the proper use of intelligence, mobility and power to surprise, surround and destroy enemy units."

Starlite showed where the U.S. had previously failed—subdividing a giant strength into small but effective units. In other words: fighting the enemy with the same tactics he had used successfully many times before.

With Starlite as a springboard, Weller reviews what he calls "bargain-basement warfare in the Far East."

He recounts the war between the Philippines government and the Huks, and describes the experience of the British—first in Malaya and then in the more recent confrontation between Indonesia and Malaysia.

The author, who spent hundreds of hours researching this book in the battlefields of Vietnam, sounds one alarm again and again: "We must provide a strong civilian program to match the fighting strength."

In summing up the crisis in the Far East, he gives both the dove and hawk food for thought.

He says the case for pulling out of Vietnam is a strong one.

"The best argument, being that young Americans are being asked to risk sudden, violent death and to spend a considerable portion of their lives in a place that couldn't be less attractive to most of them."

Another is that the fighting might escalate into a conventional war against the Chinese Communists or large "volunteer" units from that country on the Asian mainland.

On the other hand, he says, the principal reason why the U.S. must fight on in Vietnam, or obtain an honorable and secure peace, is geographical. He backs it up with several pages of reasoning, concluding that while Vietnam is costly, U.S. and its allies are buying time for the Free World.

Weller documents his personal findings with vivid pictures of what the American soldier faces in the jungles of Vietnam.

It makes no difference if a reader is a dove or a hawk, Weller's pronouncements deserve careful study.

POSITIVE GOLF by Gary Player, McGraw-Hill, 119 pages, $5.95.

GOLF WITH YOUR HANDS by Louis T. Stanley, Thomas Y. Crowell Co., 256 pages, $10. Reviewed by Harry Craft.

Here are two recent works for both the dub who hasn't managed to break 100 and the more experienced golfer who scores in the 70s. For the man of small stature wishing to lengthen his drives, there is special reassurance in Gary Player's book.

A small man, he embarked on a series of body-building exercises from weight-lifting and jumping rope to yoga that enabled him to match the big men and reach the par-five greens with his second shot. Eventually he went on to become a winner in every major tournament.

Most golfers spend too little time developing the muscles that influence their games. Player's schedule is aimed at strengthening the hands, lower arms, lower back muscles and legs and avoiding over-development of upper arms, neck and chest. His routine also includes proper dieting and sleep recommendations.

While Player believes that a golfer should know exactly what he is doing at all times in form, Louis Stanley stresses the key part played by the hands. He asserts that if the hands are functioning properly, the hips, shoulders, back and leg muscles and the rest of the body will fall naturally into place wtihout conscious effort.

Though this may seem somewhat incompatible with Player's advice, he gives his endorsement to Stanley' book and has written the foreward for it.

Stanley is a talented photographer and "Golf with your Hands" is done almost entirely with photographs illustrating grip, stance and form of such renowned golfers as Player, Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Lloyd Mangrum and Lawson Little.

Both books have easy flow and continuity, but golfers will find them to be good pick-up reading by turning at random to almost any page.

Next time you have difficulty sleeping, switch on the light, reach for a copy of Dr. W. W. Bauer's "All You Need to Know About Insomnia, Sleep and Dreams," and read.

If it doesn't help you sleep, it will at least enable you to better understand your misery.

Dr. Bauer, former director of health education for the American Medical Association and editor of AMA's Today's Health Guide, explodes some old myths about sleep, discusses the elements of sleep and its archenemy insomnia, tells you how to woo the former and combat the latter, cautions against the use of drugs, explores the role and reasons for dreams, and suggests a brief bibliography for further reading.

The content of this small paperback is deliberately nontechnical, since it is intended only to provide the layman with the information he requires to derive maximum benefits from sleep and dreams.

Dr. Bauer tells us that while insomnia can be rooted in serious physiological causes, it is far more likely the creature of minor physical discomforts, or (the most frequent villain) an inability to relax and discard the tensions of the day. The best way to defeat sleeplessness, then, is to acquire peace of mind at bedtime. Tactics that encourage bodily comfort necessary for sound sleep are also enumerated.

Dreams, Dr. Bauer goes on to say, are as essential as sleep, and deprivation of either can foment real emotional and physical problems. As for dream interpretation, this can be undertaken only by a trained professional, and on an individual basis.

While Dr. Bauer has included no real new or startling information in his booklet, he has covered his subject cogently and well, within the limits he has set for himself.

FOR THE COOK

Fancying Up The Bean In All Its Many Forms

THE COMPLETE BEAN COOKBOOK by Victor Bennett, Prentice-Hall, 298 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

The bean rarely appears as the principal subject of a cookbook, perhaps because it has been so long regarded as the working man's food, or perhaps because it tastes so good without fancy fixing. Here, however, the bean rates a book all to itself, and a very good book it is.

Victor Bennett, maitre d' of the Nob Hill Restaurant in San Francisco's Mark Hopkins Hotel, has put together a collection of 450 recipes.

All feature the bean of one kind or another — string beans, soybeans, pinto beans, navy beans, lima beans, kidney beans, cranberry beans, white beans, butter beans, bean sprouts, canned pork and beans, garbanzos, split peas, lentils, to name only a few.

The range of recipes is wide, from hors d'oeuvres through soups, salads, entrees, casseroles, breads and pastries to and including beverages and desserts. A sampling: Beans Egyptian, U.S. Senate Restaurant Bean Soup, Lima Chuck Wagon Salad, Bean Sauce Hawaiian, Garbanzo Beans With Coconut, Pea Beans Bretonne, High Soy Yeast Bread, Chinese Almond Cookies. Many cultures are represented. One finishes the book more appreciative of the diverse opportunities offered the cook by the versatile bean family, and eager to put to the kitchen test some of the suggestions.

Oh yes, by way of "camp," there's an introduction, "Homage to the Bean," by Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, who seems to pop up everywhere these days.

Food For Doves And Hawks

FIRE AND MOVEMENT by Jac Weller, Thomas Y. Crowell Co., 268 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by James E. Williams.

U. S. forces in Vietnam have already experienced bigger victories than Operation Starlite, but no other so important.

Aug. 21, 1965, was the day that U. S. Marines routed the Viet Cong, concluding a three-day battle south of Chu Lai. It was the first serious defeat of the Viet Cong.

Until Operation Starlite, South Vietnamese troops, with the aid of U. S. troops, had scored some victories, but they weren't decisive. The big one just hadn't come.

Director of this important push was Maj. Gen. Lewis W. Walt Jr. At the end of the battle, Viet Cong casualties were listed at 1,600, including 641 VC bodies counted by Marines.

As author Jac Weller points out, operations like this one and the one that followed, Piranha, are high points of a successful counterinsurgency with "the proper use of intelligence, mobility and power to surprise, surround and destroy enemy units."

Starlite showed where the U.S. had previously failed—subdividing a giant strength into small but effective units. In other words: fighting the enemy with the same tactics he had used successfully many times before.

With Starlite as a springboard, Weller reviews what he calls "bargain-basement warfare in the Far East."

He recounts the war between the Philippines government and the Huks, and describes the experience of the British—first in Malaya and then in the more recent confrontation between Indonesia and Malaysia.

The author, who spent hundreds of hours researching this book in the battlefields of Vietnam, sounds one alarm again and again: "We must provide a strong civilian program to match the fighting strength."

Reviews Of New Reading

In summing up the crisis in the Far East, he gives both the dove and hawk food for thought.

He says the case for pulling out of Vietnam is a strong one.

"The best argument, being that young Americans are being asked to risk sudden, violent death and to spend a considerable portion of their lives in a place that couldn't be less attractive to most of them."

Another is that the fighting might escalate into a conventional war against the Chinese Communists or large "volunteer" units from that country on the Asian mainland.

On the other hand, he says, the principal reason why the U.S. must fight on in Vietnam, or obtain an honorable and secure peace, is geographical. He backs it up with several pages of reasoning, concluding that while Vietnam is costly, U.S. and its allies are buying time for the Free World.

Weller documents his personal findings with vivid pictures of what the American soldier faces in the jungles of Vietnam.

It makes no difference if a reader is a dove or a hawk, Weller's pronouncements deserve careful study.

Advice For The Duffer

POSITIVE GOLF by Gary Player, McGraw-Hill, 119 pages, $5.95.

GOLF WITH YOUR HANDS by Louis T. Stanley, Thomas Y. Crowell Co., 256 pages, $10. Reviewed by Harry Craft.

Here are two recent works for both the dub who hasn't managed to break 100 and the more experienced golfer who scores in the 70s. For the man of small stature wishing to lengthen his drives, there is special reassurance in Gary Player's book.

A small man, he embarked on a series of body-building exercises from weight-lifting and jumping rope to yoga that enabled him to match the big men and reach the par-five greens with his second shot. Eventually he went on to become a winner in every major tournament.

Most golfers spend too little time developing the muscles that influence their games. Player's schedule is aimed at strengthening the hands, lower arms, lower back muscles and legs and avoiding over-development of upper arms, neck and chest. His routine also includes proper dieting and sleep recommendations.

While Player believes that a golfer should know exactly what he is doing at all times in form, Louis Stanley stresses the key part played by the hands. He asserts that if the hands are functioning properly, the hips, shoulders, back and leg muscles and the rest of the body will fall naturally into place wtihout conscious effort.

Though this may seem somewhat incompatible with Player's advice, he gives his endorsement to Stanley' book and has written the foreward for it.

Stanley is a talented photographer and "Golf with your Hands" is done almost entirely with photographs illustrating grip, stance and form of such renowned golfers as Player, Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Lloyd Mangrum and Lawson Little.

Both books have easy flow and continuity, but golfers will find them to be good pick-up reading by turning at random to almost any page.

Sportswriters, Visitor In Ireland And A New England Naturalist

By DON KEOWN

Judging by the contents of "Best Sports Stories 1967," last year was not a vintage year for sportswriting.

Not that the collection won't hold the interest of those who live in that "child world" where football coaches are more important than Presidents, and the outcome of baseball games of greater consequence than wars. But the award-winning stories representing the best from newspapers and magazines in 1966 just seem to generate less excitement, to be less sparkling in style, than the compilations of previous years.

A panel consisting of John Chamberlain, Robert Harron and John Hutchens has chosen for the three top awards the Philadelphia Bulletin's Sandy Grady (coverage of the Emil Griffith-Joey Archer fight), the New York Times' Robert Lipsyte (a feature on Rookie League baseball) and freelancer Gay Talese (a profile of Joe DiMaggio for Esquire magazine).

Only the Talese feature seems really outstanding, and it in an embarrassing way, since it appears to be a flagrant invasion of the very reserve and desire for privacy that are DiMaggio's chief attributes.

The "runner-up" stories once again include a World Series yarn by the San Francisco Chronicle's Bob Stevens. One of the better pieces is by Newsweek's John Lake, and is about track and field's young phenom, Kansan Jim Ryun (who, incidentally, is also represented twice in the photo section, as the subject of one picture, as the camera man for another in his capacity as a part-time photographer for the Topeka Capital-Journal).

Dave Anderson's analysis of professional football's injury problem is another standout. And among the "spot news" stories, Frank Boggs of the Oklahoma City Daily Oklahoman has a superior entry in his coverage of Cassius Clay's slaughter of Cleveland Williams.

Once again, the annual contains a roster of all the 1966 sports champions, no small asset to the real sports nut.

BEST SPORTS STORIES 1967 edited by Irving T. Marsh and Edward Dhre, Dutton, 335 pages, $4.95.

IRISH JOURNAL by Heinrich Boll, McGraw-Hill, 127 pages, $4.95.

HUNDRED ACRE WELCOME by Ronald Rood, Stephen Greene Press, 132 pages, $4.95.

THE BRILLIANT German novelist Heinrich Boll first recorded his impressions of and reactions to Ireland and its people after a visit to that poor but proud island in the mid-1950s, and the book was published in his native land in 1957 under the title "Irisches Tagebuch."

Now, 10 years later, it appears in English as "Irish Journal."

It is a shame we have had to wait so long for it, but it would have been far worse if we had been denied forever the pleasure of its contents. For it is something of a minor classic in the travel writing field.

With rare sensitivity and immense descriptive ability, Boll succeeds in transmitting, not just the sights and sounds of Ireland of a decade ago, but the very flavor and mood of that country. People emerge from his pages in all their simplicities and complexities, treated with sympathy, yet honesty.

Honors for the success of the book must be shared by Boll with translator Leila Vennetwitz, who has made the change from German to English without damage to the flow of language and without lessening the impact of Boll's masterful choice of words and phrases. Hers is an altogether exceptional job.

Lovers of Ireland will enjoy the book immensely, despite the absence of cloying sentimentality so often indulged in by writers treating this subject. Fans of travel books, or just plain enthusiasts for good writing, will, likewise, find it a most pleasurable and refreshing experience.

THE VERMONT team of writer-naturalist Ronald Rood and publisher Stephen Greene has produced another delightful book for animal and nature lovers in "Hundred Acre Welcome."

Those who enjoyed Rood's "Land Alive" and "The Loon in My Bathtub" will find this one even better.

The book is built principally around a vacation trip by the Rood family from their Green Mountain home to the island of Chincoteague, Va., to witness the annual round-up of wild ponies, the colt auction and the accompanying festivities. It wound up, of course, with the Roods among the purchasers — and transporting their colt home in their station wagon.

There is a great deal more to the book, much of it Rood's nature observations on their 100-acre Vermont farm and elsewhere as the family travels. It makes for pleasant, relaxed reading — perfect as vacation fare, it seems to us.

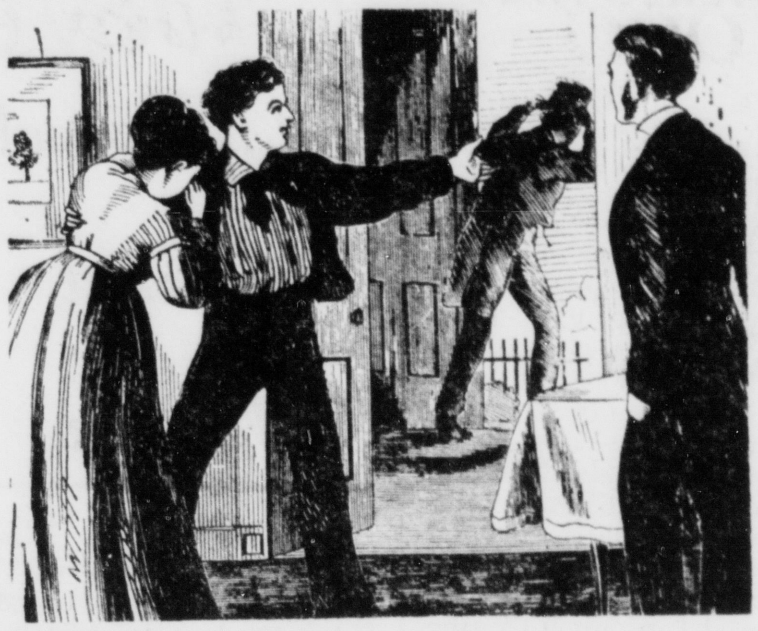
The Roods appear to be very much the kind of family we would like to know. We're sure you'll feel the same, after reading "Hundred Acre Welcome." Too, it will no doubt make you want to track down Rood's two earlier books, if you haven't read them already.

SWEDENBORG Foundation Inc. has published the 52nd printing of the English translation of Emanuel Swedenborg's "Heaven and Hell" as a $1 paperback.

While this book on the Christian concept of the life hereafter has been in demand for more than 200 years since it was first published in Latin in London in 1758, this marks the first time it has been adapted to the softcover, general bookstore distribution format.

The introduction is by Helen Keller, taken from her "My Religion."

GWYN GRIFFIN'S World War II novel, "An Operational Necessity," is the August selection of the Book-of-the-Month Club.



"SQUIRE DAVENPORT, I am not joking," orates the young hero. "I have here enough money to pay the mortgage." The Ralph D. Gardner drawing is from Holt, Rinehart and Winston's entry in the category of "camp," two Horatio Alger novels published in a single volume under the title of "Strive and Succeed." The stories are "The Store Boy or The Fortunes of Ben Barclay," from which the classic melodramatic scene above is taken, and "Julius or The Street Boy Out West." Says S. N. Behrman in his introduction: "They savor, so nostalgically, of verdancy." And he quotes Ernest Sutherland Bates as stating that the Alger books "have left a stronger mark upon the American character than the works of many a greater writer." But it's a long ways from Alger's lads to today's "love generation." The latter is often unkempt, rebellious and indolent. The former were clean-living, hard-working, reliably conformist—and incredibly dull and sanctimonious. Somehow, we prefer the Hippies.

FOR CHILDREN

Some Lessons On Legacies Left Us By Black Africa

Publishers of books for children have been making a commendable effort of late to present books that emphasize that the Negro is not a rootless race sans heritage or cultural background.

Such a book is "The Africans Knew," written by Tillie S. Pine and Joseph Levine, illustrated by Ann Grifalconi, published by McGraw-Hill and priced at $3.50.

The book is three-faceted. On left hand pages, some skill or art form developed by the early Africans — bronze-casting, irrigation, music-making, fire-starting, etc. — is depicted. On the facing page, the authors then demonstrate how today's industrial society continues to make use of those same basic principles. And then, for the young reader, there is suggested an experiment which he can perform that will enhance his understanding of this particular legacy from ancient Africa.

Miss Grifalconi's artwork is dramatic, divided between color pictures featuring bright reds and yellows, and strong black-and-white sketches.

Miss Pine and Levine are veterans of the field of science books for young readers. Their approach here is ingeniously different from the usual educational text. It may not be effective with all children. They have, perhaps, been overly optimistic in estimating their audience at 5 to 9-year-olds. About 7, we suspect, would be a better starting age for most youngsters. And the book will best achieve its objective when parents take the time to sit down with their offspring to underscore its lesson that the black race does, indeed, have a history on notable achievements and contributions to civilization. Certainly, it is an excellent choice for school library shelves.

GAME WITHOUT RULES by Michael Gilbert, Harper & Row, 243 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Donald G. Davis.

In "Game Without Rules," there actually are some rules; and the game is a good one—that is, in the reading. The rules are contained in three pages following the table of contents.

The rules are two men and a dog. The people are neighbors Samuel Behrens and Daniel Joseph Calder, both formerly of M16, a secret British government agency — both called upon from time to time to assist in nasty espionage cases. The dog is a Persian deerhound named Rasselas who has a way, too, of dealing with spies.

These are the rules. The game is this: read the first two or three chapters to get acquainted with Behrens, Calder, the dog and their friend Fortescue, then read any other chapter you like.

Each chapter is a jewel of a suspense story in itself.

But read the final chapter last. Reading it too soon may spoil it for you.

STEREO HI-FI

By C. J. Catania
Audio Engineer

In Marin we are finally enjoying our beautiful sunny weather. Truly Marvelous Marin!! To help you enjoy our lovely Summer and coming Fall, Electro-Voice has designed a portable extension speaker.

The Electro-Voice Sonocaster I is a bold departure from the usual form of outdoor speakers. Its molded housing is of a durable, crack-proof, scuff-defying material very much like the material used in air travel luggage. The portable speaker, in fact, looks just like a piece of air travel luggage. Despite its inherent toughness, its weatherproofing and its ability to withstand the elements, it is extremely light. The speaker has a sculptured design, carrying handle, molded feet and a locked-in steel gray color.

The loudspeaker element is an eight-inch unit with a dual cone to provide good high frequency response as well as low bass reproduction. All parts including the cone are weatherproof. The speaker has a generous magnet assembly and a rigid frame to withstand severe abuse.

The Sonocaster I is ideal for applications requiring a portable high fidelity speaker system. It is highly efficient and therefore may be used with low powered amplifiers and tiny transistor radios or phonographs to produce greatly increased volume and tone quality. Of course, it can be used to extend music from your Hi Fi or stereo console to the back yard or patio or swimming pool. During the winter months, it can be used in the family recreation room or other rooms of the house. For stereo, a pair of Sonocaster I's would provide excellent sound to the remote areas.

Installation of the speaker system is extremely simple. Merely plug it into the earphone output of the transistor radio or tape recorder. For connection to the home console, all that is necessary is one pair of wires from the console to the patio location. In fact, if a pair of wires were run to each room of the house where the portable speaker might be plugged in, music would be available throughout the home.

How much does all of this cost? Only $25.00!! Visit our stereo showrooms and hear the Sonocaster I. Pick it up—see its beauty and, of course, listen to the full range sound.

For permanent installation in the patio or under the eaves, the unit is equipped with two keyhole slots for quick and easy hanging.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

BACH: Art of the Fugue — Members of the Vienna Radio Orchestra and the Vienna Symphony Orchestra / Herbert Tachezi, harpsichord/Hermann Scherchen, conducting — Westminster Stereo SWT-237:

A number of new versions and arrangements of the complex and sketchy "Art of the Fugue" of Bach have come to the attention of music listeners lately.

Not long ago in San Francisco, a new version by Eric Vaughn was given in performance. The well-known German conductor Scherchen claims to have found internal evidence in Bach's own manuscript for the organization of the many fugues, counter fugues and canons in the scholarly work. He has also arranged it for a sizeable instrumental group.

Most performances in the past have been only for solo harpsichord. While this writer much prefers that version, this new release does have more variety of tonal color and the individual instruments can serve to point up certain fugal subjects which the single harpsichord could not always do.

Very good stereo sound.

MICHAEL HAYDN: Concerto in B Flat Major/JOSEPH HAYDN: Concerto in A Major (Melker) — Robert Gerle, violin/Vienna Radio Orchestra/Robert Zeller — Westminster Stereo WST-17106:

Joseph's younger brother wrote much worthwhile music, which has not received nearly the attention it deserves. This new LP will help in part, with a most enjoyable performance and recording of a newly discovered concerto dated 1760.

The Joseph Haydn concerto was discovered in 1949 at a monastery in Austria, and is a simple, early work with many interesting melodic ideas.

FERRUCCIO BUSONI: Seven Elegies (1907-08); Sonatinas Nos. 1 and 2 — Gunnar Johansen — Artist Direct Records 101:

This fine pianist has recorded a large library of LPs devoted to the complete keyboard works of Bach, Liszt and Busoni.

ROBERT FERRO has the role of Orsino in "Twelfth Night" in the 1967 Marin Shakespeare Festival, now under way in the new amphitheater at Forest Meadows, Dominican College, San Rafael.

The Bach LPs are performed variously upon harpsichord, piano, and double keyboard piano.

Busoni, heretofore sorely neglected by the recording companies, comes off as a significant influence upon 20th century music. In 1906 he published an important treatise which included a theory of a "third tone system." His piano works seem to carry on where Liszt left off, and also bear comparison to the lately-re-discovered Alkan.

The music on this LP bears repeated listening and study, which the excellent performances and clear, rich monophonic sound will encourage. Six other recordings make up the complete Busoni set, the finale three devoted primarily to the composer's many re-arrangements of Bach works. Record 104 contains the epic "Fantasia Contrappuntistica." The complete Liszt piano works set amounts to a dozen LPs.

All of these recordings are listed in the Schwann Catalog, cost $6 each, and may be ordered directly from Johansen at Blue Mounds, Wis., care of Artist Direct Records.

PORTRAIT

In one strange lucid moment,
frightening in its clarity,
I saw her as she really is,
devoid of all sincerity —
Glossed over the sweet sentiments, that never were her own —
She speaks of Love and Loyalty, and faith has never known;
The highest ideals spring from her lips,
though they're not hers to confide —
She's like a treasured old jewel box, with nothing but paste inside.

In Marin we are finally enjoying our beautiful sunny weather. Truly Marvelous Marin!! To help you enjoy our lovely Summer and coming Fall, Electro-Voice has designed a portable extension speaker.

The Electro-Voice Sonocaster I is a bold departure from the usual form of outdoor speakers. Its molded housing is of a durable, crack-proof, scuff-defying material very much like the material used in air travel luggage. The portable speaker, in fact, looks just like a piece of air travel luggage. Despite its inherent toughness, its weatherproofing and its ability to withstand the elements, it is extremely light. The speaker has a sculptured design, carrying handle, molded feet and a locked-in steel gray color.

The loudspeaker element is an eight-inch unit with a dual cone to provide good high frequency response as well as low bass reproduction. All parts including the cone are weatherproof. The speaker has a generous magnet assembly and a rigid frame to withstand severe abuse.

The Sonocaster I is ideal for applications requiring a portable high fidelity speaker system. It is highly efficient and therefore may be used with low powered amplifiers and tiny transistor radios or phonographs to produce greatly increased volume and tone quality. Of course, it can be used to extend music from your Hi Fi or stereo console to the back yard or patio or swimming pool. During the winter months, it can be used in the family recreation room or other rooms of the house. For stereo, a pair of Sonocaster I's would provide excellent sound to the remote areas.

Installation of the speaker system is extremely simple. Merely plug it into the earphone output of the transistor radio or tape recorder. For connection to the home console, all that is necessary is one pair of wires from the console to the patio location. In fact, if a pair of wires were run to each room of the house where the portable speaker might be plugged in, music would be available throughout the home.

How much does all of this cost? Only $25.00!! Visit our stereo showrooms and hear the Sonocaster I. Pick it up —see its beauty and, of course, listen to the full range sound.

For permanent installation in the patio or under the eaves, the unit is equipped with two keyhole slots for quick and easy hanging.

Set Aside One Plot of Flowers For Bouquets To Beautify Home

Garden Page

Every garden, no matter how small, should include a plot of flowers for cutting.

This need not be included in the general garden plan, but it easily can be. Any sunny bed, be it in the middle of the garden or behind the garage, will do very nicely. The primary aim is to gather enough bouquets to keep the house cheerful at all seasons.

RIGHT NOW, there are many cut flowers blooming and many gardeners who wish they had planted them weeks ago. If your garden lacks flowers for cutting, the California Association of Nurserymen has words of encouragement:

There's still time to plant your favorites and to enjoy their bloom this summer.

Zinnias and asters, those premier cut flowers, are to be found in nursery flats this month, and the sooner you put them in the ground the better. The same goes for dwarf dahlias, marigolds and petunias, the most prolific of all and often overlooked for its cutting qualities.

CHOOSE A sunny bed for these and work the soil thoroughly before setting the young plants out. There's nothing to encourage sturdy growth and better bloom like a deep, well-aerated root run.

You can improve on what you have, too, by adding compost and peat moss or bark products when you turn the soil.

A supplemental feeding goes a long way.

SOME GARDENERS like to work a small amount of commercial fertilizer into the soil below each plant when the plants are set out. Be sure there's some soil between fertilizer and plant roots, however.

An alternative to this is to scratch some food into the soil around each plant after it's well established.

For cutting these and other flowers you might already have started, here's a few simple rules:

Make a sharp cut; plunge the flower stems deeply in cold water immediately and wait a couple of hours before arranging them in bouquets. Strip the lower leaves that would be submerged in the vase of water. Change the water—daily for best keeping, or every other day.

You'll be surprised at how much longer your cut flowers last with these simple precautions.

MARIGOLDS are but one of many annuals that may still be planted for late summer color. Other possibilities include petunias, asters, zinnias and salvia.

A Wall Of Green Serves As A Screen And Windbreak

The use of hedging material to provide privacy, to screen out sights and sounds and to blunt prevailing winds is at once sensible and aesthetic.

Sensible because the cost is low when compared to the various construction materials; aesthetically pleasing because there is great pleasure in having a cool wall of green in your outdoor living room.

WE COULD add other benefits of the living wall: It does a better job of filtering sound, and as a windbreak, it offers better protection than all but the highest fence. A fence high enough to provide comparable wind protection could be unsightly.

Which are the best plant materials for screens in California?

Let's check the recommendations of the California Association of Nurserymen:

THE PITTOSPORUM family offers more than one possibility. From this group we would first choose Victorian Box, which may be sheared informally into a solid and beautiful high wall of green. The wavy leaves, fragrant spring flowers and later orange seed pods or berries mark this as one of the finest garden walls.

Italian Buckthorn with its glossy, dark green leaves and blue-black berries makes another outstanding screen. Like Victorian Box, it stands shearing well and will provide a solid backdrop to outdoor living A variegated form is also available with the leaves margined in creamy white.

Carolina Laurel Cherry is a handsome shrub made even more attractive by planting as a high hedge. A naturally upright shrub, it requires little pruning to control and seldom encroaches the living area.

A NEW variety, Bright 'n Tight, has earned a fine reputation since its introduction a couple years back.

Try also the Wax Leaf Privet, a superior shrub in every way; Brush Cherry, so handsome here near the coast; and English Laurel, especially good where space is plentiful enough to accommodate its full growth.

Any or all of these can enhance your outdoor living when properly used.

Peace Leads A Rose Poll

America's most popular rose is Peace, according to the recently completed American Rose Society's National Rose Survey.

Only those varieties available in America for more than five years were included in the poll. During the survey's 40-year history no rose has ever attained a perfect score of 10. The all time high of 9.6 was attained by Peace in 1953.

Queen Elizabeth rose, the All-America Award Winner introduced in 1953, moved from fifth to second place.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Try planting your favorite shrub in a tub for use on the patio or deck. Most shrubs grow well this way.
- Delphiniums that have bloomed once should be cut back to about six inches, then fertilized and watered on toward a second blooming period.
- Plant petunias in boxes, pots and tubs and let their color spill over the top for a striking effect.
- Prune out the old fruiting canes of blackberries as soon as the harvest is in. Train this year's growth up onto the the trellis.
- Many vegetables can still be planted for harvest this year: Snap beans, squash, chard and most root crops.

A Simple Screen To Shield The Yard

The Baffle Fence Will Do The Job While Decorating

A good privacy screen can be many things, depending on what's needed for a specific situation.

Frequently it means a tall, fairly solid fence. But sometimes only a simple baffle will do a big job.

THIS IS THE place to put a free-standing baffle.

When designed properly and placed just so, it works as effectively as the tallest, toughest fence. The baffle, however, will look light and informal — more decorative than functional. Especially is this true when it's used as a support for a vine or an espaliered shrub or tree.

Any one of several patterns is good for a baffle. Vertical louvers always work well since they can be angled to block a view while leaving an open feeling.

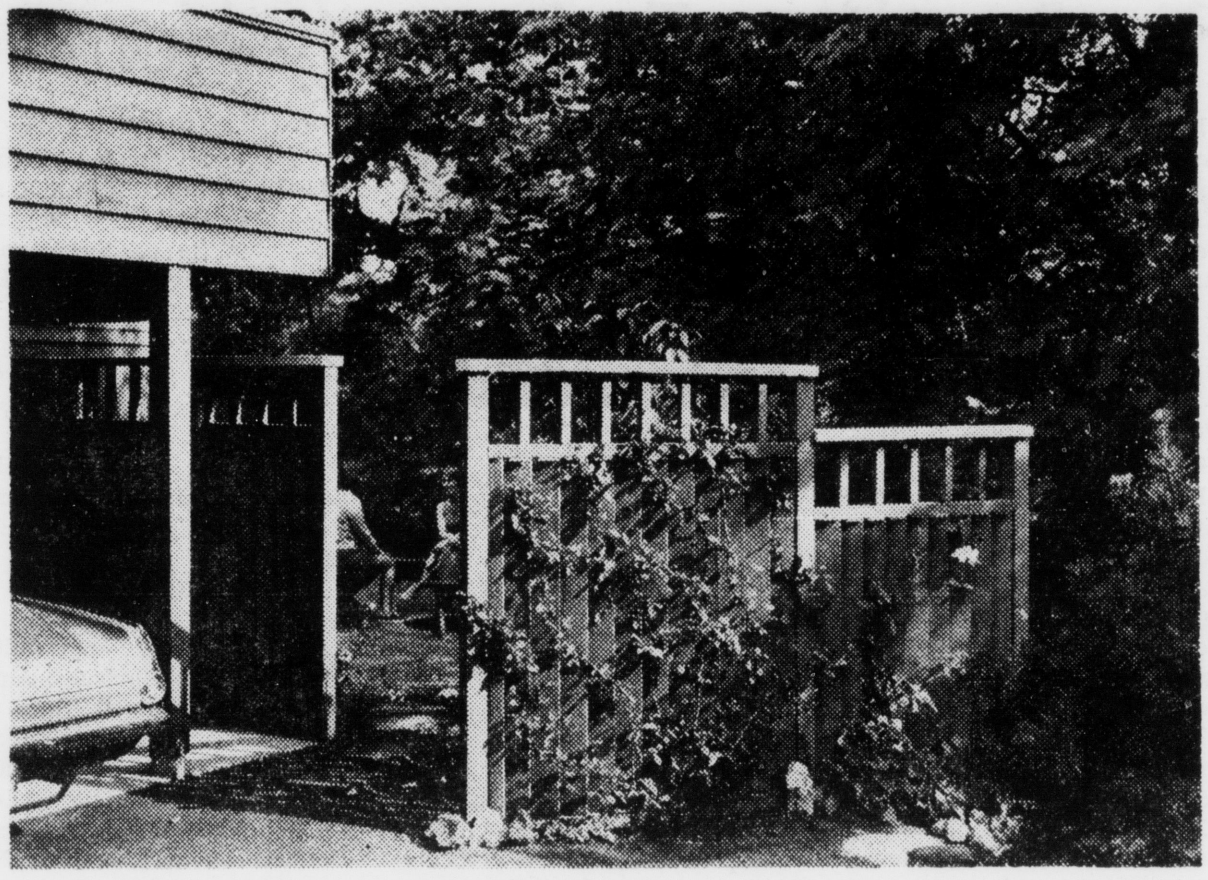
GENERALLY A baffle needs to be six feet high or more to do the best screening job. Its width depends on the space to be filled. A walk-through area must be left, but the rest of the space should be covered, at least visually.

Setting it on a diagonal line to the driveway's edge is often good, since an angled screen can block a greater area than its actual width. Angling it also can provide a wider passageway without loss of privacy.

Building a free-standing baffle is much like building a fence. Posts, usually red cedar four-by-fours, are the main supports. They should be set on poured concrete footings, with the post butts held a bit above the footings by strap irons. The strap irons are imbedded in the concrete, although the post is not.

THAT TECHNIQUE avoids any prolonged contact of wood with moisture.

Rails for the baffles should be two-by-fours toe-nailed between the posts. The louvers are one-by-six-inch boards set at a 45-degree angle between rails.



THIS BACKYARD retains its privacy, thanks to a simply designed louvered screen set at the driveway's edge. The screen was built with cedar four-by-four posts nailed into strap irons imbedded in concrete footings. Rails are two-by-fours, louvers are rough cedar one-by-sixes set at a 45-degree angle. (Photo courtesy of Western Wood Products Association)

Exact space of the louver boards is easiest to achieve with spacer blocks or with grooves cut into the rails.

When the baffle is to be 10 feet wide or more, it looks best divided into two sections of equal width, with one stepped a foot lower than the other. The effect is softer since a straight line at the top is broken.

IT'S GOOD, also, to build the louvered section to a five or six-foot height, then to add a one-foot-high crown on top using an open pattern of widely spaced two-by-twos. Despite over-all height of the baffle, the crown tends to make the screen appear more airy and open.

Again to keep the touch as natural as possible, use rough cedar for posts, rails and louver boards.

Care Of The Yard While You Are Gone

During the coming weeks many of you will be going off on vacation and leaving your gardens untended or in the care of someone else.

If you are planning to leave for only a week, chances are you'll need no special help. Thoroughly soaking the garden will carry it through your week's absence unless you have a quantity of tubbed and potted plant material. These will need watering on the same schedule you regularly follow.

YOU CAN MAKE the job easy for a neighborhood boy if you move all the pots and tubs into one area and position a sprinkler where it will cover when he simply turns it on.

You'll be less concerned about the garden back home if you've also mulched around moisture loving shrubs such as camellias, fuchsias and azaleas. Use a thick layer of peat moss or bark for the mulch and make sure its sopping wet when you head for the hills.

And hold off fertilizing plants just prior to a vacation. You don't want new growth when there's not ready water to keep it from wilting.

IF YOUR VACATION is extended, make sure you leave a detailed list of instructions for the interim gardener. Walk the garden with him to make sure he understands what the instructions spell out.

Specify how long the sprinkler should run to do a thorough job. Over-soaking can start "brown patch" fungus when temperatures are high.

When you return from vacation — especially if you've left the garden untended — there are a few quick steps to follow to revive any garden, however sunburned it has become:

First mow the lawn. Even a neglected garden looks better with a trim lawn. Then start running the sprinklers.

YOU CAN REVERSE this procedure if you don't feel like pushing a mower for a day or two. Just don't postpone the watering.

Next, feed the lawn and the garden in general. Then pull the obvious weeds and lastly fill the obvious bare spots with some quick-color annuals like marigolds and petunias

In a week your garden will be looking better than it did before you started on vacation.

A Simple Screen To Shield The Yard

The Baffle Fence Will Do The Job While Decorating

A good privacy screen can be many things, depending on what's needed for a specific situation.

Frequently it means a tall, fairly solid fence. But sometimes only a simple baffle will do a big job.

For instance, there's often a problem where garage and driveway join the backyard. The gap between is usually small—yet big enough to open the yard to view from the driveway, sometimes even to the street if the angle is just right.

THIS IS THE place to put a free-standing baffle.

When designed properly and placed just so, it works as effectively as the tallest, toughest fence. The baffle, however, will look light and informal — more decorative than functional. Especially is this true when it's used as a support for a vine or an espaliered shrub or tree.

Any one of several patterns is good for a baffle. Vertical louvers always work well since they can be angled to block a view while leaving an open feeling.

GENERALLY A baffle needs to be six feet high or more to do the best screening job. Its width depends on the space to be filled. A walk-through area must be left, but the rest of the space should be covered, at least visually.

Setting it on a diagonal line to the driveway's edge is often good, since an angled screen can block a greater area than its actual width. Angling it also can provide a wider passageway without loss of privacy.

Building a free-standing baffle is much like building a fence. Posts, usually red cedar four-by-fours, are the main supports. They should be set on poured concrete footings, with the post butts held a bit above the footings by strap irons. The strap irons are imbedded in the concrete, although the post is not.

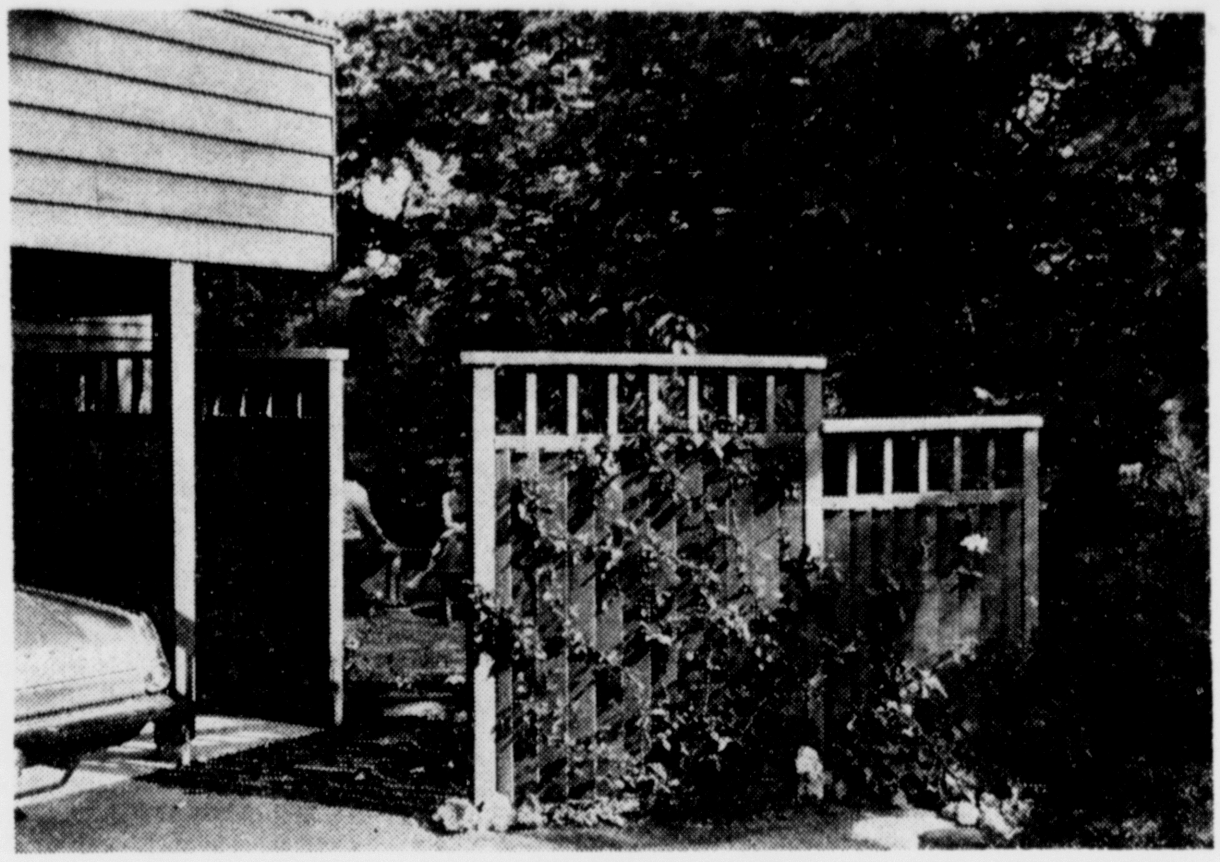
THAT TECHNIQUE avoids any prolonged contact of wood with moisture.

Rails for the baffles should be two-by-fours toe-nailed between the posts. The louvers are one-by-six-inch boards set at a 45-degree angle between rails. Exact space of the louver boards is easiest to achieve with spacer blocks or with grooves cut into the rails.

When the baffle is to be 10 feet wide or more, it looks best divided into two sections of equal width, with one stepped a foot lower than the other. The effect is softer since a straight line at the top is broken.

IT'S GOOD, also, to build the louvered section to a five or six-foot height, then to add a one-foot-high crown on top using an open pattern of widely spaced two-by-twos. Despite over-all height of the baffle, the crown tends to make the screen appear more airy and open.

Again to keep the touch as natural as possible, use rough cedar for posts, rails and louver boards.



THIS BACKYARD retains its privacy, thanks to a simply designed louvered screen set at the driveway's edge. The screen was built with cedar four-by-four posts nailed into strap irons imbedded in concrete footings. Rails are two-by-fours, louvers are rough cedar one-by-sixes set at a 45-degree angle. Paneling Revives A Tired Fireplace

If your fireplace wall has too many ins and outs—projecting mantel, recessed bookcase or curio cabinet, uninspiring chimney breast — why not flush it all up for a sleek, modern look?

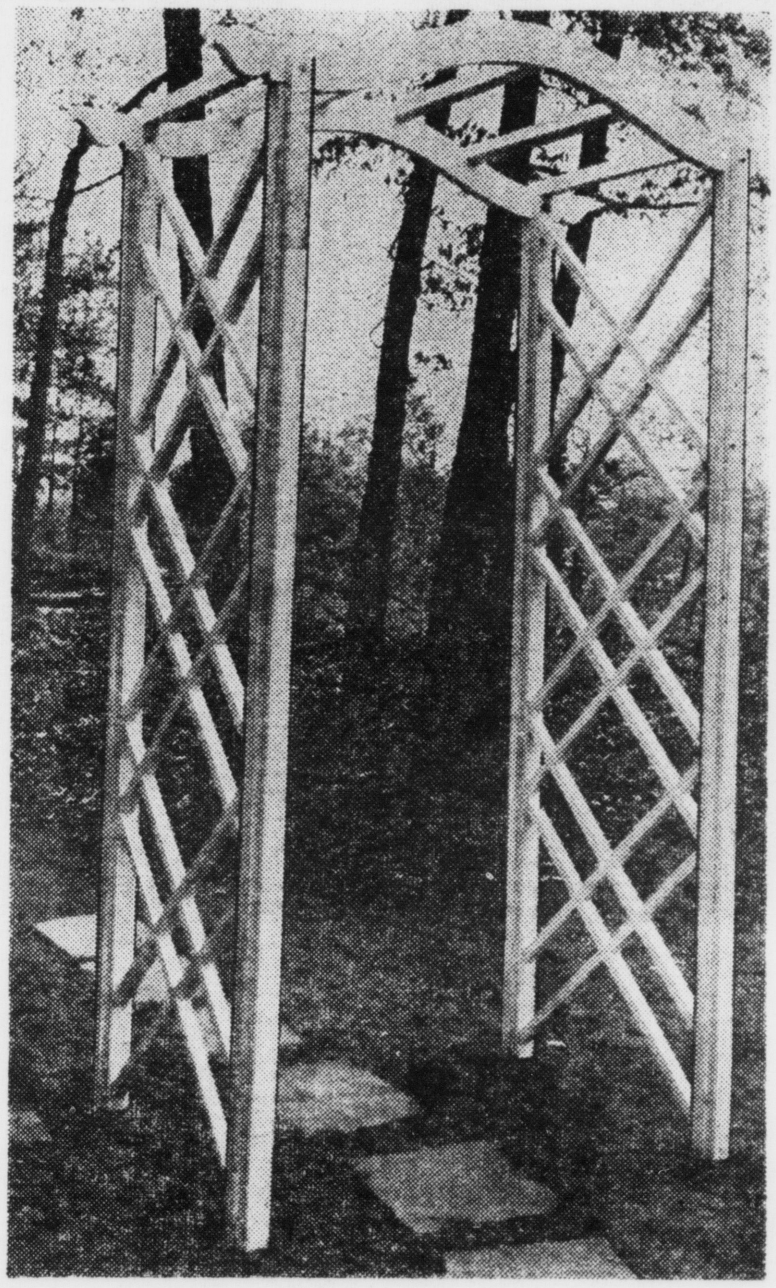
Paneling the wall is the easy way to do it.

Remove the mantel, then frame out the wall with horizontal furring strips. Just treat any recessed nooks and crannies as though they're solid wall, nailing to the framework around them. Install furring strips at the top and bottom of the wall and two more in between.

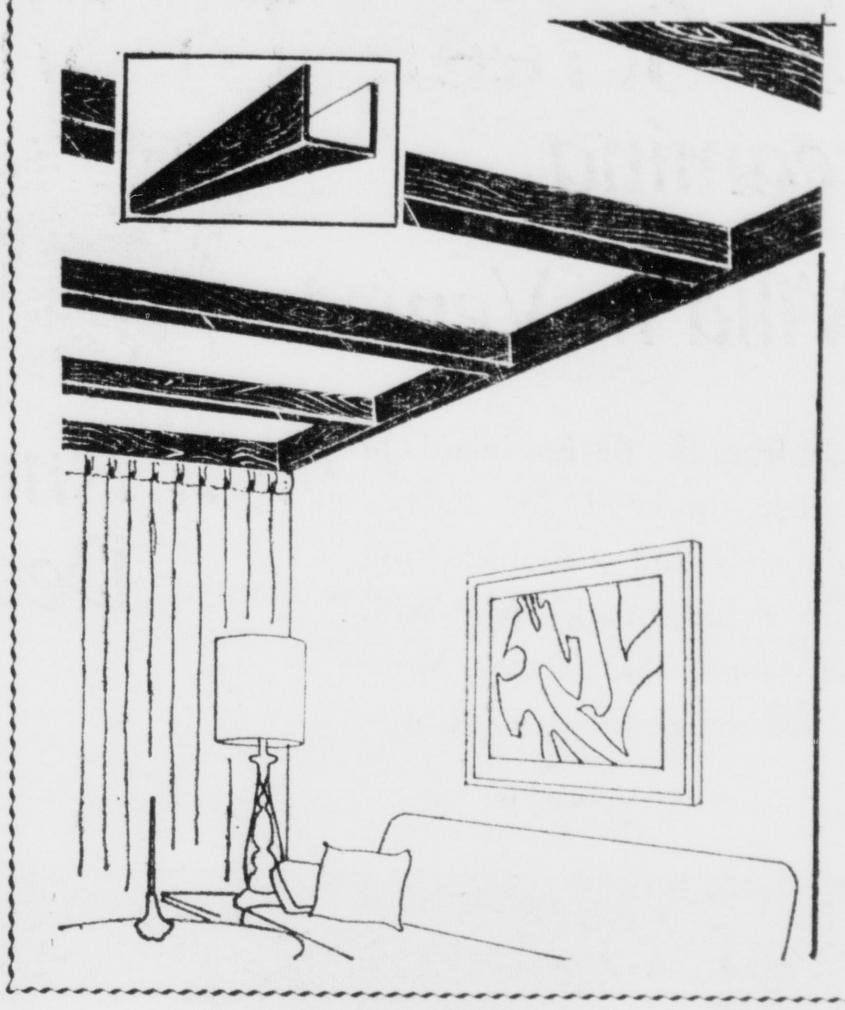
Then nail tongue-and-groove panel boards vertically over the wall, using ponderosa pine, sugar pine or western hemlock. Vertical grain hemlock flooring makes the sleekest wall of all, showing little joint pattern, but providing interesting variations in color from one board to the next.

Around the fireplace opening, use one-by-two-molding as a frame for the brick or marble facing, mitering the molding at the corners to make a snug fit against the edge of the paneling.

Finish the boards with a coat of sealer, followed by two or three coats of clear satin varnish and there you are — a new wall, a new look.



THIS HANDSOME trellis is easy to build, especially with the guidance of pattern and complete directions. Send 50 cents to Independent-Journal, Post Office Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., 10510, and ask for Garden Trellis Pattern No. 304. You can use the trellis to frame an outside door, as an entry to a fenced area, or as a free-standing arbor. It provides the perfect base for climbing roses, wisteria, honeysuckle or other climbing plants. Materials are readily available at lumber yards.



Bright Ideas

THE CHARM of an olde English inn can be brought into your home by beaming the ceilings. And the cost is only a few dollars a room. You use, not real wood beams, but hollow, vinyl - surfaced hardboard. You buy them flat, add glue to pre-cut grooves, fold into beam form and nail to furring strips on the ceiling. They can be installed on almost any surface and will blend marvelously with traditional or antique furniture. Buy the hardboard from your building supply dealer in 12, 14 or 16-foot lengths that fold to form a hollow beam four inches high by a bout three inches wide.

Why You Bleach Wood

The various types of special wood finishes preceded by the word "blond" nearly all begin with the same step: the application of a bleach to raw wood.

ASIDE FROM the objective of obtaining a so-called glamor effect, another purpose of bleaching is to remove dark patches in wood after a varnish remover has been used.

When the remover takes off most of the old finish, but leaves a few dark spots that do not yield to sandpapering, a bleach will do the job. The surface then will have a consistency of tone that will enable it to take whatever new finish is desired.

In some cases, wood is bleached to make it as light as possible, then deliberately stained so that it no longer is light. A particular example of this occurs in the finish called "amber walnut."

THE WOOD is bleached and then given a light application of amber stain before proceeding with any of the other finishing steps. The result is a pleasant tone that might have been difficult to achieve if the stain were applied directly to the raw wood without prior bleaching.

Since it takes strong chemicals to bleach wood, it is important that the bleach be handled with care (wear rubber gloves) and that the directions on the container be followed to the letter. Should the wood not be light enough, repeat the bleaching procedure.

In each case, the bleach residue must be washed away. Generally, this is done with lukewarm water and/or soap, but different manufacturers make different recommendations, depending on the ingredients in the mixture, so it is well to read and follow the instructions that apply to the brand you purchase.

Bleach has a tendency to raise the grain of the wood no matter how much sanding you did before the bleach was used. It is thus vital that there be additional sanding after the bleach has dried, using a padded block and a fine grade of sandpaper.

Critics Speak Out On Needs Of TV

By GENE HANDSAKER

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — What single thing can television do to improve itself most?

A visiting delegation of television editors and critics from U.S. newspapers offered some answers.

WADE MOSBY, Milwaukee Journal: "Find better stories. So many things are like what you saw yesterday."

Jennie Lea Bird, Baltimore News-American: "Bring back some of the dramas from earlier days. Studio One. Playhouse 90."

Millie Budd, Houston Post: "Get out of the merry-go-round, the follow-the-leader rut. Strike out on new paths."

JERRY COFFEY, Fort Worth Star-Telegram: "Get away from audience ratings as the judge of programming. Judge programs on a basis of quality."

Bob Tweedell, Denver Post: "Sure, the guy who's selling soap or toothpaste needs to reach a mass audience. But the man who sells Cadillacs, or even Chevies, doesn't have to reach all the kids."

Coffey: "Is it better to have an audience of 30 million with no buying power — or an audience of 10 million who can really do a sponsor some good?"

TURNER JORDAN, Birmingham News: "If there are three shows, with audiences of 30, 20 and 16 million, they kill the lowest-rated one. But what do you do about those 16 million viewers?"

Bevo Barker, Dallas News: "TV should forget the numbers completely. Find sponsors who are willing to go ahead whether they have 30 million or 16 million viewers. Bell Telephone and Xerox do."

Coffey: "A lot of sponsors who'd like to have better programs can't get air time. The networks don't want shows that will drag down the ratings."

HARRY HARRIS, Philadelphia Inquirer: "TV should do the things that creative people in the medium will take pride in. There are people of taste and ability who are not doing things they themselves would look at."

Bill Irvin, Chicago's American: "Give some shows more of a chance when they're on the borderline in ratings. People are unhappy when a show is taken off, especially when it's replaced with one that's worse."

Francis Murphy, Portland Oregonian: "One thing the networks are doing is putting on more specials. And there's a trend away from horrible situation comedies."

ELEANOR ROBERTS, Boston Traveler, said TV should "not presume we are morons, not aim completely at the juvenile set, should take a gamble once in a while and do a quality program." She agreed there are quality specials, but "I'm speaking of series."

Ann Hodges, Houston Chronicle: "Probably Fred Friendly is right when he says the best thing would be for the FCC to lift a couple of licenses. That might make some difference in a hurry."

TUNED-IN AMERICA

Music Dominates Radio Programming

A big 90 per cent of all radio programming today is music.

Well over half of it is beamed at teen-agers, although in big cities at least, the strictly-for-teens rock 'n' roll fare is balanced by FM schedules that stick to the classics.

THE MUSIC is heard on a total of 250 million radios, at least a fourth of them in cars, which makes America the most-tuned-in nation in the world, reports the National Association of Music Merchants.

TV is what transformed music into "the prime item of radio programming," the NAMM notes. It killed off radio soap opera about a decade ago, and the percentage of music on the air shot up sharply after that.

The U. S. has four out of every 10 radios in the world — and twice as many sets as the next four countries combined, the NAMM reports. They are Japan, Russia, England and West Germany.

U. S. teen-agers are the most tuned-in segment of the population. A total of 85 per cent of teen-agers listen to the radio every day compared to 70 per cent of the overall population.

TOTAL SALES of radios last year was in excess of 45 million units, compared to 12 million TV sets, seven million phonographs and four and a half million tape recorders.

"To most Americans music in its many, many forms ranging from folk and classic to rock 'n' roll and baroque is the most popular entertainment medium," the NAMM executive states. "American spending for music is higher than the rest of the world put together. Out of every $5 spend for recreation more than $1 goes for music and home entertainment."

One Program That's Different

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — When next season rolls around there will be the usual spotting of new Westerns, situation comedies, variety programs, action-adventure tales in the weekly television mix.

But, Jon Aarons insists, there will be a one-of-a-kind in his "Good Company" on ABC.

Aarons, co-producer of Edward R. Murrow's old "Person-to-Person," is putting together many ingredients of the old show and adding some new elements. He hopes the basic recipe will work again.

AT THE MOMENT, the set-up consists of Aarons, a staff of five, three mobile units and F. Lee Bailey, the young criminal lawyer who has exploded into the nation's headlines recently.

Bailey, shooting around in his private jet plane between courtroom appearances, will drop in on the famous, the interesting and the off-beat in their homes.

In the old days, before jet planes and television tape made it possible, Murrow was anchored in a New York studio and interviewed the subjects electronically in their homes. It was live, it was achieved with the help of big crews, fancy equipment and a lot of money.

"WE HOPE TO tape our shows Friday and run the shows the next Thursday — and leave all the fluffs in," Aarons said. "The perfection that television has achieved by cutting out anything untoward has resulted, I think, in the loss of a lot of its charm and excitement."

"I remember some wonderful moments that would have been cut out of tape," he said. "Maybe they were not wonderful at the time. But there was Bert Lahr so nervous that he invited us to see the living room — and walked into a closet.

"There was the night Sid Caesar was so jittery he forgot his wife's name. And the time Mrs. Pat Weaver's zipper, on the back of her dress, broke and Pat put his arm around her waist, pulled the dress together — and neither realized they were standing in front of a mirror."

AARONS IS working on his invitation list and already has acceptances from the acting Redgraves family and J. Paul Getty, the oil millionaire, plus other well-known people, whose names he prefers at this early stage to conceal.

Aarons believes that in recent years "television has lost one essential ingredient — intimacy." He hopes that "Good Company" may start people saying once again, "Hey, did you see that show last night?"

THE CARSON brothers — Johnny Carson, left, host of "The Tonight Show," and his brother Dick, director of the show — talk over the program's format during a rehearsal of the series which is colorcast Monday through Friday at 11:30 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

TV Set Owners' Club Proposed

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The man who was founding chairman of the Emmy-awarding Television Academy 21 years ago now has a new idea:

A "National Academy of Television Receiver Owners of America."

Syd Cassyd sees it as a service organization comparable to an automoible club. But instead of promoting better highways for motorists, it would, he says:

"TRY TO implement the laws of Congress that say television shall be in the public interest, convenience and necessity, and provide a viewers' voice directed toward sponsors and programming."

Cassyd, smiling, graying and 58, is a Hollywood trade-magazine writer who in 1950 was president of the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

In his cluttered office a block from Hollywood and Vine he argued: "Receiver manufacturers are organized, service technicians are organized, broadcasters are organized. Why shouldn't owners of the 55 million receivers be organized?

"THE QUESTION is, is the public getting the maximum benefit out of its investment of $200 to $1,000 in a set? How can it best express itself as to what it wants?

"Supposedly it is represented by the seven federal communications commissioners. But with 200,000 stations to police — shortwave, fire, police, airplane, ship, ham — the commissioners are overworked.

"And with 50 per cent of our senators and even our President having an interest in broadcasting, it has become private interest, not public."

IF THE 700 U. S. TV stations grossing two billion dollars a year were operated fully in public interest, convenience and necessity, Cassyd claimed, "there would be no need for educational TV channels. A broadcasting channel is no different in U. S. laws from the Grand Canyon or Yosemite National Park, which are operated for the public."

He sees the proposed set-owners' academy participating in FCC hearings on station license renewals and taking a Better Business Bureau approach to color-TV servicing.

"And why should we be locked into a 525-line-per-inch TV system? The French have 625 lines. Maybe 1,000 lines would be better."

AS FOR programming: "Thirteen thousand movie features have been on the air, some as many as 30 times a year. Is this in the public interest?"

Cassyd said his plan "does not presuppose broadcasters are not doing a wonderful job. But is it the maximum job?"

He said incorporation papers, with himself as one of four incorporators, will be filed in Washington.

THE COLORFUL and handsome George Armstrong Custer has long been a popular figure of American folklore. At top, dashing Errol Flynn played the role of the dashing soldier for the movies. Bottom, Wayne Maunder has been cast in the lead for "The Legend of Custer" series that debuts in September on American Broadcasting Co. network stations.
